UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, RENO, NEVADA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1950

Homecoming not bad--not bad at all

Some 460 Nevadans attended the Homecoming dance which ended a weekend hailed by many as the most spirited event of the year.

Rainy weather forced the opening event, Phi Sig's street dance, indoors Thursday night, and caused cancellation of the pajama parade and the burning of the N Friday night.

At the Homecoming rally, held in the old gym the same night, Elise Valentine, KAT, was presented as Homecoming queen, and Coaches Sheeketski and Lawlor gave short talks.

Friday night, a near capacity crowd viewed the Wolves Frolic in the State building auditorium, and saw as a finale, the Phi Sig skit which was judged to be the best of the evening.

Saturday morning, Lambda Chi Alpha and Sigma Alpha Epsilon placed winners in the cross country race, through the efforts of Burt Munson, LXA, who won the contest, and the SAE team of Gianotti-Bell-Coughlin, which captured the team title.

Later in the morning a large crowd witnessed the Homecoming parade. Winning floats were Phi Sigma Kappa and Lambda Chi Alpha, tie for best fraternity float; Kappa Alpha Theta, best sorority float; and Home Economics Club, best organization float.

More than 4000 spectators viewed the Homecoming football game Saturday afternoon and saw the visiting Loyola Lions take the Wolf Pack 34-7.

Half-time activities included card stunts, the marching band, and crowning of the Homecoming queen by Governor Vail Pittman.

Following the game, at the drawing for the Alumni Homecoming Day contest, the new Buick was awarded to Mr. John Kinzel of Red House, Nevada. Mr. Kinzel is a miner at the Getchell mines in Winnemucca.

Phi Sigma Kappa, with 842 ticket sales, and Kappa Alpha Theta, with 226, were declared winners in the organization ticket sales contest. Raymond Smith, Phi Sig, won the individual selling contest with his 500 ticket sales. Total sales by Greek letter organizations was $2592.

Open houses were held by fraternities and sororities following the game, and Sigma Nu held a housewarming at its new chapter house with a party that evening.

Lambda Chi Alpha and Pi Beta Phi were awarded attendance cups for the Homecoming dance, where awards for weekend contests were made.

At the same time, the Alumni Association held its meeting and dance at the Mapes Hotel, where they elected John Benson, '35, Reno businessman, association president for the coming year. Approximately 500 alums took part in the weekend celebration, it was announced by Max Dodge, alumni representative.

Engineers' frat elects six men to membership

Six students have been elected into Nu Eta Epsilon, honorary engineers fraternity, President Howard Clark announced this week.

Members in Nu Eta Epsilon are chosen from junior engineering students who are in the upper eighth of their class scholastically and senior engineers who are in the upper fifth, scholastically.

Four of the new members are seniors: Jasper Cooper, civil engineer; Elwin Fisk, geological engineer; Fred Gibson, metallurgical engineer; and Joe Facha, mechanical engineer. Junior new members are: Jim Eliades, electrical engineer, and Charles Ford, geological engineer.

Nevada to take over bookstore by new year

Nevada's student body may be in business for itself by January 2, 1951, Ted Klimaszewski, ASUN president, said today. The University Book Store, for many years a campus landmark, will soon become the property of the associated students.

Thus far, an option to buy and a loan have been arranged. The board of regents and the Retail Trade Association have given their blessing to the plan. The bookstore would be under the finance control board and the graduate manager's office.

With the manager to be selected by the board of finance control and the graduate manager; the store will be operated by student help.

Student leaders feel that this purchase may enable students to enjoy the advantages of lower rates on books and supplies if the plan proves successful. Any profits realized by the store will go into the ASUN general funds, thus assuring students the best return on their investment. Banking of bookstore funds will be done through the comptroller.

Ralph Jordan, present owner of the bookstore, is selling out because of ill health.

The project so far has been under the direction of the finance control board headed by Dr. Ernest Inwood and consisting of Gene Mastroianni, graduate manager; Ted Klimaszewski, ASUN president; Col. Smee and Mardelle Kornmayer and Jim Eliades, student representatives.

Here comes a BIG one - - -

James "Atlas" Hulse and his beach playmate, Odile Frost, are about to be inundated by a hugh breaker in their Wolves Frolic skit. The wave was so big, in fact, it knocked them clear across the stage, ending one of the funniest acts in the show.

Campus observatory approved by regents

Plans and funds ready; building date unknown

Architects plans have been drawn and approval given by the board of regents for construction in the near future of an observatory at the University of Nevada, according to Professor E. W. Harris, professor of mechanical engineering and president of the University of Astronomical Society.

Funds for the observatory were provided in the will of the late Lilyan M. K. Darlington, a member of the Astronomical Society of the University of Nevada. She left approximately $4800 specifically for the use of the astronomy department.

Professor Harris said that he presumed the comptroller would let bids soon and hoped that construction could begin in the near future.

The building is to be placed on university property immediately northwest of Victory Heights where "observing conditions should be best because of the higher elevation," Harris said that the observatory, which was designed by Reno architect Russell Mills, would be a two room wood frame building with a sliding roof over the observing room permitting an unobstructed view of the heavens.

The telescope, a six inch reflector type, donated by Dr. Rader J. Thompson, a local dentist and member of the university astronomical society, will be mounted on a concrete block in the center of the observing room.

"Future plans include the acquisition of a six inch refractor type telescope with an electric synchronized drive enabling the telescope to track faithfully any particular heavenly body," said Harris.

The observatory will be for the use of the astronomy department of the university and by the astronomical society of the university. This society was founded some 20 years ago by the late president, G. B. Blair, professor astronomy and physics at the University of Nevada. Professor Blair attained national prominence through his writings and professional interest in astronomy.

Harris said that construction of the observatory will contribute to local astronomical knowledge, exert educational influence on the students and will bring prestige to the University of Nevada.

He stated that the astronomical society was open to all residents of Nevada and new members are welcome.

Two new senators take important board positions

Proc Hug, one of two recently elected senators at large, has been nominated to sit on the finance control board. The senate made the choice at a meeting Wednesday evening.

Barbara Carruth, the other senator at large, will sit on the publications board, student health committee and the administration of student affairs committee.

Before May, 1950, there were no senators at large in the university, but an amendment of May, 1950, provided for four senators at large, two men and two women, elected for a two year term. The terms alternate in order that two senators are elected yearly.

The senators at large are to be representatives on the finance control board, publications board, student health committee and the administration of student affairs committee.

Dean of mines post approved by regents

The University of Nevada board of regents last week approved the appointment of Dr. Vernon E. Scheid as dean of the Mackay School of Mines. It was decided last year to create the post on the advice of a committee appointed by former acting president of the university, Colonel Gilbert E. Parker.

At the time of his appointment, Dr. Scheid was head of the geology department at the University of Idaho, where he had been teaching for 11 years.

Although only 43, he has had 14 years teaching and five years practical work in the geologic field.

He has been on the faculty of both John Hopkins University and the University of Idaho, and has held positions with the United States Geological Survey, Maryland Geological Survey, Arkansas Geological Survey, and the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology.

In 1928 he was awarded his BA degree from Johns Hopkins, in 1940 his MA from the University of Idaho, and in 1946 his Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins.

His appointment will not affect Professor J. A. Carpenter, who will continue as director of the Mackay School of Mines.

Centennial Capers stars students

Navy veteran back in class after Inchon

A few weeks ago Lawrence Trainor, U of N student, was rushing to his battle station off Korea; now he's back at the University of Nevada to continue his engineering studies.

Trainor returned by plane after participating in the Inchon invasion where he served aboard a Navy carrier with the United Nation forces.

A metal smith second class, and a member of the damage control division aboard ship, he was released to inactive duty to complete his senior year at the Mackay School of Mines, where he is majoring in metallurgical engineering.

An overseas Navy veteran, Trainor was called back to active duty the early part of August.

"The morale of the Navy personnel was high," he said. It was gratifying to see the cooperation of the United Nations task forces."

Trainor said that he observed the combined operations from his carrier, off the coast of Korea.

Alumni dance in San Francisco

An alumni dance and get-together will be held this week in San Francisco, stated Alumni Secretary Max Dodge.

Sponsored by the San Francisco bay area chapter, the affair will be held on Saturday, November 4, prior to the Nevada-St. Mary's football clash. All local alumni, students, and friends have been extended an invitation to attend the function to be held at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel in San Francisco.

Hilliard calls Pack semi-professional, Expansion program prepared for 1951 legislature

The coach of the Wolf Pack is "bringing disgrace to Nevada and the university through adverse publicity," Albert Hilliard, Reno attorney, told the board of regents last Friday morning.

He also branded the university football team as "outclassed and semi-professional" after a general discussion of the athletic policy by President Malcolm Love.

The criticism resulted from an article in the November issue of the Sport magazine, which quoted Coach Joe Sheeketski at length on the Nevada football situation.

The Reno attorney said that "Nevada is playing out of its class" and that he would refuse to ask the legislature to appropriate funds to support "a team of this nature."

The main purpose of the meeting was to hear reports and general statements of policy from President Love.

It was generally decided, however, that the football program will continue as it is for the current year, but several changes may be made in 1951.

Dr. Love said, concerning the athletic situation, "It seems that such a program should be conducted for the students who attend the university, rather than as a sideline which brings a semi-professional group of athletes to the campus to play under the name of the university."

"There is no doubt in my mind," he said on the question of subsidization of players, "that most of the schools over the country are doing exactly what the University of Nevada has been attempting to do, but it seems that the lack of adequate financial support freely given without expectation or reward of control has put the university in a vulnerable spot, public relations-wise."

"If the public would accept a type of schedule which is less than 'big time' and it were possible for the university to develop a schedule in this area so that expenses of travel would not be too great, a number of the ills connected with an athletic program could be solved."

The board of regents approved the president's statements on the situation but said that they would consult the athletic board of control before altering the program in any way.

The new president also told the board that the institution needs "an organizational plan which will bring us into fullest cooperation and harmony."

He said that the first and foremost consideration in any decision or policy will be "university integrity."

No college, department or individual will be considered as important as the university, he added.

A University of Nevada expansion program, estimated at about $750,000, was approved last Monday by the state planning board in Carson City. Next step is the 1951 Nevada legislature.

The board gave approval in principle to the construction of a new agriculture and biology building, the enlargement of the engineering building to accommodate an electrical laboratory, and an additional campus greenhouse. Also included is the improvement of roads and grounds on the campus.

Chairman of the planning board, W. T. Holcomb, stated that the program will be forwarded to the 1951 legislature in time for their earliest consideration.

Unemployment of students studied

A student self-help employment agency is being considered by the YWCA.

That's the reason for the student employment survey being conducted on campus.

If a great number of students want work, even occasional jobs or Christmas vacation employment, they feel that there is a demand for such an employment service.

Even if the student has a job, he should fill out the card being sent to him, said Mrs. Marjorie Dickinson, executive director of the YWCA on campus.

"It will complete our files and aid us in determining what the average student wages are on the campus," she added.

Turkish anniversary observed on campus

The 28th anniversary of the founding of the Republic of Turkey was celebrated on campus last Sunday at the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority house.

Tahsin Karacabey, Turkish student and graduate of Nevada, arranged the meeting.

Paul H. Jensen, assistant professor of education, discussed various phases of Turkish-American relationships and spoke particularly on the recent elections in Turkey.

Other guests at the meeting were: George Malone, U. S. senator; Walter Baring, Nevada representative; and Albert Hilliard and Silas E. Ross, both members of the university board of regents.

Campus slow in chest drive response

Falling $240 short of its $500 quota in the Community Chest drive, plans to continue the University of Nevada its campaign. A 40 per cent student donation will more than meet the existing quota, according to Mrs. Marjorie Dickinson, executive secretary of the YWCA.

"The student interest in the Community Chest was evidenced by the large committees willing to serve, but did not hold up because of the other activities on the campus. We are continuing the drive until all students can be reached because I am sure the students are aware of their social responsibility to the 15 agencies represented in the Community Chest," state said.

All representatives of campus organizations will be contacted and asked to extend their efforts in a final drive to reach the quota by the November 15 deadline.

The student center in Stewart Hall, under the direction of the YWCA, is one of the agencies represented in the Community Chest.

Nevada gets more publicity

Albert Hilliard, speaking for himself, but nevertheless as a regent, told the press Joe Sheeketski was bringing disgrace to the university and that the Nevada football team is semi-professional.

That Mr. Hilliard may or may not be right is not the question. That he is helping matters any by focusing the spotlight on Nevada again, is the question.

Of what possible benefit to the university was Mr. Hilliard's statement? What could he possibly hope to gain?

He may have in mind, by his continuous tirades, to arouse public opinion so that it will demand Joe Sheeketski's removal. If this is his aim, he doesn't keep the fire hot enough. Just on occasion, when everything is quiet, he jumps up again and spirts kerosene on the embers.

Or, he may have in mind arousing the Nevadans against football. Reasoning: if they throw football out, Sheeketski wouldn't have a job anymore.

It should be evident to Mr. Hilliard that pretty soon, people who have listened and listened to his denunciations, will begin to wonder why he hasn't done something.

As a matter of fact, there isn't much Mr. Hilliard or any other regent can do alone, or together. They CAN throw out football. But the faculty committee investigating football, has recommended that it remain under the present program and setup. It was so recommended because, they decided, it was the only way they could meet the coaches' salary.

Maybe Hilliard hopes to save Nevada the $36,000 remaining to be paid to Sheeketski by having football thrown out.

But Sheeketski or no Sheeketski, Nevada deserves no more notoriety brought about by blasts such as Mr. Hilliard's. The problem cannot hope to be solved by any more such statements.

It is tiresome to hear over and over—"things like this must be brought out in the open." How much more in the open does this problem have to be? If anything, it will die of exposure.

The position of a university regent is a dignified one. It is a post of extreme prestige. Shaping the policies of a university is a grave responsibility.

However, it cannot be expected that the post will be considered dignified, the policies sound, or the members of the board responsible, when they have not the one essential prerequisite . . . harmony and cooperation.

Harmony and cooperation, in fact, are the very words of the new president of the university. Whether Dr. Love was referring to the present board or not, is not known. If he wasn't, he should have been.

The present board, despite several shameful blunders, still has not seen fit to cooperate to the extent that it has one spokesman. Just as Nevada was beginning to live down a pile of shady publicity, another regent stands up and makes a statement for the record.

One way to avoid bad publicity is to quit making it. That goes for everybody.

ASUN senate hears bookstore deal; will investigate UN student council

By Dave Mathis

Next semester will see Nevada students purchasing texts from their own bookstore reported Ted Klimaszewski, ASUN president, at the regular meeting of the ASUN senate last Wednesday evening.

A committee composed of students and faculty along with the graduate manager are handling the purchase of the University bookstore. At present the store is privately owned, but the owner must sell out because of his health. If all goes well the book store will be under student and finance control board supervision by the new year.

Complaints against solicitors on the campus have been turned into the senate. It was decided that Elaine Mobley, dean of women; and Robert Griffin, dean of men, would form a joint committee to examine all salesmen and solicitors on campus. Salesmen coming on the campus in the future will have to display some token of approval by the deans before they do any selling.

United Nations Council
Definite plans for participation in the collegiate council of the United Nations by the University of Nevada will not be formed until further information concerning the organization can be secured.

Dr. Gale L. Richards, assistant professor of English and debate club coach, was voted by the senate to head a committee for additional study of the council. Dr. Richards will pick his own committee members who will handle all business connected with the collegiate council.

Elections
In coming elections, campaign material not taken down or removed within 48 hours will cost the organization using them two dollars per day until disposed of. Material used in primary elections must be removed two days after candidate is out of the election.

Senators at large Proc Hug and Barbara Carruth were appointed to various boards and committees at the senate meeting. Hug was appointed to the finance control board and Carruth to the publications board, student health board, and administration of student affairs board.

The voting on the proposed amendment to the ASUN constitution concerning student fees will be held Dec. 4, 1950, it was announced by the senate.

Jensen to direct Mexican tour

Dr. Paul H. Jensen, who conducted the European tour for 35 Nevada and California students last summer, will direct a tour through Mexico during the Christmas holidays. The group, made up of professional and business people, will leave by plane from Los Angeles, arriving in Mexico City December 20.

The tour party will be in Mexico ten days.

Nevada officials will attend college meet

Malcolm Love, as president of both a land grant college and a state university, will represent this school at the annual conference of land grant college administrators in Washington, D. C., on November 13 to 17.

Cecil W. Creel, director of agriculture extension, and Charles E. Fleming, director of the agriculture experiment station, have also been appointed to attend the meeting.

The objective of the convention is to aid colleges in understanding and using federal legislation concerning schools. Special problems of the schools will also be discussed.

Problems brought about by the Korean war will compose a large part of this year's program. Delegates say those likely to be brought up are the selective service and compulsory military training as they will affect college students and school enrollment.

The Phi Sigs won the award for the best skit in the Wolves Frolic with their "Basin Street." Of course, Marian Cordes and Merrillyn Bird helped to sway the judges—as who wouldn't be swayed?

The Thin Man, Professor William C. Miller, gave a stagehand the famous "tain't good, tain't bad" look, as they stood back stage during the Wolves Frolic, Friday night. He will be remembered this year for a Frolic so clean, it sparkled, but it sparkled plenty.

The Tri-Delts didn't win any awards for their entry in the Homecoming parade, but the float left a wake of turning heads. Their theme, "Sleigh Those Lions," slayed every male along the parade route.

Doesn't look it either---

Manzanita lake is 40 years old

Manzanita Lake, along with the beautifully landscaped grounds, aids in making the campus of the University of Nevada one of the most picturesque and photogenic in the United States. Views of the lake and campus have been photographed for such movies as "Mergie," "Apartment for Peggy," and "Mother Was a Freshman," produced by Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation.

Manzanita Lake was created during the presidency of Dr. Joseph E. Stubbs in 1910. The lake was originally a muddy pond roughly 40 feet in diameter, just southeast of Artemisia Hall or what is now the extreme north end of the lake. The remainder of the present site of the lake was a field of alfalfa.

In those days, two decades ago, the university, had, in place of modern equipment and machinery, two horses on the asset side of its balance sheet. One horse was used for work on the grounds, such as leveling the campus and dragging the lake; the other pulled the buggy that served Dr. Stubbs as a means of transportation. The alfalfa that then grew where the lake now stands was used as feed for those horses.

Tram Covers Steam Pipes

In 1910 after the heating plant had been built it was necessary to lay steam pipes across the campus to the buildings facing Virginia street. Because of that Manzanita came into being. The tramway that stretches across the south end of the lake from Manzanita Hall to University avenue now covers those steam pipes.

Part of the earth that forms the tramway was taken from what is now the bottom of the lake. The depression caused by this excavation forms the larger part of Manzanita Lake. That section of the campus between the tramway and Ninth street was in 1910 the site of the music department and was very uneven and roughly contoured. Its landscaping also helped to produce the necessary earth with which to build the tramway.

The water that fills Manzanita Lake is the overflow from the Orr ditch that irrigates the farms in the northwest section of Reno. The outlet for the lake is a spillway on its south side; the overflow runs back into the Orr ditch.

The depth of the lake varies from one foot at the north end to 18 feet at a point near the tramway. When the lake was created, the bottom was covered with gravel and rock to prevent seepage.

Mr. Dick Brown, who was superintendent of grounds and master of Lincoln Hall in 1911, is responsible for the flowers and shrubs that enhance the beauty of the lake and that are mirrored in its tranquil waters.

The lake provides an ice rink for the students in the winter months and until 1925 served as a swimming pool during the summer. In that year one Mr. King, a student, drowned in its icy waters. Since then swimming has been prohibited except for initiates who usually do so unwillingly and reluctantly.

In connection with dunking the various initiates, the question has arisen as to the purity of the water. It is the contention of the City Health Department that the water of the lake is free of harmful germs and safe for dunking.

Top advertising and editorial art to be displayed

Top American editorial and advertising art of 1949 will be exhibited here Monday. The exhibit will be held in the art department and is being sponsored by the Fine Arts Club.

Members will be on hand to conduct people through the exhibit during its two week display.

The exhibit is the 29th collection made by the New York Editorial and Advertising Art Association. The display is now on a circuit of the United States and is coming here from the California College of Arts and Crafts.

On the campuses

MICHIGAN STATE COLLEGE—Students of Michigan State College who indulged in Halloween fun last Tuesday night found the joke was on them this week. The police administration department has just bought a lie detector—for teaching purposes. But campus police were told to put the machine to practical use on practical jokers.

LOUISIANA STATE—LSU has accepted the first Negro student in its history. Thirty year old Roy Wilson entered the university law school this week after a federal court ordered the board of supervisors to accept his application. The court denied that the state provides equal facilities in an all-Negro law school.

YALE—The president of Yale University, Whitney Griswold, announced this week that an anonymous donor has given one million dollars to the school for advancement of research in the humanities. The money will provide fellowships for younger members of the faculty.

PEN STATE—A professional thief is behind bars today after a short career as a college fraternity man.

Connecticut and Pennsylvania police nabbed Edward Stack of Detroit during the weekend at the Theta Chi fraternity at Penn State University.

Police say Stack began his round of glad-handing and party-throwing by stealing the credentials of the Theta Chi president at Colgate University. Next, posing as a visiting Colgate man, Stack was welcomed at the chapter house at the University of Connecticut. The following morning $350 was missing.

Thirty year old Stack next turned up at Durham, New Hampshire, where he bought champagne for New Hampshire University students with rubber checks. After his departure, a number of watches and rings were missing.

All Theta Chi chapters were alerted, and police ended Stack's adventure in higher education when he arrived at Penn State.

TEXAS U—The University of Texas board of regents has lifted a ban against Negroes playing football against white teams in El Paso, Texas.

The regents voted six to three to remove the restriction which prevented Texas Western College from playing teams with Negro players. Loyola of Los Angeles recently cancelled a game with Texas Western because the segregation ban would have forced Loyola to leave a Negro player at home.

The lifting of the ban at El Paso did not affect the rest of the state.

WYOMING—A two fold plan is being placed in operation at the University of Wyoming in January to prepare Wyoming against possible atom bomb attacks. The university will offer a one-week course for training key persons from each of the state's 23 counties in radiological defense.

SACRAMENTO—Students representing California junior colleges have voted to oppose any subversive influences which may show up in their schools.

The statement was contained in a resolution adopted, 61 to 40, by the California Junior College Student Government Conference this week in Sacramento.

The resolution explained that subversive influences "call for the violent overthrow of our form of government and we feel obliged to protect ourselves and our colleges from the infiltration of such doctrines."

Opponents said their votes were not intended as defense of communism; they just objected to the wording of the resolution as ambiguous.

indicated this week that they may break off the school's oldest football rivalry when the 1951 schedule is drawn up.

Officials, who asked not to be named, say there is "strong feeling that the College of Pacific Tigers should be dropped from the schedule—at least until the teams are more evenly matched.

Spanish club to see Latin dance steps

Latin dance steps will be shown to students by Dr. Alex D. Dandini, professor of foreign languages, at the next meeting of the Spanish Club on Thursday, November 9. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the snack bar of Stewart Hall.

Nick Carro was elected president of the club at its first meeting of the year on October 4. W. T. Chin was elected secretary, and Dean Pyper will be the new treasurer.

