Medical student works with local doctor

FALLON-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student begins working with Dr. Gregory Valentine this month.

Senior medical student Patrick Rask will begin a four-week stay with Dr. Valentine, a local family practice physician, Feb. 14.

Rask, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. He will work side-by-side with Dr. Valentine through March 11 to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
