Medical student works with local doctor

GARDNERVILLE-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student begins working with Dr. David Hoskins this month.

Senior medical student Mitchell Meyers begins a four-week stay with Dr. Hoskins March 14. Meyers, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. He will work side-by-side with Dr. Hoskins through April 8 to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