Dr. Lawton B. Kline, professor of foreign language and the new club advisor, showed slides of Mexico.

Tri-Delts hold Hallowe'en party

Halloween was observed at the Tri-Delt house last week, with two parties held there in honor of the holiday.

On Tuesday evening the Tri-Delt women entertained guests with games and dancing. Refreshments were served.

The traditional pledge party was held on Wednesday afternoon with the new Tri-Delt pledges entertaining the pledges from the three other sororities. The house was appropriately decorated with "spooks" and "goblins."

EE's in Bay area on field trip today

Senior electrical engineer students, of the University of Nevada, are visiting several manufacturing plants in San Francisco today and tomorrow.

They left here Thursday afternoon accompanied by Professor Irving J. Sandorf, chairman of the department of electrical engineering.

They will visit a power generation station, a telephone toll and television center, the Westinghouse Sunnyvale plant and the Eitel McCullough Manufacturing plant, all located in San Francisco.

Those who do not stay over for the St. Mary's football game will return home Sunday, November 5.

Drive carefully on your way to the Nevada-St. Mary's game. You may be thrown for the biggest loss—your life.

Wolf Pack secures for a strong Gael

A winless Nevada Wolf Pack, still licking its wounds from a 34-7 setback from the Loyola Lions, will go all out Sunday against the St. Mary's Gaels in an effort to break into the win column.

The Gaels have tied Georgia 7-7, and beat Oregon 18-13. While on the other hand they have lost to COP in their opening game 40-0 and fell before the Loyola Lions 48-0.

St. Mary's will be led Sunday by their sophomore fullback, John Henry Johnson. Johnson, who has been a little short of sensational in his initial year for the Gaels, plays both offense and defense and should cause the Pack quite a bit of trouble. Sam Bombiani, a five-foot five, 135 pounder, will open at left half, while Frank Cassara will start at right. Veteran Dick Jarvis will begin at quarterback.

The Gael forward wall, for the most part, will be inexperienced. John Bergamini, center, is the bulwark of the line. He will be aided by Sam Panovich and John Fanuka, guards, and Gene Verkerk and Ken Miron at tackles.

The Pack concentrated this week on running, in an effort to get that phase of its attack in shape with the starting quartet of Lee Schroder, Herm Fisher, Pat Brady, and Myron Leavitt getting the bulk of the work.

Whether or not Wally Graf, end and chief receiver of Brady's passes, will be able to play this week is still questionable. Graf received a hip injury in the Loyola game.

Carmel Caruso, will open against the Gaels at center, while Gordon Surber and Bob Martin will play the guards and "Punjab" Hairston and Ron Einstoss will hold down the tackle slots. Don Jones and Howard Hartsfield will play the ends.

The squad was bolstered somewhat this week with the return of Dennis Dunlop and Don Moretinni, linemen. Dunlop has been out since the Texas A&M game with a broken ankle, while Moretinni has had a twisted knee since the USF game. Neither are expected to play much this week, but they will be ready for the Montana game November 11.

The University of Nevada is not the only school that is having trouble financing its football teams.

Coach John Baker of the University of Denver, whose team has won one, tied one, and lost five so far this season, recently told the Denver Boosters' Club, "Give me the use of $50,000 a year for three years and I'll give you a football team—if I don't I'll get the hell out."

It seems that Coach Baker is a little fed up with the lack of support on the part of the Denver fans. Strike a familiar tune?

Baker went on to say, "Why, I've had a chance to get some good football prospects right here in Denver, but when a good job couldn't be found for them they shoved off for lush pastures."

It's the same old story of a small college (Denver has an enrollment of 12,000) not having enough funds to compete with the richer and larger schools.

There is little doubt that Coach Baker could turn out a winning team that would bring recognition to his school if he is given the necessary money.

Nevada's problem is similar! Like Denver is now finding out, you can't field a big time grid squad if you don't have the necessary loot.

Fifth man breaks into athletic frat; Elwin Pulsipher passes rigid tests

The University of Nevada will initiate another man into Sigma Delta Psi this semester. Elwin Pulsipher had passed the required tests and is eligible for membership in the national athletic fraternity.

Pulsipher, a Sigma Rho Delta, is the fifth man to join the ranks of members on campus and is the tenth man to successfully complete the requirements since 1948, a period during which some 300 men have tried out for the society.

Requirements for Sigma Delta Psi include the passing of 15 athletic tests which cover almost every type of physical activity, plus a scholarship and posture test.

A few of the events that must be mastered are: broad jump, swimming, dashes, hurdles, mile run, high jump, football and baseball throw, rope climb, hand stand, and front hand spring.

Tryouts for the events are held every Thursday from 4:00 until 5:00, and all regularly enrolled male students are eligible for tryouts.

