FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Nell J. Redfield Foundation has made the largest cash grant in their history to the University of Nevada School of Medicine. The grant of $400,000 provided the final portion of funding needed to complete the building that will house the Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology and the university's Student Health Center.

This generous gift brings the foundation's total sponsorship of the project to more than $650,000 and represents a three-year quest for private gifts to build, furnish and equip the facility.

Long before the foundation was established, Mrs. Redfield contributed generously to the department and demonstrated an abiding interest in helping those who are hearing an language impaired, as well as in the general health and well being of students.
