Medical student works with local doctor

INCLINE VILLAGE-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student began working with Dr. Johanna Koch this month.

Senior medical student Beverly Lynch began a four-week stay with Dr. Koch, a local family practice physician, Oct. 24.

Lynch, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. She will work side-by-side with Dr. Koch to learn more about the practice of rural medicine through Nov. 18.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
