Yes. There's A Santa

(In September 1897, a little girl named Virginia O'Hanlon wrote a letter to the editor of the New York Sun, asking: "Is there a Santa Claus?" In reply Francis P. Church wrote an editorial article that pleased so many readers that the Sun printed it every year at Christmas.)

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

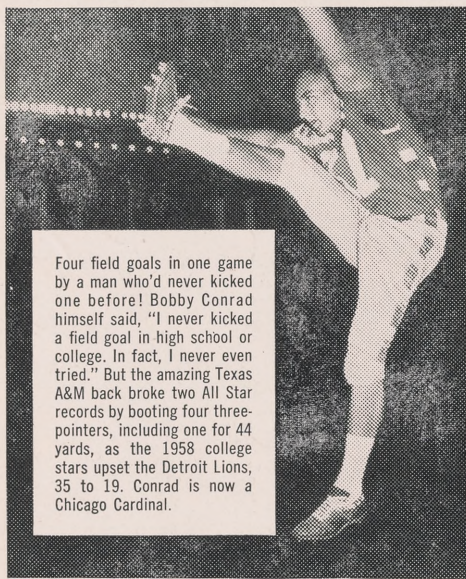

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the super-natural beauty and glory beyond. It is all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Fire Drills Reveal Women's Hall Peril

Fire drills at Artemisia and Manzanita halls last Tuesday have shown that the evacuation of the buildings is too slow for the safety of the residents of the halls in case of fire, according to Dean of Women, Elaine Mobley. "We're not satisfied with it at all, so there will be more drills in the near future," said Dean Mobley. The fire drills were held as a result of the false alarm that was turned in from Manzanita hall the morning of Dec. 4. It was discovered that at that time two women students slept through the blaring of the klaxon horns in the hall.

Capt. Carl Sorensen of the Reno Fire Department spoke to the women of Artemisia and Manzanita halls at a special meeting in the Education auditorium at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. At the meeting he told the women what to do and what not to do during a fire alarm.

After the meeting Captain Sorensen led three other men from the Reno Fire Department in conducting fire drills in the two women's dormitories. It was discovered that the fire alarm gongs in Artemisia hall can no longer be heard in parts of the building because of the installation of fire doors in the halls of the building.

Christmas Party

Five girls, ages 5 to 11 years, were guests at the annual Christmas party for the underprivileged given by members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. The party was held at the fraternity house on Evans avenue last Tuesday evening.

Santa Claus presented toys and a complete outfit of clothing to each of the girls. A turkey dinner with all the trimmings followed the presentation of gifts.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT is portrayed by University students at the Kappa Alpha Theta party at the Century club last week. Accepting a gift from SAE Clark Russell is Valorie Estes.

Travel Problem of Students Heading Home for Holidays

About eight hundred University of Nevada students will be leaving the Reno area this weekend. Many of them will be making trips of over 400 miles. This may not seem very far in this jet and missile age, but it is still about eight hours of hazardous winter driving in an automobile.

"We want 'em back, and all in one piece," said Dean Basta who added that any student planning a trip away from Reno should first check the mechanical equipment of his car, including windshield wipers, lights, tires and brakes and see that set of chains are in the car.

He reminded students that dawn and dusk are the time of day when visibility is limited and therefore the logical time to stop and have breakfast or supper. The dean suggested that students should try to arrange their travel schedule so that night driving would not be necessary. If this is not possible he feels that a stop should be made every two hours for coffee and a short rest.

Dean Basta stated that he was aware that most University of Nevada students were familiar with winter driving conditions, but he would like to remind them to watch for ice on the passes and "always turn in the direction of a skid" on a slippery surface.

Elaine Mobley, dean of women, said "I'll heave a deep sigh of relief when all mf girls are back safe and sound on the fifth of January." She also suggested that students who are delayed by road conditions or other unavoidable circumstances call the university and explain the situation. This would save a lot of worry for parents and staff alike.

SNEA Potluck For High School Groups

The campus chapter of Student National Education association was host last week to Future Teachers of America groups from high schools in Fallon, Yerington, Lovelock, and Sparks.

The meeting and pot-luck dinner was held in the Student Union building and entertainment was furnished by each of the high school groups.

