students were in favor of deferring action upon it till a later meeting, but the popular sentiment was to take action at once. When a senior made a motion, which was seconded, that the proposals of the faculty be rejected, the motion was unanimously carried.

Several students then suggested it would be advisable to make some poposition to the faculty in place of the rejected amendment. Some feared that the faculty would use stringent measures which would result in the doing away of athletics, but when a football man stated that this would en an enthusiastic hand-clapping.

THE BIG YALE GYMNASIUM.

The big Yale gymnasium is a busy place during these winter days. 'The main floor is so crowded that a spectator wonders how so many men can work effectively. On one side of the monster glass roofed enclosure, and or the sixteen-lap indoor track, the field and track men are training under the direction of Johnnie Mack, Yale's famous coach. Here the hurdlers are working at their steps, the sprinters at their "get-away" and stride, the high jumpers at their form, the pole vaulters at their take-off and uprise, and the shot putters at their "put."

Around the walls the prescription men are working under the supervision of three instructors. Some are being treated for curvature of the spine; others are building up tissue between bony prominences and still others are trying to get rid of cumbersome adipose tissue.

At one end of the Gym, the gymnastic teams are performing difficult acrobatic feats on the heavy apparatus They also have a special coach and are rounding into shape for the winter contests with teams from the other large universities. The Yale gymnastic team is one of the best in Am-

In the center of the floor the Freshman basket-ball boys are hard at play, trying to win a place on one of their class teams, or on the Varsity five. The Varsity team does all its practicing at night under the supervision of a coach whose sole duty is to get the main teams into condition.

At the other end of the building various squads of crew men can be seen most any hour, taking all around "sitting up" excercises as accessory work to their daily grind at rowing. These men are among the hardest trained in the University, because the Spring regetta with Harvard is as prominent a feature of Yale's athletand social life as the Fall football game with the same school which, last November, brought out over seventyfive thousand people.

The football men, too, have their periods for signal and passing practice in the Gym., even though the season is over and the next game is ten months in the future. Yale prepares for its contests months before they take place and is always more or less ready to compete in any sport.

Four times a week the physical culoccupy the main floor. and during these periods every other exercise ceases. These classes are composed of Freshmen chiefly. Every First year man in the Academic department is compelled to engage in some sort of physical activity. All the students are given excellent opportunities for a well rounded physical education, which Yale holds quite as important as intellectual development. Nearly every one of its 3,00 or more young men spend part of the day in sport. The athletic activities are not for the glory of a few stars, nor merely for winning contests, but they are pre-eminently for the physical growth of the students in general.

The main floor of the Gymnasium is the fourth one from the ground. On the next, or third, are the lockers and baths, the offices of the physcashier, and the rooms for boxing and fencing. Interesting bouts are "pulled off" in the last named rooms ic code. every afternoon. The sons of America's greatest men, including President Taft's son "Bob," receive inmerce, is, in some respects at least struction in the manly art. The selfcontrol and backbone developed by boxing are considered as essential to American character as are intellectual qualifications.

into wrestling rooms, handball courts, mechanical and clocklike devices bowling alleys and apartments for which have robbed the glorious game training the crew men. In the crew of football of the essential play elequarters are boats of various sizes with their oars so attached to mechanical contrivances that the rowing can be practiced nearly as well as upon the water. These are all in use every afternoon.

Behind the Gymnasium stands the new Carnegie swimming pool, the most beautiful in America. It has just been finished. The inter-collegiate contests will be held there soon. Every student is admitted to the pool, where ne can have a delightful swim even in the coldest weather. The swimmers also have their coach, in fact, every particular sport at Yale has its eoach and some of them, such as footoall, have several. The high plane which athletics has attained at Yale and other large Universities is due o their excellent athletic organizations and division of labor which are made possible by their apparently unlimited financial resources.

A FAIR COMMENT ON RUGBY.

Some time ago the Daily Maroon printed the following article on Rugby football, which was originally written in the form of a letter to that paper by Mr. E. W. Duncan of the University of Chicago:

As it is just now fashionable for everyone to deliver himself of an opinion on football, whether he be a college professor whose toe never touched the ball or an editor whose head was never bumped in a scrimmage, permit on who has played three different kinds of football, and who is as familiar with the English Rugby game, as he is with he American game (having played both) to say a word.

