War Bond Committee Chairman States Campus Cooperation Beyond Reproach

University of Nevada students bought and solicited a total of $198,342.25—more than twice their goal, the $88,500 required to buy a U. S. Navy Hellcat fighter plane—during the six weeks' war bond drive ending on campus today, Jane Creel, war bond committee chairman and head of the finance bureau of the campus war board, announced today.

Dean Alice B. Marsh granted permission to this action, stating that slacks are gradually coming into acceptance with the general public.

If, during the period of trial, the practice is misused, the committee said, the privilege will be revoked.

Slacks are to be worn properly, and Miss Creel added that more bond sales would be credited to university sales today and Saturday. She also explained that the bond thermometer in the library did not show amounts of bonds and stamps purchased by sororities and other groups, but indicated only the amount of war bond and stamp purchases made through the university during the week. Names appearing on the thermometer indicated the group that was sponsoring that particular week.

"The cooperation received from University of Nevada students was unbelievable," Miss Creel said. "Student organizations willingly took on the added responsibility of sponsoring a week of the drive, despite all the other activities and work these groups have."

ABOUT THE BOND DRIVE

ABOUT THE BOND DRIVE
University of Nevada students have again distinguished themselves by finishing what they started.

This fall, the students decided to buy a Hellcat fighter plane. Actually, Jane Creel, head of the finance bureau of the campus war board, decided we should buy a Hellcat. Before the campaign got underway, Jane conducted her own campaign to sell the idea to the student body. She did. Then the student body conducted a campaign to sell the idea to everybody else they knew. They did.

Then a series of parties and stunts began. All major groups on campus participated in soliciting bonds for one purpose: To buy the U. S. Navy a Hellcat fighter plane. We did.

SLACKS ON CAMPUS

University of Nevada women will now be permitted to wear slacks on campus for the first time in the institution's history, the women's upperclass committee, with the permission of Acting Dean of Women Alice B. Marsh, announced this week.

Result of a multitude of requests, the decision was reached after thorough consideration. However, certain provisions were made by the committee in announcing its approval.

after thorough consideration. However, certain provisions were made by the committee in announcing its approval.

Women, although permitted to wear slacks, may not go on campus in levis or jeans. Slacks worn properly are not ruffian garb. But popular standards do not accept the sloppy appearance of jeans and bagging shirts.

This provision was made to keep the U of N campus standards of dress as high as they have always been. If women are to wear slacks, they must look neat—and not carelessly dressed, the committee said.

This practice will be continued through a trial period which will end January 31. If, during that period, any indication of bad taste or sloppiness is shown, the permission will automatically be revoked, the committee warned.

graduation from the Universidad de San Marino, Lima.

Stiff Courses
Following his discussion in Spanish closely, club members learned of the formal, pedagogical courses prescribed, the absence of "electives," and the rigid examinations preceding and closing each semester, serving as a "filtering" process through which a comparatively small percentage of students emerge.

Lauding the "seminar" system in our universities, not yet used in Latin American institutions, Dr. Quesada emphasized the value of Quesada emphasized the value of such impartial, round table discus-sions. Then, describing the gay abandon of Lima's traditional carnivals and fiestas, he concluded his talk with several Peruvian anecdotes.

Spanish and Latin American re-cordings were played by Dr. Ana-tole G. Mazour, and refreshments were served.

Guests of the club were Mrs. Miro Quesada, Dr. and Mrs. Anatale G. Mazour and Senor M. B. Rodriguez, Puerto Rican educator who was a recent speaker on the campus. Dr. Christian W. Melz, faculty advisor, was present, and Mary Ancho, president, introduced the speaker of the evening.

Admission Units For UN Modified

By U of N News Service
Out of state students will henceorth be admitted to the University of Nevada on the same scholastic basis as graduates of Nevada high schools, according to announcement made by the committee on admision, headed by Dean Stanley G.

In order to be admitted as freshman student, the applicant must have completed 15 units of high school work, with a grade of 80 or better in six of the 15 units. Prof. William C. Miller, now on leave, had acted in that capacity before, but since his departure Dean Frederick C. Wood had added these his expectation of the six units must be in non-vocational subjects.

ROTC credit earned in high school may now be applied to uni-versity entrance units, also, the committee stated.

mittee stated.

In making application for admission, the student is asked to designate the subject in which he is most interested, and, on the basis of his reply, a faculty adviser in the particular field indicated is assigned to the incoming student. The adviser then confers with the student and aids him in mapping his four years of study to include all

The new camera gets its name from the narrow slot that exposes a ribbon of film at a speed of one tenthousandth of a second. These "stills," taken on ordinary film, show a fast flying P-47 firing its underwing rocket.

This is an example of the many ways Bell System research is helping to provide better weapons, better equipment for war and peacetime telephone service.

Top Honors Won by Third ROTC Squad

In the semester's final squad com-petition for military students, Cadet Sgt. John (Bus) McBride's third quad of the first platoon carried off top honors. The contest was be-tween the winner and the second squad second platoon, which had been rated the best of the three quads composing its group.

During this semester, the ROTO has held five platoon competitions with platoon one winning three. Each platoon is made up of three squads, and last Friday the competition was in the nature of a playoff for squad honors.
