Sonoma-Gerlach and Paradise-Denio Management Framework Plan Amendment and Draft Environmental Impact Statement

Just as the sun was sinking, we resumed our journey and after descending a little hill we entered a country more forbidding and repulsive than even that I have described. There we occasionally saw a stray and solitary bush of artemisia. It was a country which had nothing of a redeeming character. Nothing presented itself to the eye, but a broad expanse of a dead level plain, which conveyed to the mind the idea that it had been the muddy sandy bottom of a former lake. —J. Quinn Thornton, 1846