Garold D. Holstine, dean of the college of education, lectured on "Professional Opportunities for Growth in Teaching." In his remarks the dean advised the students that there are exceptional opportunities in the teaching field for the well qualified young person.

Sponsors of the University of Nevada chapter of S.N.E.A. are Dr. Burton C. Newbry, associate professor of education, Miss LeOre Cobbley, lecturer in education, and Donald G. Potter, assistant professor of education.

Manzanita Hall Improvements Set

Manzanita hall will have several improvements by the time students return from Christmas vacation, Robert L. Kersey, director of student services, said today.

Two flood lights will be installed on the Manzanita lake side of the hall, "to lighten the area and to deter any illegal entry on the ground floor," Kersey stated.

Nine study lamps on the wall of the second floor study room are now half completed. And all second floor bed rooms will have their ceilings painted.

Artemesia hall will have a fluorescent fixture for its second floor study room.

'Short Plane Hop' Ends in Smashup

Dr. Burton C. Newbry, associate professor of education, was a passenger in a light airplane that crashed in a field south of Reno last week.

Neither the pilot nor Dr. Newbry was injured, but there was considerable damage to the propeller and undercarriage of the craft.

Dr. Newbry's only comment was that it was an "interesting experience." He added that his seat belt and lots of good luck were probably responsible for the fact that no injuries were suffered.

The flight was meant to be a short Joy-ride.

Lincoln Hall Residents Celebrate; Not Too Wisely and Receive Restrictions

The men of Lincoln hall have been placed on social probation for the remainder of the academic year, following an unauthorized party at a restaurant south of Reno last week. During the party damages in the form of breakage and a theft is said to have occurred.

At a hall meeting last night, Dean of Student Affairs Sam Basta outlined disciplinary measures, and an earlier decision to expel several officers from Lincoln hall was reconsidered. Instead, the 11 members of the hall's executive committee will be forced to do 20 hours work in the dormitory.

Loot At Fraternity

The theft from the restaurant has not been directly blamed on members of Lincoln hall. The missing objects were later recovered at a fraternity house, but there is no indication that any fraternity members will be disciplined, or even if they had any part in the theft.

The disciplinary measures would have come before the recently approved Student Court, but it has not been set up yet, and the office of student affairs has jurisdiction over infractions of the social code.

Editorial

Just before the spring semester closed last school year, the Sagebrush staff joined with Dean Sam Basta in recommending that the main street on campus be closed to traffic. It was the staff's thinking, however, that the street would be closed only during school hours and that it would be reopened at night and during the weekends.

But now, posts have been driven into the street and a chain stretched across what was formerly the only decent thoroughway on campus.

Several letters to the editor were received from students and people downtown last week; too many to be printed. In all cases, the writers complained about the blocking of the street at night, especially when ball games are being played in the new gymnasium.

One writer stated that more people would show up for the games if they weren't afraid that during the contests Virginia street, too would be closed, causing them to make their way home via Susanville. The others only complained about the traffic jams on Virginia street after the games. Their complaints are certainly valid, for there is no sense in closing the street when classes are finished for the day. There are not enough night classes to necessitate 24-hour closure.

When the barrier was constructed, it was to protect students as they changed classes and to keep motorists from disrupting classes with their loud mufflers. One student was actually knocked to the street when he walked into the rear fender of a passing car, but then, this is probably not the fault of the motorist. But the closing of the street did remove the chance for other accidents.

It is understood that permanent closing of the "main drag" is the work of the traffic committee, which, like most committees here, is heavily influenced by Dean Basta. Certainly, the committee should reconsider and order the street opened after school hours. It would alleviate the traffic jams on Virginia street after ball games. It would also allow tourists to drive through the campus during the weekends, giving them a chance to view the beauty the campus offers.

Of course, opening and closing the streets at the various hours would make it necessary for our two patrolmen to alight from autos occasionally, but this might give them a chance to see some of the burglars who have been active on campus the past month or two.

By closing the street, the traffic committee is creating a traffic problem rather than solving it. The sooner the barrier comes down, the better will be the attendance at athletic events, for no one wants to drive up here just to get tied up in traffic.

Dear Editor:

As an engineer I take great pride in keeping my nose ordinarily in Skunk Hollow where it purposely belongs, but recent events on this campus have become so odious that even the skunks have migrated. Last week's election was the culminating event to a sad state of affairs. Over 1200 students turned out earlier this Fall to elect a fine Homecoming Queen, but only 700 bothered to express themselves on a far more consequential issue.

