FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Several staff members with Public Relations and Development at the University of Nevada School of Medicine have received awards for their publications and communications projects.

Lynne D. Williams, assistant director of public relations, and Kathleen A. Conaboy, director of public relations and development, won the Silver Spike Award for Synapse magazine from the Sierra Nevada Chapter of the Public Relations Society of America. They also won an Award of Merit for the magazine from the Silver State International Association of Business Communicators (IABC).

IABC also presented Williams with an Award of Excellence in feature writing, and Ann Diggins, community relations coordinator for medical school's Area Health Education Centers, earned an IABC Award of Merit for her project promoting CAMEL. CAMEL is the computer network that links rural physicians with physicians in Reno and Las Vegas.
