Medical student works with local doctor

ELKO-- A University of Nevada School of Medicine student is currently working with Dr. Cal Lewis.

Senior medical student Eric Mattern began a four-week stay with Dr. Lewis, a long-time local family practice physician, this month.

Mattern, along with all fourth-year students, are required to complete a month-long stay with a family practice physician in rural Nevada. He will work side-by-side with Dr. Campton to learn more about the practice of rural medicine.

The students' rural rotation is coordinated by the School of Medicine's Nevada Area Health Education Center program.
