Medical Students work with Local Doctors

INCLINE VILLAGE - A local physician is working with a senior medical student from the University of Nevada School of Medicine this month.

Senior medical student Christania Morganti will begin a four-week stay with Dr. Johanna Koch Sept. 23. She will complete her work Oct. 18 with Dr. Koch, a local family practice physician. Morganti, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada.

The student's rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center.