Other members of the fraternity on campus are: Jerry Wyness, John Gianotti, Bill Jager and Giles Altenburg.

The alumni, fans and friends of the schools will continue to complain about the poor record of the team this year, but they won't drop a couple of bucks into the pot in order to have a winning ball club.

Vandals hit Tri-Delts again

A valuable sleigh, borrowed by the Tri-Delts to use on their Homecoming float, was stolen from in front of the Tri-Delt house Saturday night and recovered the following evening.

The sleigh, which was considered irreplaceable by its owner, James Mortensen, Reno brick contractor, was left in front of the Tri-Delt house after the Homecoming parade and was reported missing at 11:00 p.m. The Tri-Delts immediately called the police, and also started an independent search.

Late Sunday evening an unidentified man called the Tri-Delt house and said the sleigh was in the Mary S. Doten school yard. It was then retrieved by the police and returned to Mr. Mortensen.

Last year pranksters set fire to the Tri-Delt Homecoming float, destroying it, thus preventing its entry in the Nevada Day parade in Carson City.

Pi Phis, SAE's victims of pledge antics

Manners, please! Pi Phis don't always eat with knives, and the SAE members don't make a habit of hunting their meals long after dinner has passed. But that is what happened last Monday night when the pledges of SAE and Pi Phis got together for a party at the Veterans Recreation Hall.

To most the party was a complete surprise.

Little did the SAE's know that their meal would be eaten by Pi Phi pledges. Little did the Pi Phis know that only knives would be left to eat with.

After the active's meetings were over the members endeavored to find those who had gone astray. But it was not until one of the parties in the know broke down and told their location were the actives able to join the pledges for the rest of the party.

Gaels meet Wolf Pack for 28th time since 1908

By Jim Murray
Sports Editor
St. Mary's Collegian

When the St. Mary's Gaels meet the Nevada Wolf Pack in Kezar Stadium this Sunday, it will mark the 28th renewal of a series that began in 1908 when both schools were playings rugby.

It will also be the first time this year that the Gaels will go into the underdog role in their first six games. The Gaels thus far this season have won one, tied one, and lost four.

However, the Gaels have been playing some very tough teams, such as Georgia and California, which are a scourge on any team's schedule. They also met COP, USF and Loyola who have all taken the measure of the Wolf Pack. The lone Gael victory was over the U. of Oregon.

Thus, in all probability Sunday's game between these two schools should be rated about even.

After last Saturday's traditional clash with the Golden Bears of California, Coach Joe Ruetz thinks it will be plenty tough to get the youthful Gaels in a high spirit for this one.

However, the Cal game did much for the men of Moraga, as they uncovered two new sophomores, Halfback Tom Fletcher and Fullback John Ambrose, who can really run with the ball.

Fletcher raced 61 yards late in the fourth quarter to score against the Bears, while Ambrose tallied on a flat pass from quarterback Harry Atkinson early in the third period. Previously Fletcher had been used only on defense while Ambrose, who was a classmate of Stanford's Bob Mathais at prep school, had been riding the bench.

These two men will find the going plenty tough, however, when they try to garner the starting backfield from Sam Bombiani and John Henry Johnson.

Bombiani has proved to be a sensation this year, and looks to be even better than "Spike" Cordeiro was in his days at Moraga.

John Henry has been equally sensational this season, and is considered on a par with Ollie Matson of USF.

The key to victory this Sunday, however, will depend upon the line, and therein lies the Gael weakness. Early in the season Coach Ruetz said that if any injuries were sustained by the line then it would go mighty hard on the Moragans. Hardly had Ruetz spoken these words than first string tackle Ken Mirch suffered shoulder separation, sidelining him for the season.

Since that time end Norm Ingebrigtsen has fractured his ankle, and numerous other linemen have sustained injuries.

However, all but Mirch and Ingebrigtsen will be ready for the Wolf Pack come Sunday.

FRANK CASSARA
St. Mary's Halfback

Frank Cassara, St. Mary's halfback, along with John Henry Johnson, Gael fullback, will provide the bulk of the running attack for the men from Moraga when they meet the Wolf Pack this Sunday.

Gialy cops coffee in snack bar poster contest

Fifty cups of coffee were won by Andy Gialy as first prize in the YWCA sponsored poster contest this week.

Gene Gariott and John Harris tied for second prize. They will each receive 20 cups of coffee or one dollar credit at the snack bar.

Craig Sheppard, assistant professor of art; Keiste Janulis, assistant professor of journalism; and Marjorie Dickinson, YWCA director, judged the posters.

The contest was open to all students on campus and posters submitted were judged on three points: artistic value, commercial value, and value to YWCA in its campaign for a clean snack bar.

All posters entered in the contest are now on display in the snack bar.

No special train for St. Mary's game

Although approximately 350 students have signed for reserved seats at the Nevada-St. Mary's football game in San Francisco, there will be no special train to take them.