"First, I wish to corroborate from personal observation and experience what Professor Johnson of the University High School has recently said: English Rugby is fraught with less danger, gives more players a chance to participate, maintains a cleaner standard of morality and is far superior to the American game.' I would add that it is also more interesting and spectacular on account of the nore rapid movement of the game though of course it must be conceded it is less scientific and less highly de veloped than the American game But this so-called high development of the latter (though quoted by Mr. Stagg, for whom we all have the greatest admiration and esteem) as a favorable point, is in reality one of its more serious defects; it it over-develand there is a painful lack of freedom in the American game. The players are reduced to so many wooden men who try to carry out the signals dictated to them by another man, who in some cases is under the complete dominance of the coach—a system subver sive of all personal initiative and originality. When the element of personal judgment on the part of the player in possession of the ball is eliminated in favor of imaginary strategy which is seldom successfully realized, it is neither good team nor individual play. It is too much of a 'one-man affair. And yet, forsooth, William Edwards the Princeton star, says that English Rugby 'lacks the individual brilliance of the American game.' It is evident he never played the Rugby game, and possibly never saw two first-class teams play. I have witnessed more ical director, examining physician and individual brilliance in one good Rugby game than in half a dozen under

PROFESSOR LOEB TO TAKE POSITION AT EASTERN INSTITUTION

Professor Jacques Loeb who, while a professor at the University of Chicago in 1902, achieved world wide fame in his experiments in determining the origin of life, will leave the University of California for the East where he will devote his entire time to research work at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. Professor Loeb left the University of Chicago in 1902 to become professor of biology at the University of California, which position he has since oc cupied. In speaking of the ambitions which keep him at work in his laboratories Professor Loeb has said: "I wanted to get at the bottom of things wanted to take life in my hands and play with it."

While at the University of Chicago Professor Loeb announced the successful outcome of experiments in ar tificially fertilizing the eggs of sea urchins and producing life in that manner. He also proved that hearts of animals could be made to throb exactly as they do in life by being placed in a solution of common salt. and that the addition of other chem icals stopped the organ's beating.

Seevral Important Changes in the Baseball Code.

"Silk" O'Loughlin, one of Ban Johnn's umpires in the American Base-League, gives a clear outline of the new rules which will be in effect

'The coacher's box has been limited so that the coacher cannot approach nearer to first base than fifteen feet. The dead line is drawn at an imaginary line directly through first and second base.

'Formerly, when a player out of a foul; henceforth it will be known as an illegally batted ball.

'A batter cannot change his position at the plate if the pitcher is already in position.

"The batter is entitled to a base if a batted ball hits the umpire on fair ground.

"If a ball passes the catcher or infielder and touches the umpire on foul ground, runner is entitled to all he can get. There will no longer be any 'dead balls."

PAY OF COLLEGE GRADUATES.

"How much may a person earn after getting a college education?" The question is often asked, and best answered by saying: "Any amount. It depends upon the person." There has been so much of speculation regarding the salaries of college graduates, and especially regarding the income of engineers and men of technical training, that at a recent gathering of a class graduated ten years ago from one of the foremost technical colleges in the country it was decided to collect reliable information on this point. There were about 180 graduates in the class in question, and as they had become scattered in all parts of the country, and had taken up a great variety of business and is quite evident that those who should lines of engineering work, it was evident that the result would be of great value. Furthermore, they would provide information of a kind that people should wish the Academic Meet under in general have much interest in but the control of the University students can ascertain but little about.

The great majority of the men were managers, engineers or executives for successful manufacturing and business corporations, dealing with the work in electrical, civil, mining and other engineering lines. A few were in business for themselves as consulting engineers, and one was a lecturer, one a Califorina ranch owner, and ten were in the service of the United States government. These details are mentioned to show the wide-reaching and representative character of those whose replies form a basis of the statistics of salaries given here.

The lowest salary received was $728. The largest salary was $20,000. The following table shows the salaries for the last year, separated into divisions of $500 each, and the number of college men receiving salaries in each of these divisions:
