Forward

In 1899, an important tradition of recording the University's history began. A couple of passionate Nevada students created the Artemisia that would develop into over 100 years of documenting campus history. Through two world wars, 108 ASUN Presidents, and the creation of the internet, the Artemisia carried on, until a lack of funding for student publications hit from the recession in 2008. This requisite document has become a lost art and tradition of the University. Pictures and information of our institution can be easily found online or on social media today; however, this can neither relate nor complete the story of this publication. Artemisia transitioned into what is now today, Insight Magazine, which includes student stories as a modern form of media. This Artemisia volume sets to inspire readers to look back on the stories of nearly 150 years and to appreciate the shared history among past generations of Nevada students. The hope is that the Artemisia is supported in future years to remember and appreciate the successes, defeats, and ambitions of our beloved University of Nevada, Reno. We look back in fondness and an equal amount of pride for the future.

The history documented in the Artemisia compliments the advancements made on our campus. We have transformed from a cow college in an untraditional setting for higher education, into the greatest institution in the world. Larry Struve, 1964 Nevada graduate and Nevada public servant, reflects on the importance of dedications to preserve records, and still references his copy of the Artemisia today. Former federal Senator, Nevada Governor, and ASUN President of 1959, Richard Bryan, took actions to preserve historical records in his many years in Nevada public service. In their actions to make documentation of history accessible, future generations may know how democracy responded to the needs of society, so that young people may be inspired by the practices and qualities of history's successful leaders. In that pursuit, we present this edition of the Artemisia: reviving tradition, making history.

Letter from the Editors

The Artemisia made its comeback after we fell in love with the University's history in discovering the recently digitized versions of the Artemisia. For Christmas in 2022, Brayden gifted me a real copy of the 1959 Artemisia, which was especially meaningful as that was the year my idol, Senator Richard Bryan, was the ASUN President. We were compelled to revive the publication after reading each volume editor's optimistic hope for the future of the book. We had many doubts when we shared that we would be learning Adobe software, creating an entire book in less than a month, and just us the two of us would be creating it. We spent a month of pure obsession to this project when we probably should have been more focused in our classes or applying for law school. The history of our state and enthusiastic Nevadans have kept us passionate and dedicated to this important project. After a car crash and black eye, illness, severe snow storms, many arguments and tears, hysterical laughs and late nights, our publication was complete! This book is only the beginning of reviving and embracing the University's rich history. The style of this volume is inspired by one of our favorite Artemisia editions in the 1920s. All copies of the Artemisia can be found in the Mathewson-IGT Knowledge Center Special Collections or can be found digitized by a quick online search. With the 150th birthday of the University launching next year, we encourage the community to reflect on the timeless history of our land grant institution. This edition holds a collection of photos and information as a year in review from 2022 to 2023, but the bigger goal of restarting the Artemisia is to inspire readers to reflect on the unique history of the University of Nevada, Reno.

Love,

Dionne Stanfill and Brayden Taeubel

O, Sweet Nevada

*This piece of country carries many a name
Sagebrush and silver bring her some fame
She's shy, she's big, she's got a weird shape
110,000 square miles of pure dry landscape
Even your faults give us something to do
Plus, I look pretty good in Nevada blue
Nevada is All for our Country, Battle Born, the Silver State
The Sierras, Great Basin, and Lamoille is great
Maybe no water, but Lake Tahoe is clean
Golden sunset of art, the most beautiful scene
Blue birds, big horns, wild horses, and white tail
Desert tortoise, sage grouse, lots of cattle, and quail
Aliens, burning men, and the Hoover Dam
Best education in the world- any UNR Program
But the best part is the people, my icons, and friends
Nevadans are forever the connection never ends
Nevada is big, Nevada is humble, and Nevada strong
It's the place where I confidently say I belong
O, sweet Nevada, you go by many names
But you are home to me and that will never change.*

Artemisia

Greetings, Nevada Wolf Pack!

Congratulations on another successful year, and congratulations on the publication of this year's Artemisia. In my first few weeks as governor, I had the opportunity to come tour campus with President Brian Sandoval. I was deeply impressed with your infectious school pride and welcoming spirit – thank you for making my first to campus so special.

Something you may have heard me talk about is The Nevada Way, which is the idea that we, as Nevadans, never give up, never give in, and never stop dreaming. You, as students at the University of Nevada, Reno, are incredibly important part of The Nevada Way.

