

Beaver Bowl to be called off?

Downers face Judicial Council

BY TOM WIXON
Political Reporter

The Student Judicial Council meets at 2 p.m. today to hear charges against the Sundowners, campus fellowship organization, arising out of events which took place during membership try-outs last weekend.

Dean of Men Michael Laine has placed the organization on interim social suspension until the next meeting of the council, which was scheduled for Nov. 1.

Steve Katzmann, Sundowner president, was notified of the suspension Wednesday morning. Wednesday afternoon Todd Russell, chairman of the council, announced the meeting had been moved up to Friday, Oct. 25.

The Sundowners are sponsoring the annual Beaver Bowl football game between Greek and Independent women, which is scheduled for Saturday.

Laine said interim suspension means "no participation or sponsorship of any social activity or function, including organizational activity, until the council meets in session and performs their function. Their function is initiation or recommendation of disciplinary action."

He said the Sundowners are not officially charged with anything, pending the council's investigation.

"I'm simply taking a preventive measure to halt the organization's activities for an interim period of time until the necessary facts and documentation from other people on campus as well as myself can be brought before the Judicial Council."

He said no charges have been made prior to the meeting to avoid prejudicing the hearings.

Katzmann said the suspension came about because of the Beaver Bowl.

He said both Laine and Roberta Barnes, dean of women, suggested to him two weeks ago that the Beaver Bowl be dropped, and added that Miss Barnes had contacted the sororities and asked them to vote on the matter.

"All the girls voted for it," Katzmann said. "They want to play. They (Laine and Barnes) didn't want to take the responsibility of calling off the Beaver Bowl, they want it to look like the Sundowners caused it to be called off because we're 'bad boys'."

He said the Beaver Bowl issue is the reason the charges have been brought up, and that the charges centered around an automobile accident which involved people who were returning from the try-outs last weekend. He also said further charges were being made concerning Sundowner use of "foul language at a football game and being drunk at the Comic Rodeo."

Katzmann said he has letters from the chairman of the Comic Rodeo and the president and vice president of the Aggie Club "vouching for our good behavior and cooperation," and said they have offered to stand up for the organization at the council meeting.

"I realize once in a while someone will get out of line, but that's no reason to blame the Sundowners," he said. "If a student goes downtown and gets drunk, they don't blame President (N. Edd) Miller."

"If the dean of men and the dean of women don't want the Beaver Bowl it's too bad they don't have the guts to stand up and say so."

Katzmann said the Sundowners have raised $100 for the Rally Committee to help them go to Hawaii for a football game this season. In addition, he said the Sundowners held a blood drive last year on campus for one of its members who had leukemia and donated extra blood to the Washoe County Blood Bank. The Sundowners are now working on a plan to promote a Fred Williams scholarship (Williams was a former member and football player for Nevada. He was killed in Vietnam.), and to donate a flagpole for Mackay Stadium in Williams' honor.

"When something goes wrong, you always hear about it," he said, "but whenever the Sundowners do something good, no one knows it."

He said his organization has had to constantly battle university administrative officials. "I'd rather take the Sundowners off campus than have to fight them (officials) all the time."

Laine said the fact that the council is meeting the day before the Beaver Bowl shows that Katzmann is "way off base" on the issue.

"The council is going out of its way to be more than fair," Laine said. "This is not a personal vendetta. Under the circumstances, I'd have taken the same action last year, or two months from now."

He said there isn't any one issue, that an accumulation of events came to a head last weekend and action had to be taken.

He said the Sundowners are "innocent until proven guilty, and they can only be proven guilty by the Judicial Council. I don't know what the outcome will be."

Miller and Humphrey explain budget proposal to Senate

University President N. Edd Miller and Chancellor Neil D. Humphrey addressed the ASUN Senate at a special meeting of the student legislative body Wednesday night.

Miller and Humphrey attended the meeting and explained the importance of Question 2 which will be on the November ballot, the university budget, university reorganization and the need to establish parity between the Las Vegas and Reno campuses.

Question 2 requires only that approval of the voting public would increase the state bonded indebtedness from one per cent to three per cent.

This would increase what's left of state monies from six million dollars to $38 million, of which the university might receive as much as one half.

Miller and Humphrey demonstrated the need for this by pointing out that Nevada rated low on the scale in the west in professorial wages.

Additionally, more money would mean an accelerated construction plan on both campuses.

The chancellor's cabinet, comprised of the chancellor, both university presidents and the director of DRI, and the Board of Regents have listed an Education building on the NSU campus as first priority.

Second on the list is addition of another wing to the as yet unbuilt Physical Sciences Complex.

In other senate business, Bob Shriver gave the report of Ted Dixon, first vice president, who was absent. Shriver discussed the Wednesday meeting of Publication Board at which the Sagebrush and Editor Tim Countis were criticized for overplaying a love-in and underplaying Homecoming.

Nye Hall Senator Steve Schweer said of Countis' coverage that he has "given the university a black eye." Schweer continued to say that the Sagebrush is portraying the university as a "leftist organization."

Shriver also said the Finance Control Board has recommended an increase in the salaries of the senators-at-large. The raise would be from $50 to $100 per semester. This will be referred to senate for approval at a future date.

