FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

On Friday, May 14, 1999, at 6:30 p.m., at the Pioneer Center for the Performing Arts, the 52 members of the School of Medicine Class of 1999 will receive their academic hoods, take the Hippocratic Oath, and become formally inducted into the medical profession. Graduates will be hooded by a person who has been important to his or her medical education.

Members of the Class of 1981 have joined together to pledge money for the inaugural Alumni Class Endowment. Presentation of the gift, now close to $200,000, will be made by Dr. Patrice Richardson at the Hooding Ceremony.

This year's class chose Dr. Kevin D. Murray, associate professor of surgery and chief of cardiothoracic surgery, to be their featured speaker. Dr. Murray is based at the School of Medicine's Las Vegas campus.

Before joining the Nevada faculty in 1997, Dr. Murray was a faculty member in the Division of Cardiothoracic surgery at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis and at Ohio State University in Columbus. He also served as director of lung cancer treatment at the Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Research Institute, also in Columbus.
