

New Haven, Sept. 10, 1866.

My Dear Sister Nellie:—

I have only a few minutes to write and can do little more than tell you how we are getting on and how much we desire to hear from you. Your note reached me from Aspinwall and we were surprised as well as sorry to learn of your sea sickness but hope you have by this time got repaid for all your trouble by abundant happiness.

The baby grows finely and improves rapidly in intelligence and looks. I suppose you have received his picture that I sent some time ago. I have taken another lately that I will send soon. Our nurse left us a week ago and we are now alone, but get along first rate, for the baby is very good and as little trouble as he knows how to be. Flora has not regained her strength so rapidly as we hoped, though continually improving, but within a few days she has improved very much. She and the baby go out to ride often, and I devote most of my time now "to my family."

Hoping soon to hear all about your travels & experiences I must bid you good bye. Flora sends her love.

My best regards to "Harry".

Truly yours
A. E. Verrell