As one of the 274 may I congratulate you for your singlehanded stand for equality and belatedly offer my support in this issue.

This campus has a dean of student affairs of all students regardless of affiliation or lack of it. If the dean's office is so overwhelmed with dispositions as to require outside help, possibly the mechanism generating these dispositions should be overhauled. But I don't believe the dean has so many dispositions as to necessitate a student court. In this case where is the need? The cry of democratic student handling of their own affairs has no founding. May I point out that we have a republican type of student government dominated by vested factions. These interests suit themselves until their snobbish appercarts are upturned by an inflamed mass action.

The dean derelicted his responsibility to impartial administration by his shocking support of this faction-backed issue. This support seems to some, if you please, a betrayal of the Independents and a handling over en masse to pinned interests.

We need government. But let's have good government which represents all equitably and which brings to all those objectives which are the purpose of government.

To this end let us clean house Dr. Whipple; those who are willing these "inside burglaries," revamp the Cow Hall situation and eradicate other foul situations rather than build our house of cards ever larger by the conquest of unshorn sheep!

Since the Independent's attempts to associate last Spring were flushed down the drain, please accept my meager enclosure to form "The Committee of 274 For Good Government." Possibly with dimes and quarters from other contributors, publicity to stimulate more responsive government can be obtained.

Respectfully yours,
Delano Edward Whipple.

(Ed note: Writer Whipple's contribution will be turned over to charity. We do not want to start a fund-raising campaign, but we do want students to be aware of the actions of "student leaders" on campus. We feel that even though the student court was accepted by the few who voted, there is little reason to doubt that the court would have been railroaded through the Senate without a student election if an objection had not been raised by the SAGEBRUSH staff. All we need on campus are a few more students like Mr. Whipple; those who are willing to speak out against the actions of those in student government who are not considering students as they carry out their "duties."

Public Forum

Editor:

Let us, the members of the IFC, start by saying that your editorial of Friday, Dec. 12, 1958, had many justifications on the attendance of students to the basketball games. However, we feel that your entire editorial was directed toward the fraternities and sororities and not to the student body as a whole.

You stated that "There are many weekends that the basketball squad will be traveling to other schools. This seems the logical time for fraternity and sorority frivolity, if there is any logic in it." Here you speak of logic—please tell us any more logical time for Christmas formals than at Christmas time. "Many weekends"—the only away game schedule for the month of December is on the 18, 19, and 20, when many students will be gone for the holidays. Logic?

Fraternal members, as all students, appreciate the long and hard hours that the basketball team puts into their practices, because a large percentage of the players are fraternity men, most of which are excused from any house participation so that they can make these practice games.

Within a matter of ten days, there were 6 games on the agenda, two of which were on school nights. There seems to be an abnormal amount of tests being given these days. We are not saying that it is the fault of the Athletic Department for the scheduling of games. They can have games only when other schools can come to Reno. Nor are we saying that the faculty should not have exams because of attendance, after all, education is what we're here for.

We would like to remind the editor that during the football games there were no fraternity or sorority dances. Also that two fraternities required all of their members to attend the games and wear white shirts. Also at 95 percent of the games, there were very few seats available.

Reverting to the present basketball situation, let us also remind you that there are over a thousand non-affiliated students — where are they? On evenings when there were no dances of any sort, the attendance was just as poor.

As far as support is concerned, what has the Sagebrush done in the way of urging more students to attend games. Many students look to the Sagebrush for school spirit—if it isn't there—well!

Instead of the recent banner headline which only served to further the editor's already well-known feelings on the student court, why couldn't he have used the space for some encouragement or constructive criticism on the situation. How about a picture or two sometime also? The Sagebrush should be for the entire student body and not for particular feelings of one or two staff members.

The IFC does not want to push the blame on any of the non-affiliated students for the lack of game attendance either. We would like to urge all students, affiliated and non-affiliated, to attend all University of Nevada athletic events. Three cheers and a big hurrah for the townspeople. At this time the IFC would like to say "thanks" for their wonderful support. We hope they'll keep it up. We are sure that if they love sporting events that it won't make a bit of difference to them if the place is packed with students or not.

