Medical student works with local doctor

FALLON-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student began working with Dr. Gregory Valentine this month.

Senior medical student Glen Biddulph began a four-week stay with Dr. Valentine, a local family practice physician, Sept. 26.

Biddulph along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. He will work side-by-side with Dr. Valentine to learn more about the practice of rural medicine through Oct. 21.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
