WHAT IS A GOOD STUDENT.

RRACING the word student to the Latin verb studeo, from which it is derived, we find that the verb means, "be eager for, be devoted, pay attention to, be bent on, aim at," etc.

The present term student is usually applied to one who studies at a college or university; or to one who pursues advanced studies privately.

A good student should be untiring in his efforts to increase his store of knowledge. He will endeavor by all honorable means to accomplish any reasonable work upon which he enters.

He who is bent on achieving success in his studies will permit nothing to interfere with his duties.

One who is eager to learn will not confine himself solely to text books, nor to the instruction received in the class room, but will supplement and verify this information with what he obtains in daily intercourse with his fellow men and in observation of nature.

Although a student is one who works for the development and improvement of the mind, nevertheless a good student will not persist in this to the detriment of his health. How can a person be considered well balanced intellectually who, training the mind and neglecting the body, subjects himself to discomforts and dooms himself to physical weakness and an early death.

Since a student is one who aims to accomplish something, a good student will always aim high. In studying the lives of great men and women who have preceded him, he will recognize the good, wholesome qualities and try to incorporate them into his own character. The good student will not ape the eccentricities of renowned men. Because celebrated men possessed certain peculiarities, it is not to be inferred that whoever copies or already possesses them will also become great.

No matter how well one may recite in prescribed studies, if he indulges in drink, gambling, carousing, and disregards the common social and moral laws of decorum, I should not consider him a good student, for he is neither devoted to his work, nor has he lofty ideals. Above all things, a good student will exert himself to be a man. He will endeavor to so mould his habits and character by good lessons, self reliance, attentiveness, determination, and lofty ideals, that when his college days are ended, he will not go out from his Alma Mater with an unwieldy mass of knowledge, not as a book worm, nor as a professional athlete, but in the fullest sense of the word, a man, capable of assuming the responsibilities of life.

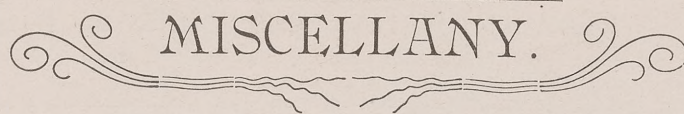

They who are enthusiastic in what they have undertaken, who are devoted in fulfilling their ideals, high aims, and who endeavor by sturdy perseverance to do their best whatever may befall, these persons, provided they are endowed with average intellectual ability, surely deserve the name, good students. T.

"Build up heroic lives, and all
Be like a sheathen sabre,
Ready to flash out at God's call,
O, chivalry of labor!
Triumph and toil are twins; and aye,
Joy suns the cloud of sorrow;
And 'tis the martyrdom today,
Brings victory to-morrow."

The University of Chicago gave its first Ph. D. to a Japanese student.—Ex.

MABEL STANAWAY, '95.

MUSIC MEANING IN LITERATURE.

MUSIC is a fundamental element in literature, and in poetry it is of the inner life. The maker of verse who forgets this is in danger and hard upon the rocks of disaster. In poetry music covers a multitude of sins, in proof whereof look at Swinburne in the past. He has written and is writing verse the meaning of which is not apparent at a first reading, possibly never; yet lulled and magnetized by the rhythm and song of the lines, an indescribable charm is experienced, and the senses thus won, put the intellect to sleep, so that it matters little or nothing to us what the stanzas mean or whether they mean anything. This of course, is abuse of music, for poetry should have thought in it also; but it is a remarkable illustration of the wonder-working of tunefulness in literature. Swinburne above all living poets, and this was true of him before Browning and Tennyson had gone, has a genius for metrical and musical effects. He is a "wunderkind" in this respect; his gift here is phenomenal, and consequently his lines stick in the memory and to hear his words read is to be affected somewhat as one is affected by the recurrent moanings of the sea, or the rhythmic sighing of the pine trees, nature's glamour of music making.

It is becoming rather fashionable among some of the younger poets to sacrifice music to strength, or to dramatic realism. Taking a hint from Browning they grow harsh, abrupt, or explosive, according to the subject-matter and the situation. But they will do well to bear Swinburne and Swinburne's triumph in mind, and to conclude that the singer who strays from the songfulness is off the main road, and running the risk of being lost to his true vocation.—Literary Week!y.

"What emancipation! Each day to take life as an unspotted gift from heaven, dropping everything that bound us to bitterness, repining, rebelling, pettiness,. Each night to complete a battle that left only victory; each man, conquered or conqueror, a friend. To pick up life each day knowing that differences have left no bitterness, victories no prisoners, meeting every opponent in fair and open field, with no guerillas fighting them, the hidden remnants of past battles.

We lose so much power if the imagination is weighted by memories of ills borne. Life is too short to treasure animosities that are walls between another's soul and our own. If we expect divine forgetfulness most we not strive to attain it?" —Anon.

DON'T CROWD.

Don't crowd, the world is large enough
 For you as well as me:
 The doors of all are open wide—
 The realm of thought is free.
 In all earth's palaces you are right,
 To choose the best you can—
 Provided that you do not try
 To crowd some other man.
 Don't crowd the good from out your heart,
 By fostering all that's bad,
 But give to every virtue room—
 The best that may be had;
 To each day's record such a one
 That you may well be proud;
 Give each his right—give each his room,
 And never try to crowd.

—Charles Dickens.

J. M. L. HENRY, '96.

Examinations begin Tuesday, December 18th.

Several new students have lately entered the Varsity.

The T. H. P. O. is talking of organizing a football team.

Miss Ella Harrison will spend her Xmas at her home in Lovelocks.

The s. p. chapter of the T. H. P. O. conferred preparatory degrees, December 13th.

Miss Mamie Hickey spent Thanksgiving at the Ladies' Dormitory visiting her sister.

The RECORD revels in the possession of a fine office the compliments of Professor Brown.

Taft, Com., leaves the Varsity this term to enter Heald's Business college, San Francisco.

Sergeant James Egan, left on the V. & T. Wednesday morning, on a summons from home.

Drill was suspended during the week ending December 14th, on account of inclement weather.

The regular monthly meeting of the Independent Association was held Wednesday, the 12th inst.

The girls of the Cadet Corps created a great deal of curiosity and surprise by appearing in their jaunty new caps last Tuesday.

Mr. S. B. Doten, who has been assisting Professor Hillman in botanical work for a year, has again taken up L. A. in the Varsity.

Messrs. Flood A., Flood W., Feeney, Bulmer, Sullivan, Park and Tally will spend the Christmas vacation at their homes in Virginia City.

The regular monthly meeting of the Athletic Association was held Friday December 14th. Bills were allowed, and subjects pertaining to the Association discussed. The proposal to suspend the dues for the months of January, February and March was rejected.

Miss Hedley French, ex-'95, has been selected business editor of the paper to be published by the ladies of Carson City on New Year's day.

E. N. Jaquish, ex-com, who will be remembered as the first Treasurer of the Adelphi, was married on December 9th, last, to Miss May Russel, of Cedarville.

Mr. P. Howard, who has conducted the Varsity dining room the past four years, has returned to his home in Wisconsin and the management has been assumed by the Varsity.

The wooden muskets which the girls are going to use in lieu of "live guns" are all finished and as soon as the weather permits, the girls will take possession of the parade ground.

The RECORD during the first of the term, voted to turn its subscription money into a fund to aid the establishment of a gymnasium. The fund now amounts to $110.20, and it is expected, will rapidly increase early next term.

It is rumored that Descriptive Geometry is to be taken out of the L. A. course next year. In order that the present Sophomore class might have this advantage they have petitioned the Faculty for permission to substitute Botany for the term of Descriptive.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather on the 5th inst, only two members of the Governor's staff responded to Lieutenant Hamilton's invitation to review the battalion. Both very highly complimented our drilling and expressed their opinions that under the circumstances we could hardly have done better.

W. J. Westerfield, State Treasurer-elect, has presented the library a handsome collection of eighty-eight volumes of standard literature. Along with the collection, came several large framed photos. of the members of the State Legislature taken during the different sessions, when Mr. Westerfield was a senator from Lyon county.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

F. H. SAXTON, '95.

THE second entertainment of the series in aid of the gymnasium and drill hall, which occurred on Saturday last, attracted one of the largest audiences that ever greeted a troupe in the Reno Opera House. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Young Lady Cadets, they having conceived and produced the various novelties without even a suggestion from their brother cadets. Their independence was further demonstrated by the installation of lady managers, ushers and door keepers.