Let us assure you that there will be no fraternal dances or activities during the collegiate boxing tourney.

In closing, let us state that this letter was not written to up the circulation or be the main topic of criticism for the coming issues of the Sagebrush.

Work With Natural Uranium Projected

The University of Nevada can add its name to the list of universities working with natural uranium.

The school has received three tons of the element for use in its newly-installed nuclear reactor, according to Dr. Sigmund W. Leifson, chairman of the department of physics.

Final placement of the uranium into the reactor will be supervised by Mr. Paul Bessert of the Nuclear-Chicago Corporation home plant in Chicago. The supply comes in the form of slugs encased in aluminum. During use, it will be surrounded by water. The water acts as a shield in the stainless steel tank of the nuclear reactor.

The physics department will use the reactor in teaching nuclear physics and engineering courses.

The unloading of the uranium was done by faculty and students of the department under the supervision of Dr. Thomas V. Frazier, associate professor of physics.

Annual Serenade

Sigma Alpha Epsilon serenaded campus sororities Monday night. The serenaders were clothed in red-and-white-striped night caps with "SAE" printed on them.

The songsters performed candle light ceremonies and sang several songs from a popular Christmas album. The SAE's left a Christmas tree, decorated with burning candles, and a record at each sorority house.

New Dormitory Preliminary Study Gets Underway

Preliminary studies have begun on the possibility of constructing a new women's dormitory, according to Mr. James Rogers, university engineer. The proposed unit would be constructed on the site of the present university Dining Hall, between Artemesia and Manzanita halls.

The 1957 state legislature approved the sale of up to $660,000 in bonds for a new women's dormitory. The bonds would be paid off from revenue from the women's dorms. Present income from the dorms however, indicates that an expenditure of no more than $600,000 could be justified at this time.

"Revenue is the problem," said Mr. Rogers. "If the new unit as well as the existing dormitories could be filled, revenue would then be of little problem." Housing for about 160 women would be provided in the new unit.

"We're now in a stage of seeing if we can justify it," Mr. Rogers continued. "We'll have to be sure we can fill it."

Recent surveys indicate that enrollment of students on this campus will greatly increase in the next few years.

There is provision in the 1959-60 budget for remodeling of Artemesia hall, the oldest of the two women's dorms, but Mr. Rogers said that the remodeling would have to be put off until a new dorm could be built. The remodeling would take about a year to complete.

No Plans

"No real plans have been developed, but we expect to have a modern type building for the new dormitory," he said.

Construction on the new unit probably will not start for about two years if it is decided that a new dormitory is needed for women students. The present dining hall would first have to be torn down, and that won't be possible until the new one is built.

New Organization Formed To Take Over Literary Magazine Publication

A new organization is now handling the publication of the University of Nevada's literary magazine, "Brushfire." Dr. Charlton G. Laird, professor of English, said the organization was formed last week to get a solid group behind the publication.

Work will be primarily handled by the University English club, from which will come the magazine's editor, business manager, and editorial board.

A policy board was set up to supervise in the magazine's composition and to name the staff through the recommendation of the English club.

Harold Robinson, a junior majoring in English, was selected as editor by the policy board yesterday. Benjamin R. Bingaman was also considered as a possible editor.

The "Brushfire" was started during the latter part of the 1940's by three returning GI students. However, its publication was soon taken over by the students and the faculty.

This system continued until the administration of Dr. Minard Stout, former president of the University of Nevada. Then the activity was handled in an unorganized manner, with the editor selected through informal understanding of the students concerned.

Perhaps the motivating factor leading to the formation of the new system was the fact that the magazine did not come out on schedule last spring. Also a controversy arose concerning a certain story which happened in the issue.

This organization will put the "Brushfire" solidly in the hands of a student group, continued Dr. Laird. In this effort, the English club seemed the most probable.

The English club is opened to anyone interested in the "Brushfire," added Laird. "We want to obtain as much copy as possible."

Lively Sale Student Art Work Is Held

Close to one-hundred-fifty pieces of student art work were sold during the three-day Beaux Art sale last week. The inventory included oils, watercolors, drawings, serigraphs, lithographs, sculpture, and block prints. Receipts for the sale reached $321.05.

