They will all arrange community chest activity for their reventions. chest activity for their respective groups, with the exception of Sut-ton, who will make arrangements for all fraternity men on the campus.

With a goal of $70,000, this drive will commence November 15 and conclude November 22. These students appointed to the committee will serve as an agent between their respective groups and the downtown committee. However, a cen-tral chairman of campus activities might be appointed, and if so, the committee heads will be responsible to him. This year in order to change the repetition of calling group leaders by general terms, the downtown committee decided to name the committee heads pilots and bombardiers. Between now and Nevernber 15. now and November 15 arrangements will be made with the downtown com-mittee and those in the university in preparation for the drive.

The campus committee will be assign-

LET ALL STUDENTS DECIDE

Last week student senators revoked the "longer Christmas vacation" proposal, but this week its sponsor revived the issue. The plan was presented to Acting President Gorman, who will accept it, providing the students want it.

case and make another decision. Since all representatives opposed the proposal in the first ballot, it is rather obvious that they will

However, despite the tactics employed by the sponsor to consult the president in spite of the senate's original cancellation, the proposal deserves some consideration. It is a good idea.

Perhaps its merits far overshadow its faults, since if passed, students will finish final examinations before vacationing. It is also presumed that wartime travel facilities will be lighter, and therefore accessible, after January 1. If this is true, students will be able to obtain passage home without priority interference.

will not be able to spend Christmas day at home. This is a symbolic tradition, and to miss it would be a sin.

This barrier is especially true for those who live a great distance from Reno. Other students, who live near here, will undoubtedly spend Christmas day at home no matter when the vacation period

Travel facilities for students living within the area of this state will not change. Nevada buses are busy most of the time, whether it is Christmas vacation or not.

The travel question, therefore, pertains to students from out-ofstate (especially California) who might not be able to obtain passage

It does not make any difference to the faculty when Christma vacation is commemorated by the student body. They will spend that day in their Reno homes. Saturday's Christmas simply won't the vacation concluded. Most students had test preparations and reports to complete during the "restful" Christmas holidays. Conse quently, the vacation was devoted to lessons instead of fun.

The only answer to the problem can be derived by considering the educational complications.

Previous to the change of schedule last year, Nevada students took final examinations prior to Christmas vacation. The grades arrived at their homes during the holidays. The spring semester began immeriately upon conclusion of the vacation.

This year the debate over the celebration is not the major premise for argument, but instead when students should take final examinations, before or after the vacation.

Since Christmas is a student vacation, probably the soundest solution of the entire problem could be answered through a campus poll to test opinion on the question. The issue is too emotional for a group of house senators to determine, since it touches the hearts and beliefs of all students.

FRESHMAN COEDS PAY PENALTY FOR 3 VIOLATIONS

Fourteen freshman coeds are paying the penalty for breaking Nevada cam-pus traditions, Doll Corbett, chairman of the women's upperclass committee, stated today. Six of them are wearing eight by ten ribbons, two are carrying suit box bibles and the remainder mere-ly had to rake the lawn. The six coeds are to wear these eight by ten plaid ribbons on the top of their heads until November 10. They wear the traditional blue and white ribbon directly in front of the large one. These tradition breakers are Elsie Trail, Vir ginia Keen, Doris Williams, Evelyr

Keen, Betty Zang and Wilma Jones.
The two coeds that must carry th suit box depicting the bible are Eleano Corle and Florence Gonzales. Othe tradition violators are Elizabeth Cald day she will have the appearance of being drug through the dirt. It is a wise person who avoids Lulu at a time
