Medical student works with local doctor

YERINGTON-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student began working with Dr. David Buster this month.

Senior medical student Eric Neal began a four-week stay with Dr. Buster, a local family practice physician, this month.

Neal, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. He will work side-by-side with Dr. Buster beginning Feb. 15 to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