Prof. J. Craig Sheppard, chairman of the art department, said that he believed the large number of sales were due to the increased publicity this year.

The money from the art sale will be used for the second annual Beaux Arts ball, said Tania Skrabak, Beaux Arts club president. Last year the ball was held in the Holiday hotel. Plans for this year's ball have not yet been made.

A portion of the art sale money will go to buy art magazine subscriptions and films.

IFC Scheduling to Alleviate Conflicts

Scheduling of organization functions will be regulated closely next semester so as to limit conflicts with athletic events. This was decided at an Interfraternity council meeting last Tuesday, announced Bill L. Adams, IFC president and director of public relations and student activities.

It is unfortunate that functions detract from game attendance, however it cannot be averted entirely, stated Adams. "Christmas events are traditionally held before Christmas and although attendance was lowered at previous games, I believe that more students will attend in the future," said Adams.

It was brought out that the student court approved last week will not have jurisdiction over IFC or Panhellenic rules. Samuel L. (Sam) Basta, dean of student affairs, stated that fraternities should handle their own discipline problems. If they do not, IFC will handle the situation. If they in turn, neglect the chore, Dean Basta himself will intercede, he said.

Fire security in the fraternity houses was discussed. It was strongly urged that fire drills and checks on fire hazards and state laws be put into action.

Home Economists Hold Meeting

Facts of university life and how to get them across to the girls back home was the theme of last week's Home Economics club meeting.

Meeting last Thursday in the Home Economics building, the club discussed how best to present a true picture of the aims of home economics majors in particular, and the importance of higher education in general.

Dr. Patricia Tripple, associate professor of home economics, and advisor to the group, said that club members, fanning out across the state for Christmas holidays, will spread information about the university to high school students in their home towns.

Southern Rebels Defeat LDS Cage All-Stars, 82-70

After four straight losses, the University of Nevada Southern basketball team broke into the win column last Monday.

The Las Vegas Rebels defeated the LDS All-Stars by a score of 82 to 70. This was the team's first victory after losing two games apiece on previous weekends to Snow college and the University of Southern Utah.

This is the first year of competition for the Southern Nevada squad and only one player can be called a veteran. He is Bernie Fumagelli, who has led the team in scoring in all its contests and scored thirty-five points in the game against the LDS All-Stars.

Fumagelli who stands 6-2, played on the University of Nevada freshman team last year before returning to Las Vegas, his home town. Fumagelli was an all-stater for Basic high school during his senior year.

The Rebels are coached by Chub Drakulich, who plans to bring his charges to Reno to play the Nevada Frosh team in February.

Sigma Nu Win Cinches Intramural Basketball

Sigma Nu defeated Sigma Alpha Epsilon 47 to 25 to cinch the intramural basketball championship. The victory left SN with a perfect basketball record of seven wins and no losses.

It's victory leaves SN only 20 points behind Alpha Tau Omega in the Kinnear Trophy race.

The final results of the basketball race are:

Organization	W	L	Pts.
Sigma Nu	7	0	100
Sigma Alpha Epsilon	6	1	60
Independents	5	2	40
Alpha Tau Omega	4	3	20
Lambda Chi	3	4	10
Beta Alpha Nu	2	5	—
Theta Chi	1	6	—
Phi Sigma Kappa	0	7	—

Sports Spotlight

An undefeated Wolf Pack team. Seven victories in a row, and not one loss. The Nevada cagers have shown a great deal of promise to the fans attending the recent basketball games, but for the amount of work that goes into making a basketball team as good as ours is, the attendance has been very poor on the part of the student body.

Tuesday night's game against Redlands was probably the best attended game of the season, thus far, and there were nearly as many townspeople there as students.

Nevada's basketball team has a record of being traditionally fine, and this season may prove to be one of the best in years, and yet the student body does little to bolster morale by showing up for the games. An undefeated team is a rare-enough entity at Nevada, and when one comes along that shows the potential that this year's team does, the students should back it up.

The really interesting person to watch during the game, however, is sitting on the bench. He won't notice you looking, either, because he is critically intent upon the happenings on the floor. I am talking about Jake Lawlor.

Jake's face reflects every moment of the game, just by looking at him a person can tell if Nevada is up to par, and if there's something he doesn't like. If there is, he'll let you know about it with a bellow of rage and waving arms. His face can reflect fierce anger one moment, and the next be a wide grin over an incident on the floor.