But a little over two weeks ago, it was announced to the Young Lady Cadets, that they would be expected to produce an entertainment for the 15th. The time for the needed preparation seemed wholly insufficient, but with a zeal characteristic of our loyal co-eds, the work was commenced. It was successfully terminated on Saturday last. The originality of the entertainment and splendid acting of the entertainers, justly called forth the applause of the audience and won laurels for the Young Ladies' Cadet Corps.

* * * *

HE was popular at college; "one of the boys you know," and all the term implies. But popularity is a flighty bird; it requires much fostering, as soon this youth discovered, and though as an auxiliary, is perhaps desirable, more sturdier stuff is requisite for the main dependence.

* * * *

THE RECORD has transferred its headquarters to the office formerly occupied by Superintendent Brown. The exchanges will here be kept on file and can be consulted upon application.

* * * *

EVERYONE receiving the RECORD is requested to submit the subscription price, before January 1st, or order the paper discontinued.

HOW unsatisfactory it is to note the time of day by listening to a striking clock. In nine cases out of ten, one will doubt the accuracy of his count. But one sweeping glance at the hands is convincing. It was always thus "seeing is believing," but hearing, well, hearing is disbelieving. It is on the same principle, that we cannot profit by the experience of others. To tell us that such and such a step would be demoralizing, only serves to make us take a contrary view and wish to disprove the testimony. But our own experience leaves no doubt as to the proper course. One trial is decisive, for now we have seen; before, we had heard.

* * * *

THE University Orchestra which furnished the music Saturday night, is a recent organization, but even now is good; and before the end of the season will be worth going a long distance to hear. Professor Hillman is director and it is upon his skill that we base our prediction.

* * * *

IT requires a thorough understanding of a subject to ask intelligent questions regarding it; it does not necessarily follow that unintelligent questioning shows a lack of understanding; but sensible answers should not be expected to nonsensical questions.

EXAMS. this week! That exclamation brings consternation to the indifferent student. Since examinations must come, they should be made to "vex our good nature" as little as possible, by being prepared for in advance.

—Harper & Bros. are preparing an illustrated volume on "Four American Universities: Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Columbia. It will be made up of four magazine articles which have appeared in recent years.

The article on Harvard was written by Professor Charles Elliot Norton a few years ago for Harper's Magazine. The purpose of the article was to give the general public an idea of the life at Harvard, to set forth its exceptional educational advantages, and to make plain its position as the first of American universities.—Harvard Crimson.

Sammy— Do you love your sister?

Tommy—Yes, don't you love yours?

Sammy— I havn't got any to love.

Tommy—Why dont you love some other fellow's sister then.

Training School Cadet—What is that on that mans chin?

University Cadet—That is a goatee.

T. S. Cadet—Oh, is it! and is that on your lip a sheepee?

The following conversation was overheard.

Miiss X.—Why is the boy's dormitory like heaven.

Miss Y.—Oh, I give it up. Why is it?

Miss X.—Because Bliss dwells there.

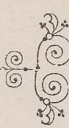

Next week, no doubt, the following will be heard quite often.

Professor—Now is there any thing about my question you dont understand?

Student—O, no indeed, the question is quite clear, it is only the answer that bothers me.

A certain student wishing to play a joke on one of his professors, put a card, on which was written "monkey" in the Professors hat. He informed the class what he did and they were watching for results. The professor came in and seeing the card remarked: "some gentleman has left his card, I see." And a certain student wished he wasn't there.—L.

It was in a Latin class and a dull boy was wrestling with the sentence, "Rex fugit," which with painful slowness of emphasis, he had rendered, "The King flees" But in what other tense can the verb 'fugit' be found," asked the professor. A long scratching of the head and a final answer of "perfect." "And how would you translate it then." "Dont know." "Why, put a 'has' in it., Again the tardy response was drawled out: The King has fleas.—Ex,

 Athletic and Society Notes.

