Portraits which look like photographic negative images tinted in subdued watercolors, will soon be on display at the Manville Gallery, University of Nevada School of Medicine in Reno.

The people in the paintings are shown as you would see them in everyday life. But the semi-realistic way in which they are painted causes the observer to go beyond the first glance, to consider the nature of the relationships portrayed.

In fact, "Relationships and Interactions" is the title northern Nevada artist Kim Benesch has chosen for the exhibit, which will run from Feb. 4 through March 4 at the gallery.

The artist will discuss her work from 4:30 - 5:00 p.m., followed by an opening reception from 5:00 - 7:00 p.m., on Feb. 4. The public is invited to attend.

Ms. Benesch has exhibited in a number of galleries in Reno and at the University of Nevada-Reno. She is currently a counselor and art teacher at Fernley High School, and also teaches watercolor classes at Truckee Meadows