At any rate, he is there, and this is one of the main things Nevada has to be thankful for. We all owe tribute to a great coach and a wonderful guy, Jake Lawlor.

A look at the individual players on the Pack squad reveals a lot of depth, stamina, and all-important, experience.

Stan Summers, Nevada's big center, ignored the arm-holding, slapping, hacking, and charging tactics of his many guards until the second half of the game with Redlands when he was being guarded a little too closely when he didn't have the ball. Suddenly, his tal guard doubled up with his arms across his stomach and staggered drunkenly away from Stan. The towering center's elbow, apparently, had found a mark. After that incident, the Redlands players had a little more respect for the tall Nevadan, who continued to drill the basketball through the hoop with uncanny accuracy.

Val York, in the Redlands game, turned in his usual fast, spirited performance, sparking many beautiful plays, intercepting and blocking passes with his hands and feet, which takes some doing! Whenever he is on the defensive, Nevada fans can be sure of fast action and some brilliant steals.

Bob Ferrari, undoubtedly one of the fastest and most aggressive players on the team, is a real crowd-dazzler as he moves the ball toward the basket. Either shooting, dribbling, or passing, he is a big threat to any team.

Forward Bob Ritchie was all over the floor against Redlands, dominating the backboards and setting up some beautiful plays for the Pack. Especially worthy of mention was his brilliant shooting against Redlands when he racked up 3 perfect baskets in a row in beautiful swan-like movements from 25 to 30 feet out. He can drill the ball in with incredible accuracy doing those graceful jump shots, and is at all times a real scoring threat.

Ken Longero, muscular guard for the Wolf Pack, did some fine guarding and placed some impressive two-handed set shots through the basket from all angles.

Bob Lyon, who played a very active game against Redlands, showed proof of his ability as a forward by accomplishing a beautiful fade-away shot during the game as well as helping greatly to control the backboards for Nevada.

Chuck Walker, exceptionally strong off the backboards, did little shooting in the Redlands game, but was in there playing all the way as evidenced by the crashing fall he took in a mad scramble for the ball under the basket.

Once, I mentioned in this column that if "lightning struck" or if a few of the Sigma Nu bowlers would break some bones, that the team would be defeated. The big opportunity to break the long, long winning streak for a second time came last Wednesday night, when the team showed up without team captain, Ed Thomas. He broke his toe at home when he ran into a door. If I were to tell all the circumstances surrounding the incident, I am sure the "Brush" would get sued and I would have to hide out for a long time.

It goes almost without mentioning that they won, bowling the second highest game of the league season (917) and "nudged" Phi Sigma Kappa for a 3-game win.

Incidentally, the team to watch in this league is the SAE's. They are hot this year.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT INTRAMURAL BOWLING

Sigma Nu seems to be off on another winning streak in the intramural bowling league. This week's three-game sweep over Phi Sigma Kappa gave the Sigma Nu team eight straight wins. Its last streak earlier this season was stopped at eighteen games.

In other games played Wednesday night the Independents won a forfeit series from Beta Alpha Nu. The winners were led by Bill McQuaid with a 221 high game, and a 598 high series. Sigma Alpha Epsilon defeated Alpha Tau Omega 2-1, and P.E. Majors defeated Civil Engineers 2-1.

Tree Decorations
Brighten Campus

Adding to the Christmas spirit on the campus is a 100-foot string of Christmas lights in one of the large blue spruce trees in front of the old Agriculture building.

The University of Nevada built a nativity scene on the lower campus across the street from the old bookstore in past years, but vandalism caused the custom to be discontinued.

Feeling the need for some sort of Christmas decoration on campus however, the Student Union board voted to finance the cost of the lights.

The office of Buildings and Grounds assembled the lights and wire and hung the lights as their gift to the campus. The Sierra Pacific Power company loaned the crew an extension ladder truck to aid in stringing the lights in the large tree.

Bob Kersey, director of Student Union, said that the lights would be used after Christmas to light the patio now being constructed on the lake side of the Student Union building.

Experts Question Supposed Viking Petroglyphs

"Vell, by yumping yimminy, Nils, ve haf found it!" So spoke Snorri Jodfar to his six companions as the Viking expedition peered down into a fertile valley in Western Nevada. Only it wasn't Nevada then, for this was about the year 986 A. D.