Senators Jim Hardesty and Dave Slemmons jointly proposed that senate support Question 2. The senate unanimously resolved to back the proposal.

President N. Edd Miller and student Senators Dave Slemmons and Lance VanLydegraf confer at the ASUN Senate meeting Wednesday.

Wallace committee attacks Wolfe series

The public condemnation of the appearance of a prominent Negro educator on the University of Nevada campus last week by representatives of an ultra-conservative political party brought immediate rebuke from a university official.

Members of the Washoe County Central Committee of the Independent American Party of Nevada, representing presidential candidate George Wallace, took a stand against the recent lectures by Dr. Deborah Wolfe, and called for legislative condemnation of the Board of Regents and university for allowing her appearance.

Dr. Wolfe, professor of education at Queens College, New York, spoke to university students Oct. 13 through 18. Her lectures centered on racial prejudices, campus disturbances and interracial marriage.

In her talk at the King Memorial Lecture Series last Thursday, Dr. Wolfe responded to a question by saying riots, in historical perspective, had proven of some constructive value.

The Wallace campaign committee, represented by local John Birch Leader Dr. John DrTar, took issue of these remarks as being a "free forum for advocates of anarchy and rioting."

forum for advocates of anarchy and rioting."

Dr. Harold Kirkpatrick, acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, said in response of the proposed legislative resolution, "It is outrageous," and was not worth commenting on further.

Kirkpatrick did add that "DeTar will become the laughing stock of Reno."

Dr. Fred Anderson, chairman of the Board of Regents, declined comment.

Idealistic movement

There is a revolution taking place in this country which is unlike any revolution ever to occur anywhere.

It is not a revolution of economics or politics or class struggle although these are manifestations of the revolt.

Rather it is a revolution of love. It is a revolution of brotherhood.

Those within the movement see the need for new foundations to human understanding. They see that men can no longer function as separate entities, out of self interest. They see other men as their brothers--in the most literal sense of the word.

They feel the pain themselves when one of their brothers is beaten over the head with a nightstick, they feel the pain when they see their brothers rotting in ghettos of human deprivation, they feel the pain when their brothers' flesh is mutilated in primitive war, and they feel the pain when their brothers are shut in cells for saying what they believe.

But most of all they feel great compassion for the perpetrators of these injustices--for they too are brothers, and their fratricide cuts to the quick of human compassion.

It is of course an idealistic movement and an emotional one. But it is tempered by a strong intellectual awareness which realizes the necessity for human understanding. And it professes the purest and the greatest of human emotions--love.

Those outside the movement are afraid to look inside because they are afraid to look at themselves, for what they might find would be a denial of their dogmatic conscience.

They are unable to reason for themselves as individuals, though they may deceive themselves into thinking they do. They are still strongly tied to the maternal apron strings of Mother America, and it is easier to follow than to reason independently.

The outsiders are frustrated to think there just might be another way, and the frustrations manifests itself in nihilism... "Kill those damn hippies!" "Burn the draft dodgers!" "Deport those pseudo-intellectuals!" Logic is lost to rhetoric.

It is said that the revolutionists hate America, and wish to bring it crumbling to its knees. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The revolutionists love this country with deep patriotic passion. That is why they stay here, to seek change. But it is not the type of patriotism which prompts us to put plastic American flags on the porch on Memorial Day, nor the type of patriotism which proclaims "My country right or wrong," nor the type of patriotism which asks us to blindly march to our death "to protect the folks back home." These things are meaningless to the movement because they simply don't ring true.

The movement wants to liberate the mind to the true meanings of patriotism--patriotism of the conscience. It wants to make justice the justice of equality. And it wants to make true brothers out of the citizens of this country. A country allegedly founded on the premise of brotherhood.

But how does the movement cope with a nihilistic opposition which refuses to see these truths as they really are? It is not easy, but the movement has one big advantage--understanding.

We have seen what they are seeing now. But where we have found better ways they are still bogged down in the rhetoric of the past. We must understand their lack of understanding.

We must realize their frustrations and hang-ups. We must live our lives the way we ultimately know they should be lived, and hope they will learn by example. It cannot be forced, for that would defeat our purpose.

Letters to the editor's desk

A question of faith, not logic

I know that God lives, that He hears and answers prayers; that He has personal contact with men. I know these things through personal experience. It has taken many years for me to gain this testimony of God and His love for all men. I have attempted logic, reason, intellectual analysis; but these are not enough.

A man can use "pure logic" to explain or disavow anything and everything. Our personal beliefs are all different and vary according to background, knowledge and experience. Thus "pure logic" is inevitably tempered by these individual prejudices. Human reason is far too limited by lack of understanding and knowledge for us to rely on it alone so heavily.

I was an atheist for many years, until certain circumstances occurred which made me say I know God lives. I know through my own experiences. I no longer feel any need for a logical explanation of this fact because I know that there are so many things which are yet beyond human understanding.

However, I am not through examining the evidence; I will never just rest with the knowledge I have. A firm belief in God grows stronger as each new proof appears.

