Two students from Green Valley High School have been accepted into the University of Nevada School of Medicine Summer of Discovery Program. Maxime Lambert and Nichole Patterson are two of 34 students who will be attending the program this summer.

The program runs July 29 - Aug. 2 at School of Medicine Family Practice Clinic and the West Charleston campus of the Community College of Southern Nevada. It is designed to excite students about the world of science research and exploration. Students participate in research projects, attend discussion sessions, hands-on experiments and develop their own laboratory research project

Each student is competitively selected for the program after completing a rigorous application process. This program is funded by the Howard Hughes Medical Institute.
