Medical student works with local doctor

PAHRUMP-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student is currently working with Dr. Dennis Campton.

Senior medical student Traci Grossman began a four-week stay with Dr. Campton, a local family practice physician, this month.

Grossman, along with all fourth-year students, are required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. She will work side-by-side with Dr. Campton to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