We need go no further than ourselves to prove God's existence. Externals need be dealt with only after personal experience. In his recent article on God, Yogesh Swarup deals only with externals, he has apparently never attempted personal contact with God which I, as one of many, know is possible.

Only a sincere and open minded desire for truth coupled with continuous study, and most essentially, with prayer can really answer questions about the supernatural. Human logic simply presents your own limited knowledge in a methodical order; it does not even pretend to deal with more than one aspect of the question.

If you really want the truth, ask God. Get on your knees and humble your arrogant logic before Him.

I testify to you that He'll answer, and you'll know!

Faculty apathy

Editor:

Tuesday evening the political science department gave the community an opportunity to meet the candidates for the state legislature and the Board of Regents of the university.

While there was a representative number of students in the audience, the attendance by faculty members was almost zero.

Are we really that apathetic? Do we really not care enough about who sets the policies of the university to hear the views of the candidates?

If this is true then we really have no right to complain about those policies.

We stand corrected

Editor:

The Tuesday, October 15, 1968, edition to the University of Nevada Sagebrush quotes me as President of the Reno Young Republicans as having stated that students from the Reno and Nevada Southern University campuses drafted the platform plank adopted by the Nevada Young Republican Federation Convention to the effect that the issue of the 18-year-old vote should be left to the decision of the people of the State by way of their ballot.

The above referenced quote is inaccurate and far from the truth. The Young Republican organizations of the Reno and Nevada Southern campuses strongly advocated and fought for a platform plank endorsing the right of 18-year-olds to vote. The plank adopted by the Convention was vigorously opposed by the Reno and Nevada Southern delegations.

Yours very truly,
Frank J. Fahrenkopf, Jr.

Point missed

Open letter to Yogesh Swarup:

Sir, I feel you missed the whole point about religion - which is very unfortunate.

Religion, like many personal beliefs, isn't a proposition that can be defined or proved either rationally or logically.

Religion IS a proposition which one must take on FAITH - each in his own personal way.

I found most of the "logic" in your article shallow; however, I must agree, in a way, that there certainly may not be an anthropomorphic God. But that is a different matter than that which was discussed by you, and a matter which certainly deserves more discussion than does "logical" proof of complete non-existence of any higher Force.

Personally, I am curious about your social behavior when religion enters a conversation. Do you knock a person's beliefs? If you do you certainly are NOT an intellectual (which you obviously think you are - by the usage of many $2.00-type words in your article - as opposed to average $1.00-type words - Understand??). And you are certainly not much of a HUMAN person if you criticize an individual's beliefs.

What are your beliefs - got any POSITIVE one, sir??? As a non-Christian and a non-Jew living in a world which is dominated by both Christian and Jewish traditions and people, I have some difficulty NOT being critical - BUT being accepting and somewhat optimistic.

How do you manage? What ARE your beliefs, sir???

Cordially yours,
Linda L. Smith,
Freshman

--What Our Readers Say

An overdose of narcotics, hippies and so on

During the past few months, the Sagebrush has published several articles and editorials regarding hippies, love-ins, narcotics, freedom to protest, and the Reno Police Department. Unfortunately, many of these articles have been written by protesters & hippies. Not a single word has been said by the Reno Police Department. It seems that they have subjected to severe criticism without a chance to defeat their actions. This morning, I picked up a copy of the SAGEBRUSH only to find the same biased articles that have been printed in previous months. I have come to the conclusion that at least one of the following factors must be present:

1. The majority of students don't read the SAGEBRUSH.
2. They have become completely apathetic toward the hippie movement.
3. They are so involved with their studies that they cannot afford to waste time arguing with the hippies.
4. They are simply ignoring the hippies in the hope that they will give up when they don't get the desired attention.

I would prefer to follow the fourth alternative, but I believe that the SAGEBRUSH has made this impossible. In each edition of the Sagebrush, the following declaration is made:

This is an official publication of ASUN and as such its contents do not constitute official University policy.

The University has made it clear that they do not want to accept any of the responsibility for the contents of the SAGEBRUSH. I think they have made a very wise decision. As a member of the ASUN, I submit that the contents of the SAGEBRUSH do not constitute the policy of the majority of the students. Although it is a publication of the ASUN and should be the voice of the students, it is not. Bob Swetlik, editor of LOVE, has successfully transformed the SAGEBRUSH into a supplement for his LOVE publication.

He had quite a bit of trouble getting someone to sponsor his irreputable paper. Now that he has interjected his ideas in the SAGEBRUSH, I think the ASUN should reconsider their stand. I, for one, do not wish to sponsor the material that has been coming forth in the SAGEBRUSH.

Several university students have stated their feelings to me on this issue and I believe that I am speaking for the majority of the students at the University. For those of you who feel as I do, I am taking this opportunity to express our views. In addition, since the Reno Police Department has not had a chance to defend itself, I take this opportunity to justify the actions taken by them.

After reading the pathetic articles in this morning's SAGEBRUSH, (Oct. 22 edition), I drove downtown to the Reno Police Department. I was there informed that Captain Frank Better was perhaps the best qualified man on the force to comment on the respective issues and accordingly, I was directed to his office.

