FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Pamela M. Ball, M.H.A., R.N., was recently nominated to the American College of Health Care Executives. Ball is the local administrator for the Medicaid Enrolled Health Plan of the University of Nevada School of Medicine in Las Vegas.

Having achieved nominee status, the first level of professional achievement in the organization, Ball will be required to demonstrate her educational preparation and commitment to the health care field through an extensive application process. Ball will then be able to achieve membership status after a period of continued professional development.

The 25,000-member American College of Health Care Executives, based in Chicago, is an international professional society that aims to enhance excellence in health care management by providing comprehensive programs in credentialing, self-assessment, education, career counseling, publications, research and public policy.
