Medical student works with local doctor

MINDEN-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student begins working with Dr. David Johnson this month.

Senior medical student Rose Ona is now completing a four-week stay with Dr. Johnson. Ona, along with all fourth-year students, is required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. She will work side-by-side with Dr. Johnson through Oct. 20 to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