When I entered the office and explained what I was there for, Captain Better grinned. The expression on his face reflected the situation at hand. He had just finished reading the SAGEBRUSH and beyond a doubt it must have been the most ludicrous thing he had ever read. He politely told me to have a seat and I enjoyed about a 45 minute interview with him.

Captain Better recognized a few of the persons photographed on the front page of the SAGEBRUSH. They had been in trouble with the police before. The thing that seemed to amaze him more than anything else was that the SAGEBRUSH would allow this kind of biased article to be printed by people whose only qualifications were that they had been arrested a few times.

Putting it in Captain Better's own words, "The biggest qualification for getting an article printed in the SAGEBRUSH seems to be getting arrested for using narcotics, or participating in a love-in."

The SAGEBRUSH appears to be working side by side with the LOVE underground. Captain Better was quite explicit in stating that he realized that the SAGEBRUSH did not reflect the true attitude of most of the University students. But, he said, "If I were living in Carson City, and my only connection with the University was the SAGEBRUSH, I don't know if I would want my daughter to attend this university." Is this the kind of impression we, as students, wish to portray to others? The old adage that "Water seeks its own level" still holds true, and if the quality of LOVE and the hippie movement don't improve, the SAGEBRUSH must sink down to their level.

In response to the articles printed in the SAGEBRUSH, I would like to make the following comments:

The SAGEBRUSH editorial, 'A Human Tragedy,' stated that one half of the nation is under 25 yrs. old and implied that this majority is receiving undue harassment from the rest of the people. The editor failed to realize that 30 per cent of the population is under 15. That means that about 20 per cent (those ranging from age 16-25) are the ones that are causing all the trouble. When you realize that most of the people, even in this age group are law-abiding decent citizens, it cuts the trouble-makers down to an insignificant minority.

In regard to the statement that the day will come when the 'young' will have to be met and treated as equals, I reply candidly that many of the young are already treated as equals, because they act like equals. They strive to build a better society and utilize their efforts in worthwhile endeavors. Consider the editor's closing statement: "The day will come when they will take the rights if they are not given to them. And if you think we've got problems now"... You can put your mind at ease. These people we are talking about do not have the initiative to exercise their rights, much less take them by force.

A brief analysis of the article 'A Few Questions Raised' by Russell D. Jaffe should suffice. He seems to find justification in 'looking dirty' by blaming it on the casinos. In my opinion, he isn't qualified to print an article in the SAGEBRUSH, representing the voice of the students. He then has the audacity to state that he would like to sue and do all sorts of things about the type of justice he has found in Reno, but his funds (and friends) are limited (I wonder why).

Might I offer a suggestion? Spend the time you presently waste gambling, working and studying, and, in no time at all, you'll be able to sue somebody. But, when you become a more productive citizen, chances are you won't wish to sue anyone anymore.

Four pages of the SAGEBRUSH were dedicated to the hippie events which recently transpired. I wish to thank the editors of the SAGEBRUSH for sacrificing one half of one page of their precious newspaper to briefly comment on the forthcoming Homecoming Celebrations. I only hope that this article receives the same consideration.

Last, and by all means LEAST, I think that the hippies have received enough attention already. By becoming a professional "Nothings" they have created trouble everywhere they have appeared in public. For those of you who want attention, do something illegal. People will notice you! On the other hand, people like Captain Frank Better of the Reno Police Department, who has served on the local force for 17 years, never get the credit they deserve. They just continue to do their jobs because they believe in their country, their state, and their town, and they believe that some people care. I for one would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the Reno Police Department and convey my apology for the things that have been printed in the SAGEBRUSH.

Respectfully,
Robert J. Walters

EDITOR'S NOTE: There is first of all an incorrect usage of terms in this letter. Letters and columns printed in the COMMENT section are not articles, and the space is open to anyone who wishes to express an idea, as you may now realize.

Articles are contained in the rest of the Sagebrush and are written by staff members, as was the story on the love-in. You have implied we are slanting the news in favor of the hippies. A point must here be clarified.

Reporters Kladney and Graham contacted both the Reno Police Department and the City Attorney's office before writing the story. The only information they were able to obtain was access to the blotter and the amount of the bail set for the five arrested.

If Captain Frank Better were to write a column on why the arrests were made, etc. to express the "police view," we would be more than happy to consider it for publication. To date we have not heard one word from the Reno Police.

And finally, it is the purpose of a newspaper to inform AND editorialize, striving for reform or modification of an existing trends when it is necessary.

If you believe that the Sagebrush has restricted itself this year to hippies and narcotics, then you have the same selective scope of which you accuse us.

TAILED coin. I personally cannot see much difference.

So bias and condemn as you please, remember you are exactly that which you damn, and nothing more.

Michael Lindell

Graham and Kladney was objective and correct. No person in a position of authority has contradicted facts presented in their article.

An editorial page of a newspaper is not intended to be objective. It is instead a place for views to be expressed and news to be interpreted. In no editorial was it stated that the establishment "uses all its facilities... to suppress us to their views and policies."

'That which you damn, and nothing more'

Recently in this school newspaper you have been printing some very interesting stories, if you choose to call them stories.