As some of our best and brightest students, you represent the hopeful and tenacious spirit of our state. As our state's future leaders, you also have a responsibility to continue to live out the ideals of The Nevada Way, just as generations of Nevada students have done before you.

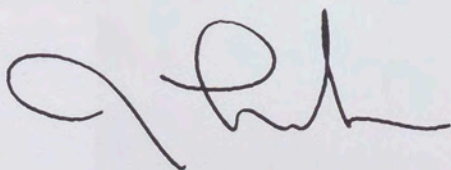

As I've said before, I believe the best of our history lies before us. I'm confident in that because I've seen the innovation and excellence that young Nevadans, like you, are bringing to our communities and our state every day.

In your academic pursuits and personal endeavors, I hope you'll continue to join me in never giving up and always dreaming big. Together, we'll ensure that The Nevada Way continues for generations to come.

I hope to have the opportunity to visit with you on campus again soon.

Go Pack!

Sincerely,

Joe Lombardo

Artemisia

Dear Wolf Pack Family,

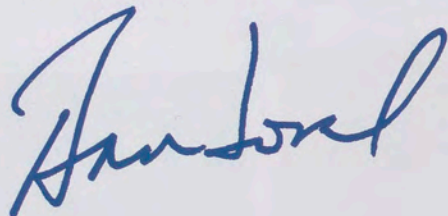

I am beyond honored to share some thoughts with you as we welcome a University mainstay – the Artemisia yearbook – back to publication. The Artemisia has proven to be an enduring mirror into the life of our University throughout its long and distinguished history. It has chronicled our triumphs, our celebrations, and campus traditions, as well as moments when we have shared tears and times when our campus has come together with uncommon resiliency for the common good. Our Artemisia, more than anything else, presents an unchanging snapshot of what our University was like over the course of an entire academic year. In this age of 15-second TikToks, there is something comforting in knowing that years and years from now, future students will look at this year's Artemisia and get a good idea of what our campus life was all about.

And the life of our campus has been rather extraordinary over this past year. Throughout my visits across campus, I have been so impressed with how much our student body has involved itself with our community. Our students are of a generation where giving back, and looking out for others, is part of their DNA. This gives me such optimism for our future. Granted, there are important challenges that face our world today. But I have no doubt that the students of our University possess rare abilities and talents that will change our world for the better. Our students today are providing Nevada's pathway to the future. You can see this through all of the pages of past Artemisias. And you can certainly see this in the pages of this year's edition.

I can remember when I was a student here on our campus. It was a very big deal to have your photo, or to be in a photo with others, that was featured in the Artemisia. It was a reminder that the world was beginning to take notice of who we were as students. I hope that you feel this same sort of excitement as you look at this year's edition. Since 1899, the Artemisia has provided a glimpse into the heart of who we are – a proud, always energetic place where dreams do come true. May the Artemisia live on for years to come.

Go Pack!

Sincere regards,

Brian Sandoval

BACK IN TIME... ARTEMISIA 1924

2023

BACK IN TIME... ARTEMISIA 1924
OUR UNIVERSITY— MAY IT LIVE FOREVER!

* * *

THE University's first fifty years! And what a fifty years for man! Fifty years of magic in business and of miracle in science! Space defied by telephone, wireless, automobile and aeroplane! Time defied by steel structures and perfected power machinery! Pain conquered by anaesthetics and plague by sanitation and by serum! The unheard become audible, the unseen visible, the uncountable numbered and the unmeasurable fathomed! Matter itself challenged in its last electron lair!

Explorers, victors over farthest north and farthest south, annexers of the last island, climbers nearing the summit of the highest peak! Deciphered tablets, unearthed cities and unsealed tombs trebling the years of history! Timeless strata, with prehistoric Yoricks lengthening the human story to half a million years!

Fifty years so changeful that Tutankhamen would have less difficulty to get his mental and material bearings in the world of 1874 than would the man of 1874 to adjust to the mechanics and the thought of 1924!

Yet, great as have been the achievements of this half century of marvels, greater must follow. Much is to learn and much to do before man shall make conquest in the true human levels, the social and the spiritual worlds. Who has laid the Malthusian ghost? Who has resolved the clash of nationality or the riddle of race? Who has shown Democracy how to widen leisure without enlarging the Devil's workshop or how to develop and to avail itself of great leadership rather than to remain at the dull levels of mediocrity or to sink through ostracism? Who has pointed the way to a world of peace, without softened thews and regnant sentimentalism or to a world of plenty, without hucksters at the helm and blind idlers in the lookout?

