Medical students work with local doctors

BOULDER CITY--Two local physicians are currently working with senior medical students from the University of Nevada School of Medicine.

Senior medical student Robert Haag began a four-week stay with Dr. Joseph Hardy, a local family practice physician, this month. Audrie Soto also began her rotation with Dr. Herve Bezard in September.

Haag and Soto, along with all fourth-year students, are required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. They will work side-by-side with Drs. Hardy and Bezard to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