Although I am neither a journalism major nor a semantics expert, I think that this newspaper is extremely biased toward one specific group and opinion. You printed purely propaganda articles (sic) a few weeks ago which were authored by a janitor. I do not deny this man's right to express his own opinion, but doesn't it seem rather silly to print an uneducated man's (sic) opinions in a college newspaper?

This newspaper continually expounds upon the credibility of the "Establishment" and how ruthless and unfair its policies are toward dissenters. Look at the paper of Oct. 22, 1968. Do you honestly believe that you produced a creditable and fair picture of what happened at Idlewild Park? Don't be absurd.

You print in your editorials that the "Establishment" uses all its facilities (newspapers, t.v., radios, etc.) including the police force to suppress us to their views and policies. Just what do you think this newspaper is doing? By lacking objectiveness you are denying what you most emphatically preach; let each person choose to be or do whatever he wants. Wise choices are surely impossible without objective information, which a newspaper most of all should know.

You are making a huge satirical joke of knowledge, wisdom, and personal integrity when you produce a mind closing newspaper such as this. You do not attempt to enlighten people about controversial issues, but only try to convince them of your ideas.

True, the "Establishment" tries to influence and sometimes suppress dissent in our society by employing a two headed coin you are using a two

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Sagebrush COMMENT section is an open forum where ANYONE may express his ideas, regardless of the topic or approach taken. No person will be denied his right to offer his opinions on the basis of social position.

If a janitor is to some minds unworthy of having his views published, it is obvious that dissenters should likewise be denied equal space or opportunity to speak out.

White Pine coed crowned queen at Wolves Frolic

Karen Esslinger, a home economics freshman representing White Pine Hall, was crowned queen last night during the intermission of Wolves Frolic by Dave Whitney, homecoming chairman.

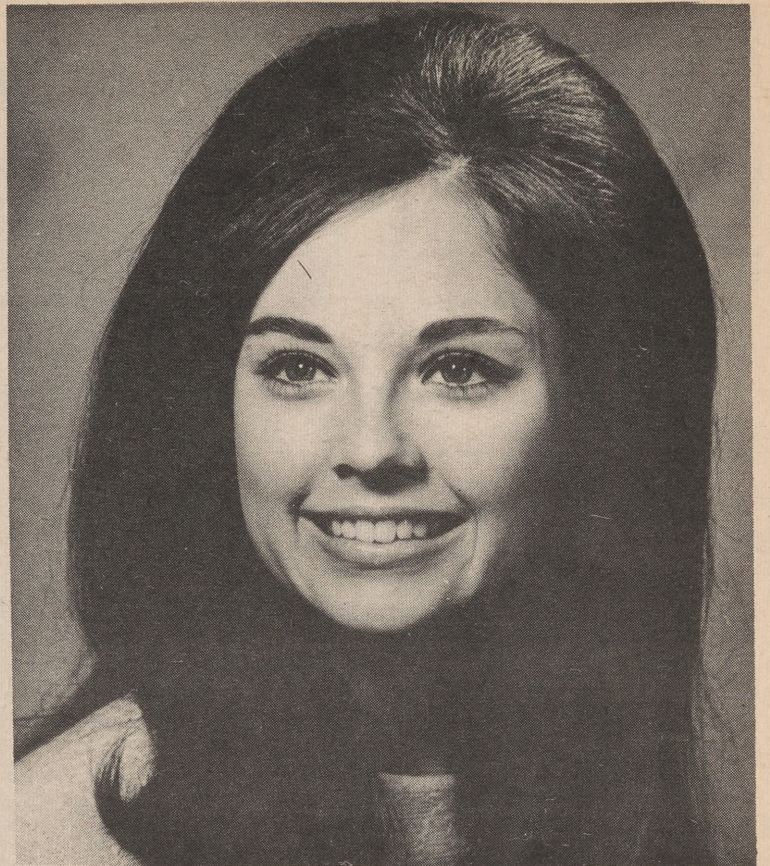

The voting for the Homecoming queen was held Monday and Tuesday in the Student Union and was conducted by Sagens and Spurs.

There were 478 votes cast which were counted by Dean St. John, assistant Dean of Women, Kay Dee Ross, AWS president, Cheryl Yee, AWS vice president, Dolores Barcellos, Homecoming queens chairman, Patt Lynch and Trudy Tedford, AWS queens chairmen.

Kay Dee Ross, AWS president, said, "It was the largest votes cast for a queen in a long time."

The other candidates who will serve as Miss Esslinger's court are Diana Titlow, Gamma Phi Beta; Jeanne Trigerro, Kappa Alpha Theta; Diann Jensen, Delta Delta Delta; Pam Webber, Pi Beta Phi; Earlene Marion, off-campus independents; Karin Freeman, Juniper Hall; and Carol Brennan, Manzanita Hall.

MISS KAREN ESSLINGER

Homecoming continues Spirit tunnel is planned

It's once again that time of year when leaves fall and alumni return to the University of Nevada for Homecoming.

Today is the second day of a three-day continuing event. Wolves Frolic is a thing of the past, but still to come is a marathon race, Neil Diamond show, football game and dance.

Last night's frolic was evidence of the limits to when Nevada students could stretch their imaginations, and the limits to which censors would let them.

Gamma Phi and SAE looked to the east and came up with a Guru routine which offered a look into the future.