O. T. WILLIAMS, '96.

President Stubbs lectured to a very attentive and appreciative audience at McKissick's Opera House December 4th, upon Social Life of Germany. He outlined the geographical situation of the German Empire, and gave a brief history of the people and the nation. His experience of German social life began with his entrance into the University in Berlin. Among other things Dr. Stubbs spoke of the eating and drinking habits of the Germans, of their politeness to one another and the reverential respect paid to old age. Customs pertaining especially to student life were explained. The speaker said that the young men of a German University would not for a moment think of doing such a presumptuous thing as escorting the young ladies to the lecture. Judging from appearances that evening we do not believe that a very large number of U. N. students were in danger of being mistaken for German students. The lecture abounded in pathos and wit and was entertaining and instructive to all classes of people. The U. N. Glee Club and Mrs. F. M. Lee sang during the evening.

Never before has the one under whose supervision is classed the reporting of Athletics, considered it necessary to accuse the men of disinterestedness and inactivity. However he believes if they were to assume his position at the present time they would feel justified in stirring them up. In our last issue, the baseball players were criticised editorially for the indifference with which they played in the match game on Thanksgiving. The writer desires to reiterate a portion of the substance of those sentiments. If our men after beginning a game find their opponents no match for them, they should nevertheless play their parts well, or retire from the diamond. On an occasion similar to the above mentioned, when a game has been advertised, people have a right to expect something more than a mere practice game, played for pastime. Visitors become possessed of the idea that all our athletic sports are carried on in the same half-hearted spirit, and it is almost impossible to induce them to attend again. While upon this subject the writer will offer a few suggestions, which may be carried out as soon as the weather permits. We should like to have inaugurated the custom of cross country runs and long distance walks. For those especially, who never compete in athletic contests, a walk or run of three or four miles would be of inestimable worth as a healthful recreation. Since so many students possess bicycles, would it not be well for the Athletic Association to arrange a series of cycling road races? Skating and sleighing will be the chief sports this Winter, but even during that time all interest in athletics ought not to be discontinued.

The Adelphi held an open meeting on the evening of the 7th inst, which was well attended. President Saxton in his opening remarks stated the purposes and aspirations of the society, and the object in holding an open meeting every term. Miss Lauretta Hickey then favored the audience with a violin selection and was forced to respond to an encore. Misses Geer and Phillips gave recitations which were especially difficult. They were both heartily applauded for their pleasing rendition. A quartet composed of Misses Mayberry and Edmunds, and Messrs. Higgins and Loder, delighted the audience with their singing. Fred. W. Walts delivered an oration upon "Our Future Governmental Policy." It showed deep thought and study and was listened to attentively throughout. Miss Maud Haines sang "Sweet Birdies Sing to Me." She has an unusually strong soprano voice. O. T. Williams read an essay upon "Benefits to be Derived from a Literary Society." J. M. L. Henry gave for a declamation, a selection from Pitt. It was well received. Miss Lulu Blum, read a humorous article that caused much merriment. The T. H. P. O. Glee Club made its debut during the evening and rendered meritoriously several pieces. Professor Hillman being called upon addressed the society and visitors, urging all students to take an active part in the society. The society then adjourned.

❁ ≡ ❁ CONTRIBUTIONS ❁ ≡ ❁

ALTHOUGH I have noticed in the RECORD, many articles upon gymnastics and athletics, I am going to add one more in praise of outdoor pastimes for women.

A certain writer says that nothing is more essential to the well-being of the mortal soul than the well-being of the mortal body. Many moral and spiritual ills take their rise in a morbid brain or disordered digestion. The blood must be pure and warm to make life pleasant or even endurable. Is not a headache one of the most terrible of evils? It is so common a thing, so much to be expected, that your friends don't worry about you when you have one, and you lack all those loving little attentions which make other maladies not such great afflictions after all. Yet how thoroughly miserable you are! Our grandmothers, when they had a headache, used to shut themselves up in darkened rooms, bind their throbbing brows with ice, and wear away the weary hours in an atmosphere of hartshorn.

To-day we don't stay in the house and almost wish we were dead, but go out in that great cure for racking nerves, the fresh, cool air. This is very well in its place, but the old adage, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, surely holds good here. If the pure air had only been sought regularly we should not have had the suffering even for a little while:

I know some of you girls have a good deal of out door life; you play tennis, you drill, you ride the bicycle, and you walk to and from school, vigorous exercise is that last. I shall never forget climbing the long hill where the wet clay accumulated upon ones feet until it seemed after every step as though one could not take the next, and you are wise to enjoy it as much as possible.

