Medical students work with local doctors

BOULDER CITY--Two local physicians began working with senior medical students from the University of Nevada School of Medicine this month.

Senior medical student Susan Hsu began a four-week stay with Dr. Herve Bezard, a local family practice physician, Oct. 24. Stephen Tsung also began his rotation with Dr. Joseph Hardy.

Hsu and Tsung, along with all fourth-year students, are required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. They have worked side-by-side with Drs. Bezard and Hardy to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