Laugh-in came to the university (well, almost...) in the form of ATO's and Theta's.

Lambda Chi and Pi Phi troops entertained the audience with experts from the happenings of every day life at the University of Nevada.

During the intermission White Pine's Karen Esslinger became 1968's Homecoming queen. Chairman of Homecoming Dave Whitney presented the crown.

Headlining today's events is the Neil Diamond show scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Centennial Coliseum. Diamond and the Grassroots will perform one hour each with a 10 minute break in between.

The show is free to university students with i.d. cards. Anyone without a university i.d. should either pick one up or be prepared to pay $1.50 at the door. General admission is $2.50 and reserved $3.50.

Tickets are available at the bookstore, Pik and Letty's and at the door.

Saturday's festivities will be kicked off early in the morning as pledges and interested parties run the traditional Homecoming course. Next comes the 10 a.m. parade on Virginia Street. The show, complete with floats this year, will start at Mill Street and continue up Virginia to Fifth Street.

Noontime will be the scene of reunion at the various Greek houses as alumni are treated to lunch by younger brothers and sisters.

At 2 p.m. the University of Nevada gridgers will face Sacramento on its beloved home turf. Successful in both home games this year, the Wolf Pack will be out to avenge the loss and tie suffered on the road over the past two weeks.

University President N. Edd Miller will re-crown Miss Esslinger at halftime.

Homecoming will conclude with the dance, scheduled for 9 p.m. at the Centennial Coliseum. Music will be by the Wheat Straw Blew-Grass and the Spectrum. A light show by the Peppering Shoe String will accompany the music.

Dr. Wolfe lecture series is attacked

In a special meeting of the central committee, a resolution was unanimously passed which encourages the Nevada Legislature to take immediate action against the Board of Regents and the administration of the University of Nevada for allowing "an advocate of riots to lecture at the University of Nevada."

DeTar, state chairman of the party, commented on the Central Committee's action by stating, "Tax supported state universities are established and maintained ostensibly to provide an educated citizenry capable of responsible self-government, not for providing a free forum for advocates of anarchy and rioting."

DeTar also asked why our universities go to all the trouble to import persons from New York who support rioting. He added there are many citizens from Nevada of all political parties that are eager to stand up for law and order, but are left sitting on the sidelines by the University.

DeTar commented further by saying that universities throughout the nation are doing too much to promote this unjustified rebellion. He added, "We believe it is high time to take actions necessary to reverse this trend."

Mock elections on races Wednesday

A mock presidential election will be held Wednesday in the Travis Union Building from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Students will be able to vote for their choice of the three candidates for the office of the presidency of the United States, as well as one of the candidates for the U.S. Senate from Nevada.

There will be other names on the ballot in addition to the three major candidates, plus a write-in space.

Tom Myers, president of the Young Democrats, said his organization is sponsoring the "election" in conjunction with the Youth for Nixon organization to give students a chance to voice their opinions. Dick Gregory and Gene McCarthy will have their names on the mock ballot along with Hubert Humphrey, Richard Nixon and George Wallace. The senatorial candidates are Ed Fike and Alan Bible.

Anne Cathcart, secretary for Youth for Nixon in the Reno area, and a university student, is cooperating with Myers in the joint venture.

"I feel the students are entitled to the right of expressing their feelings as to the direction in which our nation is going," Myers said. "The only avenue open to them has been the streets in the form of demonstrations or working for an acceptable candidate. Now they can cast a ballot.

"I feel that the convention system at many times is undemocratic, making it difficult for the people's choice to be elected. I hope we can avoid this situation by including people (on our ballot) not nominated by the major parties, thus getting a reliable feedback as to the student choice."

Miss Cathcart said she hopes all students who can will participate in the election.

"We appreciate the Young Democrats cooperation in providing an opportunity for the students to use their voting power.

"Perhaps student opinion, expressed with a ballot instead of with violence, will be viewed with more respect.

"I think it's marvelous that both the Youth for Nixon and the Young Democrats can work together to provide a means for everybody to voice his opinion."

Thetas and Taus adorn their homecoming float with various graffiti. Floats were discontinued last year in lieu of something less expensive, but the tradition was revived again this year. A parade will be held tomorrow starting at 10 a.m. in downtown Reno.

State and regent candidates give views

Candidates for University of Nevada Board of Regents and the state legislature spoke out on the issues as they saw them and met afterward with the crowd of about 100 persons for questions, coffee, and cookies, last Tuesday.

Dr. Donald Driggs, head of the political science department, presented the candidates, each of whom was given four minutes to speak. The affair was sponsored by the political science department and is the first of a two-part presentation to be concluded

Tuesday. At that time the candidates for the United States Senate, Congress, and Nevada Supreme Court will meet in a similar format.

Most of the candidates for the various offices contacted Driggs, but not all were able to attend. Dr. Fred Anderson and Hewitt Wells, seeking a seat on the Board of Regents, were present, as were state senate candidate Proctor Hug, Sr., state assembly candidates Margie Foote, Roy Torvinen, Bart Shouweiler, C. W. Lingenfelter, Edward Kruse, Tom Kean, David Hagen, Bud Garfinkle, Leslie Fry, Mary Frazzini and Randall Capurro.