University and student authorities decided that the train trip to the Bay City would take too long to be sanctioned officially. The round trip takes approximately 16 hours.

Many students said they felt that the cost of an overnight stay, plus train fare was too much for most collegiate budgets.

Students who are going will take their own cars or else share rides with others.

Band, in full strength, at Kezar Sunday

Nevada's rejuvenated band will be on hand at the St. Mary's-Nevada tilt Sunday at Kezar, according to Felton Hickman, band supervisor and assistant professor of music.

Only a small section of the band, known as the pep section, has traveled to out of town games this year. Mr. Hickman and the band will leave tomorrow.

The band now contains 39 players and 11 flag twirlers and majorettes. This makes a total of 50 members to the marching unit. This year the band has been practicing for performances at half-time activities and parades.

"The students have a very fine outlook for the future of the band, and I'm very proud of the work that they have accomplished this year," said Hickman.

Griffin promises action on traffic violations, speeding, in near future

Action on the traffic situation will be taken soon, according to Dean Robert Griffin, chairman of the committee appointed last week to act on the problem. "We'll meet as soon as we can catch up with business postponed because of Homecoming and Admission Day."

The committee, appointed by the student activity committee is made up of two students and two faculty members. They are Robert Griffin, dean of men; Elaine Mobley, dean of women; Ted Klimaszewski, student body president; and Mark Curtis, Sagebrush editor.

No methods governing speeding and auto violations have been successful in the past. The committee is considering revising university traffic laws to cover more satisfactorily the campus and Victory Heights housing project.

Owl moves in when Willie leaves campus

Puzzling Mackay scientists with his erudite appearance an owl reported to classes today for the fifth time.

His presence on campus is proof that he passed entrance examinations, however his command of English is not yet complete. Reporters attempting to interview the new student had difficulty framing questions that he could understand and were unable to receive any statement other than "who."

This was interpreted to mean that he thought reporters had no authority to question him or that he was having difficulty in finding certain professors from which he is taking classes.

The presence of the owl on campus is another indication of what seems to be a trend in higher education. Alumni will remember the woodpecker in the education building three years ago; Willie, a wolf, enrolled this year but later dropped classes; and the owl is the third to attempt to break into collegiate society.

Annie get your gun

Should the girls be in the trenches?

Because other nations conscripted their women for duty in the armed forces during World War II, some women participating in actual warfare, the idea has been debated, discussed and written that:

"In the event of a third world war, should American women be drafted?"

A prominent lady congresswoman thinks they should. Here's what some Nevada students and alumni think:

Marnie Miller, AWS president: "If there are not sufficient volunteers for essential industries, nursing, and service jobs, I think women should be drafted to meet these needs. However, women should not be used for actual warfare."

Wolfgang E. Schleich and Erich Helfert, exchange students from Germany (who, incidentally, had never heard of our WACs, WAVES, SPARS and lady MARINES): "It should be on a voluntary basis. Women should not be forced into a war. It is bad enough for men."

Joan Love, sophomore: "Only for defense work. Besides, it would be impossible to keep that many women in identical outfits!"

Bill Afflis and John Gonda: "The concept is, women are equal to men, some even superior, so, yes, draft them—for front line duty."

Buelah Haddow Hawkins, Pi Phi alum, '45: "In an absolute crisis, yes, but if it got that bad I think it would be useless anyway!"

Max Dodge, alumni director, '47: "I'm opposed to it in principle, but a third world war would be of such magnitude it would probably be necessary."

Mary Lou Brunton, president of Manzanita: "I think so. There are many positions women can fill, such as office work, to release men who are needed to fight."

Bruce Hicks, freshman: "No. Women should stay home with their families and be morale builders."

Jacque Hickman, senior: "Never! Women should keep the home fires burning!"

Dante discussion

Dante's Divine Comedy and its relation to Twentieth Century moral and ethical problems will be discussed by Dr. Owen Ulph at a meeting of the American Association of University Women, November 6, in the children's room of Washoe county library.

Phi Sigs tops in Wolves frolic

"Basin Street Blues" proved to be the most entertaining of the "Capricious Capers" in the Wolves Frolic Friday night, according to judges. The skit was presented by Phi Sigma Kappa and featured black face jazz blues numbers.

The show, under the direction of Prof. William Miller, lasted slightly more than two hours, and featured seven fraternity skits, one skit by the Pan Hellenic group, five dance choruses, several numbers by the university singers, two duets, and four individual numbers.

The show failed to draw the expected crowd, according to Gene Mastroianni, graduate manager. "We made money, but not the $900 that we expected," Mastroianni added.

There has been some objection to the elimination of separate sorority skits from the Frolic, Mastroianni said. The traditional four sorority skits were replaced by the Pan Hellenic act this year.