Impossible? Not according to a Professor Nels Forbakken of Oslo University. Professor Forbakken travelled through northwestern Nevada last summer investigating the "Indian writings" or petroglyphs found in caves and on rocks in parts of the area. From his observations he has theorized that these petroglyphs, especially those near Virginia City, were put there almost a thousand years ago by an expedition of Vikings such as those who left records in Canada, New England, and Minnesota.

Professor Forbakken's ideas were published in a weekly newspaper of a small former mining town, not far from Reno.

"The similarity to certain patterns used by the North Men is too strong to be coincidental," says Forbakken.

"I believe that these writings were inscribed by the 'lost' Snorri Jodfar party sometime after 1986 A. D. Jodfar and six companions, according to existing evidence, had proceeded westward in that year in search of a 'great sea' they believed to exist there."

However, according to Forbakken's theory, by the time the party had reached what is now Nevada the starch had gone out of the Viking determination. They were willing now to just find a place to quench their thirst, much less a "great sea."

Thus, the battle-ax-bearing fore-runners of the Lewis and Clark expedition settled in a spring-fed, grassy valley about fifteen miles north of Virginia City. A quarter-mile long cliff runs along one side of the valley, and on this the Vikings left their records for posterity.

This is Professor Forbakken's theory.

The University of Nevada has no archeologists per se, but those interested in the field, and to some extent qualified to speak, had this to say:

"I am dubious in the extreme," said Dr. E. Richard Larson, U. of N. associate professor of geology. "It is hard to visualize Vikings clanking about this area a thousand years ago, while no one can say for certain they weren't. Insofar as Nevada petroglyphs go, I have a sneaking suspicion that they were done by Indian doodlers, as they leaned against a rock waiting for a rabbit to lope by."

Dr. Ira La Rivers, associate professor of Biology, who shares with Dr. Larson an interest in archeology, shares also his opinion concerning the petroglyphs. "I'd bet they're just doodles. Doodles with a purpose, perhaps, but done by Indians."

Engineering College Officials Meet To Discuss Conditions With Committee

Dean Howard B. Blodgett, professor of civil engineering and dean of the College of Engineering, met early this month with a group of leading citizens of Nevada to discuss conditions in the college.

Meeting for the first time with the Citizens Advisory committee, the dean discussed the pros and cons of the recent McHenry report as it affects the College of Engineering, and the accreditation report from the Engineers Council for Professional Development.

The members of the committee were given a brief history of the college, an outline of its present organization, and a resume of needs for the future.

The advisory committee is just one of a group of state-wide committees that have been formed for each of the colleges and schools at the University of Nevada. Members of the councils were recommended by the deans and faculty and approved by the board of regents.

The first meeting of the Citizens Advisory Committee for the College of Education has been set for 10 a.m. Jan. 9.

The fifteen members of the committee will represent various civic, professional, and business groups from all areas of the state of Nevada.

Garold D. Holstine, dean of the college of education, called the meeting to elect a chairman and secretary, decide on procedures for future meetings, and secure information pertinent to teacher education curricula at the university.

Hearing Loss Tests Are Completed

Screening for hearing loss among prospective secondary and elementary teachers has just been completed. The testing of students from the College of Education was conducted by Bernard Anderson, assistant professor of speech.

The students were also tested for difficulty in articulation which might hamper them in teaching. The speech and drama department is offering a clinic course, speech 109, for students who need individual help in articulation. The one-credit course is offered each semester.

The screening tests for hearing loss were conducted with a new audiometer. The audiometer was bought jointly by the speech and drama department, the College of Business Administration, the College of Education, and the state-wide development program. The audiometer measures the threshold at which a person begins to hear sound. Charles A. Chester, speech student, assisted Professor Anderson with the tests.

The hearing and articulation tests will become a permanent program, Professor Anderson added.

Library to Remain Open Over Holiday

The University of Nevada library will be open over the holidays Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of each week. The hours will be from 8 to 12 mornings, and from 1 to 5 afternoons.

Mr. James J. Hill, director of libraries, says that the library will be liberal in checking out books to be used over the vacation. He says from past experience more students will probably use the library the one or two days before New Year Eve than during the week before.