Wells, a Reno architect, said the university and the state are both growing rapidly and will continue to do so. He said past university development was a product of expediency more than planning and cited his experience as an architect. "A person not trained in the evaluation of a building program won't be as effective" as one who is, he said.

He said the University of Nevada was not one of the top universities in the country, but it could be eventually with proper building programs.

Dr. Anderson, a member of the board since 1956, said the regents have been trying to match the building program with the increase in student enrollment for 11 years, but had not been successful.

He said the major reason for the gap is the one per cent bonded indebtedness ceiling imposed on the state by the legislature nearly 50 years ago. Dr. Anderson urged voters to vote yes on Question 2 on the ballot Nov. 5, which would raise the ceiling to three per cent.

He urged that faculty and administrators be responsive to students, in view of what he called "the current situation on campuses across the country."

Hug, former Washoe County superintendent of schools, and a representative of Washoe and Storey Counties in the state senate, said the most important issue facing the next legislature is finances.

He said he is certain the university will need more money, as will the cities, counties, welfare department, and the highway program.

For this reason, "I heartily endorse the passage of Question 2," Hug said. He added the present bonded indebtedness ceiling is about $15 million "and it looks like we may need about $45 million."

Incumbent Shouweiler said state government should attempt to reach and involve students, and proposed a bill he wants to introduce which would give students college credit for working in the legislature. The bill would provide a $3 per diem travel pay to and from Reno Carson City, and would involve two or three hours of time two or three days a week.

This would involve about two dozen students from all departments of the university, he said. He initially proposed the plan three weeks ago while on campus with State Senator Coe Swobe to discuss Swobe's campus disorder bill with students.

Lingenfelter, an area realtor and assembly incumbent, urged voters not to "elect one man to solve one problem." He said the legislature is "like the board of directors of a large corporation," and said voters should elect competent men who can work out solutions to any problem they may be faced with.

Kruse, former superintendent of buildings and grounds for the state and general manager of the Centennial Coliseum, said "My record indicates I'm capable of solutions that are solid." He said a legislature has to look the hard problems in the face and take an active part in the legislature.

He also urged the passage of Question 2.

Kean, a local businessman who has served five terms in the state assembly, and served as minority floor leader, stressed what he called the importance of "electing men who will work as a team in the legislature."

He said his job as a floor leader made him realize the importance of unison and urged voters to elect Republican assemblymen "who have proved they can work together." He said the 1970 reapportionment of the state legislature would turn government power over to Las Vegas, and thus a strong team was needed for Northern Nevada.

Hagen, a Democrat and Reno attorney, said his experience as a teacher of criminal law at the university, being on the board of trustees of the Legal Aid Society, and his nine years as a lawyer caused him to "develop some degree of judgement."

He said he was running to prove youth could be effective in politics, "in these desparate times of political apathy."

He pledged "to make a sincere and honest judgement on every issue and attempt to represent this district to its best interest."

Garfinkle, incumbent assemblyman and principal of Hug High School, said he was running because he felt "if you care about something you should get out and do something about it." He said as a teacher he has tried to impress that idea on his students by setting a example.

"The federal government is getting stronger, the city and county governments weaker. Let's get a federal tax rebate and use it right here," Garfinkle said.

Attorney Fry, a former student of Dr. Driggs, said he chose to run because of the problems of youth. He said youths are concerned with today's problems and deserve answers. He was concerned with juvenile crime rates particularly.

Fry said he was relieved not to see dissension on the University of Nevada campus, and added if he were elected he would be active on the part of youth in the legislature.

Mrs. Frazzini, who has served two terms in the assembly, said she wanted to be "where the action is."

She said women are needed in the legislature because they are "more deeply concerned in the humanities."

"Don't just elect competent men," she said. "Elect competent women too."

Five more candidates will appear Tuesday

Five of the six candidates involved in statewide election races in Nevada have accepted an invitation to appear at the second "Meet the Candidates" night on the University of Nevada campus Tuesday.

Professor Donald W. Driggs, chairman of the department of political science, has announced that Senator Alan Bible and his challenger Lieutenant Governor Ed Fike will appear on the same platform to express their views on national and international issues.

State Senator James Slattery, candidate for Congress, and the two candidates for the contested seat on the Nevada Supreme Court, Justice Cameron Batjer and Judge John Mendoza, will also speak at the meeting which will begin at 8 p.m. in the Jot Travis Lounge.

An informal refreshment period will follow the formal presentations. The general public is cordially invited to attend the event and meet the candidates.

Capurro, son of former legislator Louis Capurro, said he thought these were conservative times. "People are tired of paying taxes and not seeing where they go or how they are spent," he said.

He said more jobs would eliminate the need for welfare rolls and suggested raising more revenue for Nevada through expansion of the job base rather than through higher taxes.

Wolf Pack to face Sac State for Homecoming

The Wolf Pack faces the Sacramento State College Hornets Saturday in the Homecoming game to be held in Mackay Stadium at 1:30 p.m.

