Medical students work with local doctors

BOULDER CITY--Two local physicians have been working with senior medical students from the University of Nevada School of Medicine this month.

Senior medical student Christine Barton concludes a four-week stay with Dr. Warren Smith, a local family practice physician, Aug. 26. Robert Whipple will also complete his rotation with Dr. Joseph Hardy.

Barton and Whipple, along with all fourth-year students, are required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. They have worked side-by-side with Drs. Smith and Hardy to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