To realize the highest potentials of every man and woman in all the world is the great goal. Men cannot become more like gods merely by heaping banquet-boards, by multiplying garments, by running to and fro on longer journeys or by widening the range of gossip. These things mark men as luxuriating animals only. If the race is truly to grow, to increase in soul stature, better ways must be found to lessen uncleanness, greed, selfishness and pride and to widen cleanness, charity, comradeship and reverence. Constructive search after truth, creation and appreciation of beauty, perfecting of will to serve, development of humility, tolerance and spiritual vision — these are of the upper air in which alone souls breathe.

For fifty years our University has been an upland of truth, a temple of beauty, a shrine from which men and women have gone with shining faces to serve their day. May the heroisms of this, its morning half century, the heroisms of pioneering builders and of alumni, that first eight hundred, scattered, laboring in all lands, inspire us and myriads after us throughout its everlasting day! May an endless company of men and women, their torches lighted at the broadening altars on this hill, go forth as light bearers for the race to bring nearer and nearer the day when all the earth shall be radiant in the glory of the light that never was on land or sea!

— UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT Walter E. Clark.

I am Nevada;

*Risen from a silver rush and state battle born,
Sagebrush scatters my plains that are grazed by bighorn;
Humboldt, Ruby and Sierra mountains soar into the sky,
Las Vegas and Reno gamblers are always willing to give their luck a try.
My beauty lies beyond the surface in gold,
Since 1864, stories like no other are told;
Opportunities stretch far and wide across the land,
The University of Nevada makes education my brand.*

BACK IN TIME... ARTEMISIA 1928

THE UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA was founded at Elko in 1874 and moved to Reno in 1886. Since the erection of the first building at Reno, the growth of the institution has been consistent and rapid. Over one-half of the present Campus structures are visible from the Tram and lie mirrored in Manzanita Lake — an artificial body of water sustained the year around. The long building at the extreme left of the panorama sweep is Manzanita Hall, the women's old dormitory; and directly to the rear and merging into it is the dining hall. Farther to the right and partially screened by the low willow tree is Artemisia Hall, the women's new dormitory; while just to the left of the center at the head of the lake is Lincoln Hall, the men's dormitory. To the right of the fold and barely visible, are the Hospital and Education Buildings. Nearest the shore of the lake and in full view is the Agriculture Building, which hides part of the white sandstone Chemistry Building. Dwarfed by surrounding structures, a corner of the old Library is visible between the Chemistry Building and the Alice McManus Clark Memorial Library, the long structure extending nearly to the right extremity of the view.

Nevada, My Nevada

*Nevada, my Nevada, to thy colors we'll be true;
In the starlight lies thy Silver, in the Heavens vault thy Blue.
From the eastern fertile valleys, to the rock-bound western sky,
Our love burns strong Nevada, and its embers never die.*

*Nevada, my Nevada, thy praises we will sing,
Let the gray hewn mountains echo where our vibrant voices ring.
For the love the tree-lined campus, and its spirit staunch and true,
All the symbols that Cod gave thee, wrought in Silver and in Blue.
Our hearts are thine Nevada; our prayers to thee shall rise
Across the copper desert, where the painted sunset lies.
And the massive mountain ranges, where the silence calls to you
Shall stand a guard of glory, for the Silver and the Blue.*

Drop from mountain's crest,
And the meadows meet the sagebrush,

'Neath the western blue,
Stands our noble Alma Mater,

Prospects ev'ry place,
So Nevada seeks the future
With an upturned face.*

All that's good and true,

MACKAY SACRIFICE

A new tradition on campus has boomed in the last decade. Twice a year on every “dead day” or “prep day,” students place empty bottles of alcohol as a tribute to John Mackay for good luck on their finals. Some students will bring suit cases full of bottles, and it is said that the really desperate students will bring full bottles with the alcohol still in it. Easily thousands of bottles are sacrificed to Mackay every semester.

“The main purpose of Coffin & Keys is the betterment of the university. They recruit various leaders from groups on campus to form a unified voice which is used to call attention to the positive and negative issues at University of Nevada, Reno. More importantly, the members work together to instigate change where they feel change is necessary. Originally the members of Coffin & Keys were known, while the actions of the group were kept secret. But in 1962 Coffin & Keys was taken underground, and have maintained their anonymity since that time.”

— Bobby Boucher

FREMONT CANNON

The Fremont Cannon tradition started as a prank when a student from what would become the University of Nevada, Las Vegas attempted to steal the University of Nevada, Reno's cannon in 1966. This developed into the Battle for Nevada, a rivalry game played by the Nevada Wolf Pack football team and the UNLV Rebels football team.

UNDIE RUN

A fan favorite, this tradition includes showing up to the event fully clothed, taking off all of your clothes (maybe except your undergarments), and donating them to local charity organizations. In your underwear, students run across campus in a race and friendly walk. This year was also a body positivity event with a dance on the quad at the end.

When School is Out

*To meet the tasks of life that lie before,
The parting of classmates is sad.
When school days' work is o'er.
Now we must go. Let us be glad
To meet the tasks of life that lie before,
When school is out.
Our lessons past, now duty calls.
We'll go and work all day;
And working, learn of larger life,
That we shall find across the way.
When life's school is out.*

Silver and Blue

*Softly down the mom'ries of the years,
Truant winds bring back to us again
College friendships slowly, one by one,
From out the shadowed distance of the past;
Nevada U., Nevada U.,
Thy sturdy sons bow down to thee in prayer.
Oh, give us strength that we may win the fight
For the Silver and the Blue.*

*'Cross the sagebrush slowly sinks the sun,
Shadows steal beyond the campus trees;
The silent Quad fond memories recalls
Of student days when love and youth were one.
Nevada U., Nevada U.,
Our love for thee shall bind the wings of time
Oh, give us strength that we may bear on high
The Silver and the Blue.*

THE SPIRIT
OF THE CAMPUS

*“For never the work of life is done
By the man with the selfish dream;
For the battle is lost or the battle is won
By the spirit of the team.”*

By the spirit of the campus is our battle to be won.
Friendly — democratic — cooperative!

When each student is a friend to each of many others and widens the circle of friends as the years go —

When each student chooses campus mates for their straight-away strengths of manliness and womanliness and grows steadily more worthy of friendship through increasing directness and trueness and steadfastness of spirit, untainted by snobbery, unshackled by deceit, unsullied by dishonor —

When each student is of the campus and for the campus, intelligently and devotedly ready, as strength and skill and time may be given, to labor with others towards the better campus, material and spiritual —

Then will a high, a holy, a wondrous campus spirit prevail.

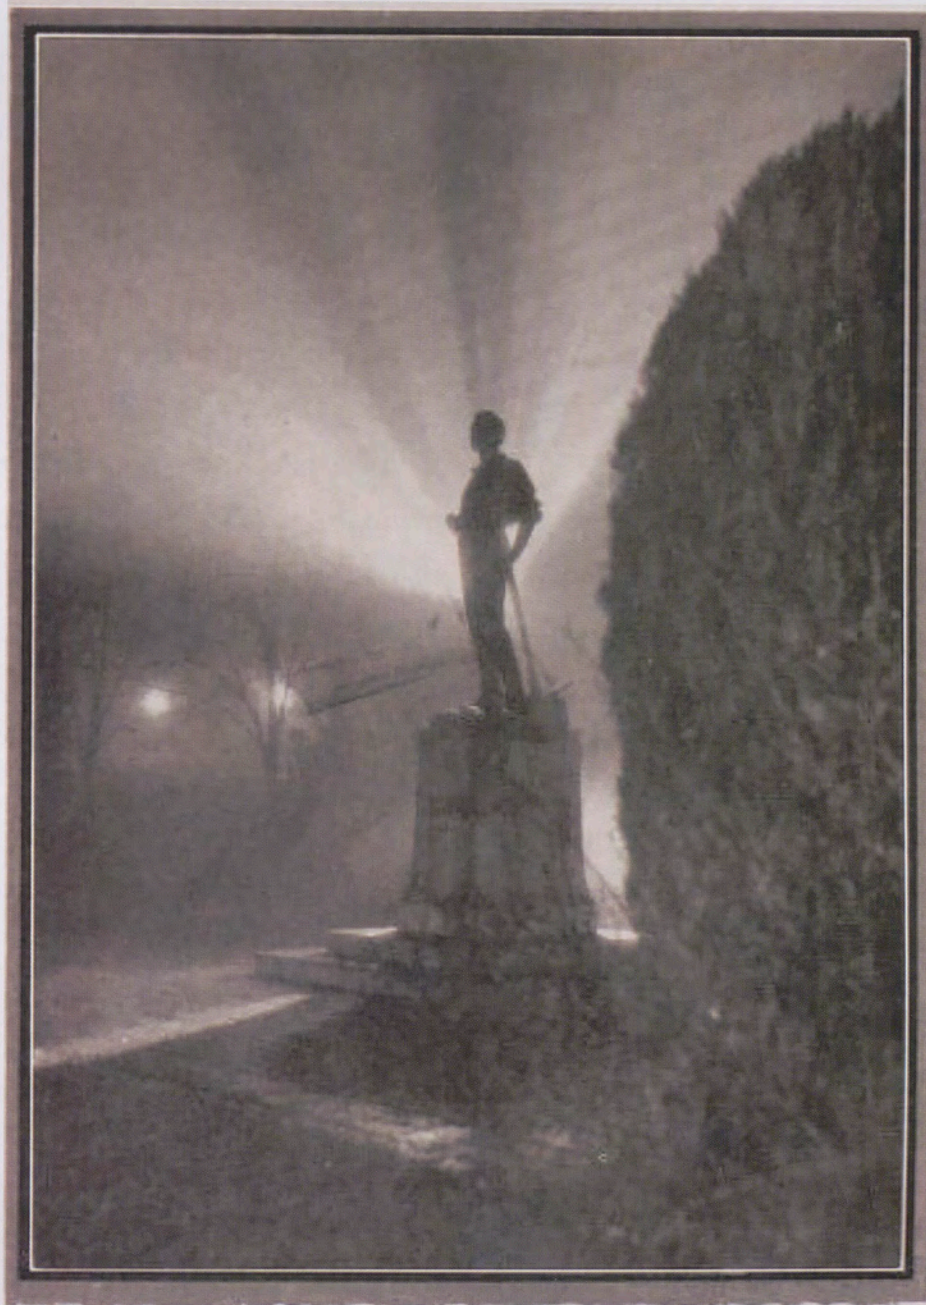

The new student will instantly sense this spirit; the older student will partake of it; the senior will have it ingrained; the graduate, nurtured through four years of common endeavor with friends and with equals, will enter upon the long life game, ready always, in friendly and in level spirit, to strive with others towards the greater goals of America and of mankind.

Rah-Rah Nevada

*Once there was a college which stood upon the hill
Where every maid was not afraid to cheer the heroes of the hill,
Who, while they strove for knowledge could fight for victory, too,
And thus defend on every hand, the silver and the blue.*

*On! Nevada, win that score today; we will back you ev'ry time.
See the team is pushing down the field, now steady they hold the line.
So on, Nevada, keep our colors high, while the hills send back the echo
— Rah rah, Rah-rah, Nevada ; Rah-rah, Nevada, we have won!*

*Berkley may be famous, and so may Stanford, too,
But when it comes to loyalty, Nevada's sons are ever true,
For still we love that college, which stands upon the hill;
Our football band plays every man for the silver and the blue.*

THE NEVADA SAGEBRUSH

Founded in 1893, The Nevada Sagebrush is the independent student news of the University of Nevada, Reno.

“The two biggest things we have accomplished this year is becoming fully staffed and the student media credit fee. We are aware of our important place on this campus as watchdogs and informers, but it can be difficult without being fully staffed, but that all changed as of recent. The student credit fee we are most proud and excited for. Sixty-seven cents per credit would help fund student media for a lifetime, and we helped put this into motion. Even if it does not pass, we are proud that we took this stance and informed people of the future of student media.”

“Insight Magazine is UNR’s student-run feature magazine, where pieces are written by students for students. We aspire to be honest and thought-provoking by storytelling through written articles, photography, and graphic design. Every semester, we produce an issue to encapsulate the trends of time as a way to faithfully convey the stories of our students and pay homage to our predecessor, Artemisia. As Insight Magazine continues to represent students across campus, we are committed to centralize the voices that are often under/misrepresented with authenticity and compassion.”

*R*ECORDS of the year, treasure chests of memories for the years to be — the publications. The Desert Wolf, the Sagebrush, the Artemisia — that we may laugh, may learn, may remember. The things happened, the typewriters clicked, the pens moved, the great press settled, and the school year nineteen thirty-one became history, duly chronicled, filed away with the bygone years of Nevada.

Who knows when we may dig back into the dust of an old trunk and bring forth some venerable record of hill doings, to aid us in creating happy dreams? Who knows what may come now, of what we say now?

Be it the aim of Nevada records to speak truth, to be the voice of the Nevada spirit, that the future may build on the present, and retrospection be mellow.