The starting defensive squad as set by defensive coaches Keith Loper and Jerry Scattini includes Phil Teal and Ed Gonzales at halfbacks, Bob O'Brien and Roger Campbell at linebackers, Larry Getz at safety, Ken Byrne as roving "Monster" man, Larry Dearing and Gary Eatinger at defensive ends, Terry and Mike Hermeling at defensive tackles and Jay Nady at middle guard.

"We think it will be a tough game," said coach Trachok, Thursday. "They have been one of our toughest rivals and we have to win to stay alive in this league."

Nevada has one loss and one tie thus far in FWC standings compared to Sacramento State's one win and two losses. Last year's game with the Hornets found them winning 14-7 in their home nest.

Head Coach Dick Trachok will be working his team very hard during practice this week concentrating on scoring from the five yard line where they have been stopped for three consecutive games. The Pack failed to take advantage of this situation last week when their game with Hayward State Pioneers ended in a 7-7 tie.

"We had a couple of good opportunities to score and didn't," Trachok said, "We have to capitalize on chances like that."

Trachok has been pleased with his teams improved kicking ability which has hurt punt return yardage for Nevada's opponents.

The Pack is also preparing for Sac's aerial attack by working on their own passing game which has fallen off from the start of the season. Trachok, Keith Loper, defensive line coach, and Jerry Scattini, defensive backfield coach, will be sharpening the Wolf Pack pass defense in preparation for Sac State's vaunted passing attack.

Defensive coach Jerry Scattini has named several outstanding defensive players being honored for their work during practice and games. The "hitters" as they are known include defensive end Gary Eatinger, defensive end Larry Dearing, linebacker Bob O'Brien, defensive halfback Phil Teal, defensive halfback Ed Gonzales, middle guard Jay Nady and tackle Terry Hermeling and they are distinguished by red stripes on their helmets. The honor is for 100 percent effort during all phases of training and for acting like football players both on and off the field.

Looking forward to Saturday's game Trachok said, "They were picked as the favorite to win the conference before the season began, and reportedly have the best team they've had in 10 years. They're going to give us a lot of trouble."

Nevada will have some advantage though as they are playing in their home den, and they have never lost a Homecoming game since they have been playing in the new Mackay Stadium.

Intramural sports

The annual Homecoming cross country race will be run this year on October 26th beginning at Sparks High School at 7 sharp.

The course route runs south along 15th Street, west on Prater Way, north on Sullivan, west along Oddie Boulevard, south on Wells, west on Sadler and down Highland to Center Street and north to Mackay Stadium where it will end after a three-quarters lap of the track.

All Freshmen who had a medical examination prior to entering the university and were capable of participating in such an event do not have to be examined at the Student Health Service. All sophomore, junior, senior, graduate students and faculty that enter must have an examination at the Student Health Service before they can participate in this race.

Each participant will be given a number to wear during the race. There will be four check points along the course and the numbers will be recorded as the runners pass the check points. If a runner does not pass the check points he will be eliminated.

No rides may be supplied for the runners and if any such action is taken the runner will have to forfeit. All runners will receive their finishing positions at Mackay Stadium and they will turn in their numbers and place position there.

One hundred sixty-three runners from eight organizations have entered Saturday's Homecoming cross country race. Entries included three from Lincoln Hall, two from Theta Chi, eight from Nye Hall, twenty-five from SAE, thirty-one from ATO, thirty-two from Sigma Nu, forty-nine from Lambda Chi Alpha and eleven independents.

Alpha Tau Omega was last year's winner. The Taus also captured second and tenth places.

Intramural handball and volleyball will start the first week in November. All interested persons must have their teams organized soon. The entry deadline for handball is Oct. 29, and all entries should be turned in to the Intramural Office, 107B in the Men's Gym. The entry deadline for volleyball is Oct. 30, and all organizations should enter their teams in the Intramural Office.

The results of the first three games in intramural baseball this week are:

Cross Country Homecoming meet

The University of Nevada Cross Country team will face Sacramento State College and Hayward State College in a triangle meet on the Wolf Pack's home course Saturday at 11 a.m. for Homecoming.

Nevada coach Jack Cook said this will be a tough meet. "We will have to run much better than last week if we want to win," he said. "I think we'll have a good chance if we don't get any injuries in practice this week."

Cook said he will use the entire squad even though only the first seven finishers for each school are counted for point standing.

Top runners for Nevada will be Peter Duffy, freshman from England; Pete Sinnott, Henry Kirk, Paul Bateman, Pete Reams, Anthony Risby and Orlando Gutierrez.

Others include Ray Brown, Phil Ennis, Lee Marshall, Tom Foley and Bob Smith.

Coach Cook said that he expected a very tough race from Sacramento State College.

"Drake VanCamp from Sacramento was sixth in the Far Western Conference last year but he is not looking too good this year," Cook said. "Bob Jameson will be running first for Sacramento State and he should pose a real threat."

Cook also commented that Hayward's top runner, Bob Hunter, is not doing as well as he was last year.

The Pack should have a slight advantage because the race will be run on their home four-mile course at Sun Valley.

Jim Pirtle will not be able to run for the Wolf Pack in Saturday's triangle meet due to an injury incurred during practice this week. He was spiked in the heel and it was not properly cared for and became infected.
