Medical student works with local doctor

BOULDER CITY-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student begins working with Dr. Joseph Hardy this month.

Senior medical student Gregory Harbach begins a four-week stay with Dr. Hardy, a long-time local family practice physician, March 14.

Hardy, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. He will work side-by-side with Dr. Hardy through April 8 to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
