Medical student works with local doctor

FERNLEY--University of Nevada School of Medicine senior medical student Tania Kellermeyer will begin a four-week stay with Dr. Connie Antone-Knoll, a local family practice physician, March 14.

Kellermeyer, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. She will work side-by-side with Dr. Antone-Knoll to learn more about the practice of rural medicine through April 8.

The student's rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
