Entertainment by Members of Audience To Sell Bonds Highlighted the Affair

By Jini Auchampauagh Stamps and bonds amounting to $2310.90 were bought by the 150 coeds who attended the Pan Hellenic bean feed in the university dining hall last night.

Coeds wore jeans and sang fraternity songs while they ate beans and drank coffee. The food was prepared by Pan Hellenic members. Betty Molignoni, mistress of ceremonies, introduced Pan Hellenic members who sang their original song for the bean feed. Singing were Thelma Charlton, Kappa Alpha Theta; Jacqueline Prescott, Pi Beta Phi; Patricia Traner, Pi Beta Phi; Marie Aldrich, Tri-Delt; Kathleen Nor-

STUDENTS REPRIMANDED

A certain amount of leisure is undoubtedly deserved by college students, but recently the leisure has been extended beyond the reasonable point by the University of Nevada campusites.

Campusites. One of Nevada's traditions of long standing is to drop in at the Waldorf for a mid-afternoon coke with other U of N students. It has always been a little "pause that refreshes"— lasting 15 or 20 minutes. Then everybody cleared out and gave other students a chance to slide into booths and enjoy their cokes.

cousin Spender Termite. This out-fit is absolutely determined to buy that Hellcat fighter plane. Just take a look at that record—they have al-ready sold almost $60,000 in bonds, However, this week the manager-our old friend, Artcalled to our attention the large number of students who loiter an hour or two hours over their cokes, sometimes sang and created a general disturbance, and more often kept fellow stu-dents standing so long they left rather than wait any longer for "First thing you know, this darn-phool bunch will decide to buy an aircraft carrier to go under their goshawful airplane." a booth a booth. This, obviously, is not fair for several reasons. Art has been very kind to college students for a good many years. In fact, he has given students from the University of Nevada full run of the Waldorf—even to the point of letting them sing and generally romp around on Mackay Day, Home-coming and after football and basketball games. He is not complaining about the present situation—as bad as it is. He merely pointed out that the chief offenders of complaining about the present situation—as bad as it is. He merely pointed out that the chief offenders of good taste—who are largely underclassmen—are mostly minors. Since alcoholic as well as non-alcoholic beverages are sold at the Waldorf, these minors should, technically, not be admitted. However, they have always been per-mitted to have a coke there. But city officials are not going to allow them to loiter there. Only a short time ago U of N students were complaining because some high school students inhabited the Waldorf, took all of the booths, stayed there hours upon end and created a constant bedlam. Now those high school students are not al-lowed to enter the Waldorf, but campusites seem to be carry-ing on where their younger fellow students left off. Besides the unethical aspect of this situation, common courtesy should lead students to have their cokes, then leave and give other students a chance to do the same. Some people haven't all day to wait, but they deserve to spend their ten minutes drinking a coke—and not standing while some rube

naverage. average

Before anyone decides to spend a couple of hours in the Wal, he should remember the studying to be donc—along with the fact other students might be waiting, and that Art's patience might someday reach the breaking point.

Yell Leaders Are Ready for Games

Yell leaders will again go into action with the advent of basket-ball season stated Bette Poe, senior yell leader.

Although the Wolf Pack's schedule has not yet been confirmed, the yell leaders will be ready and waiting for the first home game with several new stunts and yells. Harold Clark, freshman cheer expert who was unable to finish the football season, will be back again. Warren Black, another fresh-man, will be out for the basketball season, as will Tosca Masini. This is Miss Masini's second year with the cheer squad.

Bette Poe, the only upperclassman of the group, is completing her fourth and last year as leader of the University of Nevada cheering

Miss Poe stated the plans for the basketball season include pep assemblies prior to games to promote a greater school spirit.