For those who can not find pleasure in such forms of exercise, who find bicycling and tennis too severe, and drill—perhaps because it is a duty—a bore, there are many others to choose from.

If you are not very strong, there is archery; it is delightful to draw your bow and feel that it depends entirely upon yourself whether or not that arrow reaches its mark. Then, too, it makes you feel as if you were back in the good old days, when they say things were so much better than they are now. It reminds you of Robin Hood, and, of course, of William Tell. The practice may for a time give you a blister on each finger, but that is entirely forgotten when you first hit the bulls-eye.

What girl has not watched with longing the games of the boys and wished she dared run and shout so? She need no longer envy their baseball and football, if she plays basketball. It keeps the mind occupied, for you must see and think quickly to gain an advantage for your own side, you can run and roll, be knocked down and knock others down, to your hearts content. Shouting is permissible in this game and it is a desirable accomplishment to be able to give a good hearty yell.

There are so many other open air games that it seems as if every-one could find some one a pleasure.

From the Heights.

IN a glance the good people of Nevada have been discovered following the wrong path, and while it is not my practice to meddle in outside affairs, yet when the reputation of the institution, or the welfare of her graduates is at stake, I shall not hesitate to do so.

"Patronize home industries,, is the great maxim of Nevadans. But while this is the rule of action, it has been as much disregarded as it has been loudly proclaimed.

Not long since, in one of our neighboring towns, a teacher was to be hired, and although a couple of our alumni applied for the position it was tendered with characteristic deference to the resident of another State. This is indeed "patronizing home industries," but it does not tell half the tale; it is the one instance in a long series of a similar kind

There are perhaps three explanations of the act referred to above. One is that the honorable board of trustees were unaware of the existence of the University of Nevada; secondly they were aware of its existence, but did not have confidence in its graduates; and thirdly, the election of a teacher who has been educated among us, is not as high sounding as, "Mr. I'll-leave-as-soon-as-my-job-is-done, of California, was elected teacher for the ensuing term."

The first of these explanations must be abandoned, because it is only reasonable to suppose that a body of men presiding over the education of a community, keep themselves informed on some of the minor details of education, such as the existence of a State University etc.

Then, is it a fact that these gentlemen did not have confidence in our graduates?

The writer does not know just what is the standard of fitness of these gentlemen, but he does know that every position to which a graduate of the University has been appointed, has been filled competently and uprightly. The Board of Regents have employed graduates, as instructors in some of the University departments, and I think it is reasonable to conclude that they are prepared to instruct in the public schools, unless some of our schools have reached a stage of which no one in the State is aware. These facts are so well known, that I am afraid to accuse anyone of ignorance of them, and so the third supposition is forced upon us.

To say that the people of Nevada are afraid of all their home products is a rather strange charge; and yet, many men have affirmed that this prejudice is an economic force in commercial affairs. The writer is reminded of the story of the Nevada broom manufacturer. He commenced to manufacture brooms in Nevada, but found that the business would not pay, because the people thought the brooms made in the old State of Nevada must surely be worthless; and so the manufacturer took his stock and plant across the line, and labeled all his goods from California, when he did a thriving business.

Whether this be true or not, things similar in absurdity, are done by the people of Nevada, and the rising generation believe it is about time to call a halt. Can a native born be expected to remain in Nevada, working for her welfare while the lucrative positions are tendered to carpet baggers.

Here are some questions which it is said a "real" woman asked at a ball game recently: "Which side does the umpire play on?" "How many outs make an inning?" "When a man sits over there on the bench with his overcoat tied round his neck by the sleeves does he count for our side or theirs?" "When a man runs way round without stopping he's counted out, ain't he? And then can he play any more?" "How many men make up a nine?"

S. Emrich has opened the Nevada Cash Dry Goods and Carpet House with a full line of the very latest fashionable dress and fancy goods, carpets, linoleums, ladies', misses' and children's cloaks and jackets. We will be pleased to send samples if ordered and will carefully and promptly fill orders.
