

Dr. James C. Puffer's Talk on "Sports, Alcohol, Drugs"

Lynne D. Williams, medical school information
February 4, 1991

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Dr. James C. Puffer, chief of UCLA's Division of Family Medicine, and a Fellow of the American College of Sports Medicine, will present two lectures on the University of Nevada, Reno campus on Monday, February 11.

Dr. Puffer will address faculty, coaches and community medical professionals about "Addictive Behavior in Athletes Related to Use of Anabolic Steroids and Androgenic Agents." He will lecture from 11 a.m. to Noon in Manville Auditorium at the University of Nevada School of Medicine.

From 2 to 3 p.m., he will speak on "Sports, Alcohol and Drugs" in the Pine Room of Jot Travis Student Union.

Dr. Puffer was the head physician for the last Olympic Games and the World Games. Some of the issues he will address are: "Ritual Drinking by Athletes and Fans"; "Why Test Athletes?"; and "At What Price the Steroid Edge?"