Black Cat.

Down at the Black Cat on Montserrat. It they really have a large, big black cat. He's very much alike.

The door was open and a big yellow strange cat walked in. The home cat resented it and with ^{low} growls & snarls they walked cautiously toward one another. ^{fur & tails brushing.} Warning "skit" - "scat" from the San tender went unheeded.

They continued to advance until, ^{at} the distance 2/2 of one final spring separated them.

(Personally I sort of wished the bar-tender would let them "go to it") but he took a seltzer water bottle, leaned over the bar and aimed it at the stray "Tom". The charge was a direct hit, right in + across the face of the intruder; also a good portion went on the floor. Tommy wheeled + started for the door. "stealed" isn't correct, because

3.) he couldn't get started. The pool of seltzer on the already slick linoleum made a regular ice rink out of where Tommy tried to take off. Tommy couldn't get traction!
He simply couldn't get going. 9/1/64 Man saw a trained, or untrained cat trying to keep up with a tread-mill, Tommy resembled him. Then he put on more steam! He humped his back & tried to dig in his claws - no work. Poor Tommy

4) must have thought there was plenty of roofs and it was all over his run-way.
His snarls gave way to lusty yowls and the amazed, pained, expression on Tom's face was something to behold. It probably was the first time his claws had ever failed him. He simply couldn't understand it.

But the amount of friction Tom was

Dear Mother San Juan seek with a O Teller very best work.

after Billy Bushnell became top on Broadway, as the best trap drummer in the next band in the country, he liked to admit that his real name was Bush.

when Billy's own duties at entertainers were over about 1 in the morning - he with other found entertainers in Bohemian spots, Billy revelled in just being natural & letting down his hair.

~~To admiring friends & hangars on Billy got no such~~ Over drinks & surrounded by friends & "hangars" who always admired a good singer, Billy finally got so close to his mother & dad on the idea that Billy should take music lessons.

Tears of rage rolled down Billy's cheeks when his folks told him he had to take lessons.

"All day kids at school & loaf - they'll say I'm a mussy - varied Bill.

~~Get run away fast~~

"Get the switch out of Dincep."

~~Get run away fast!~~

"My mother switched a light said Bill's dad & you want run away with it."

But Professor Valentini had been around to see most of the acts individual instruction began ~~and~~ It went long until the prof. had them all getting on their feet at the school and down with a command band, opposition began to disappear and one of those so called miracles happened. The prof. found himself in possession of a school band. at least it qualified as such in town.

It went on through grammar school & high school. It became almost as much a part of the town as the court house.

Then morning pictures came to town. Then talkies - or the "out-lands" as they called them.

Someday a big drummer in one of the out-lands caught Billy's fancy and either unwinded or unrolled some rhythm in the adjacent city, than anyone would have been behind bottle, with his hands in be almost nightly but the same old function he was discovered.

Once in a while Billy clabrated a little, but usually his recital was the same, unless of the drums with dragging a kettle & some body would say - "Billy tell em about ^{the drum} - you remember - - Billy would rise to the occasion."

The facts were that Billy was born ^{in a small town} in a small town - went summer with in the hills on the edge of town, played hockey for school, kicked like a mule when a music teacher came to town & parents on the town of music loves company. It was found after night's later of the school and town. Billy played kian - studied colons, painted faces, playing notes assembled. To hear the one man band in the form of prof Valentis.

Piano-claret, flute. The professor could play them all. What he did not have he assumed the parents he knew or could get. The drums - all the drums. They came last - how he performed. Because they came last & Billy was lucky that other parents would enjoy for their own daughters to have the other instruments.
Billy felt squared up for the drums.
Almost before anyone realized it instruments arrived.

feet. his elbows, palms of his hands & his fingers tips. Bill beat his system to drums hummed or whistled through his teeth, in the absence of the school band. Time after time Bill was heard to play after school for ^{the} his maddening to tapping of feet in our hand and his fingers of the other hand beating out measures that whistled through him. When the school teacher took his pencil away from him he used both hands.

When Bill had finished playing school, high school in his own words. Then he was so well known as a top drummer it was no wonder

Ah. A crowd. I took heart. Yes, THAT was the post office.

"Get ready" I said to myself. I got ready, but for what? Perfectly normal looking people pushed regular automobiles + others walked in, looked through the lath glass in the box, turned the little dial, opened ~~the box~~ ^{the door} took out their mail.

Still others stood in line to get stamps, request letters or get packages. More stood at the right desks, and even as you and I tried to write with a post office pen and find a blotter that would blot.

San Francisco, Calif.
December 23, 1947.

Hon. William H. McCarthy, Postmaster
San Francisco, California

Dear Sir,

I am one of the hundreds of "extra" Christmas workers at the Rincon office (and liking it).

I have a confession to make to you Sir. With hundreds of others I took the oath at the Seventh Street office. This is to advise you that I have violated a portion of that oath. (Perhaps I should say one of the rules).

There came to the station where I was sorting thousands of letters an envelope addressed to Sanda Klas, at some address on Mission Street. It was written in pencil, and laboriously scrawled over almost the entire envelope. It had no stamp and bore no return address.

As you know, there is a pigeonhole labeled "Nixies" for such things. I didn't want it to go in "nixies" Mr. McCarthy. I had no stamps on my person at the time, so I hid it. Tell you where I put it. You know those heavy strips of paper covering the ledges in front of the pigeonholes where we put the letters? Well, at my station the paper was well worn and torn. I slid the envelope under it. No, I didn't take it out of the building with me, or even in my pocket. That would have been too much of a violation. That night on my lunch hour I went down stairs and brought it back up. I retrieved the envelope and put it in the "Nixies" pigeonhole.

Some times things ^{mentally} hang about on trees ripen into ^{something} ~~fine~~ ^{fine} things than fruit. Why not let it be so with some of your writings and go out and gather them?

- Musings -

I recall a chat with a kindly publisher whose advice was sought by one who desired to become a columnist.

Said this friendly man "a columnist's task is a most difficult one"

Pressed further he said, "It is hard to hold a reader's interest over a long period of time. There will be times, when ideas will not present themselves!!"

O wise man! Had I but heeded your sagacious advice!

Several attempts were offered and later he said "Passable thus far, but my Editor tells me he does not believe it can be kept up. I am inclined to agree with him."

Again I say "Oh wise man!!! So this is one of those days. Thoughts there ^{are} plenty, and as thoughts are measured, they seem to me to be worthy, but will not crystallize into words.

So, since my Muse deserts me, I can but continue with Musings—

There are waves far out in the ocean That never will break on the beach.
There are waves of human emotion That never find expression in speech.

Dear Rose - Galliard - Mellon Jr.

I am addressing you together, because it is together that you have always been, and are now. I know the love touches each alike.

To try to talk to or write to anyone in sorrow is always difficult. Words and sentences, however well meant seem so futile. At best they can give but brief respite or some small measure of comfort. If this be true, it is here that I hope to have said them, but surely wish it could be more. Beyond this - limit - and a Hyperbore was carried on.

I am deeply conscious of the kind of husband, the kind of father and the kind of man, we all knew well to.

As I'm re-reading my last sentence I see I have used the word "kind" - often, but not often enough. In another sense the word "kind" - for indeed he was that - and "kindness" seem to be perfectly his nature and his gift, with some ^{renewed} ^{love} ^{to} ^{me} ^{and} ^{my} ^{children}. I shall
