TOPIC OF RESOLUTION: Constitutional Amendment Section 440.1+
SUBMITTED BY: Tom Mayer

WHEREAS, the active participation of the editors of the Sagebrush and Artemisia is necessary to promote editorial freedom essential to student publications, and

WHEREAS, the direct participation of the editors provides the Publications Board with a first-hand knowledge of the publications, and

WHEREAS, the two editors should be allowed to be fully involved in the formation of policy affecting their performance.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that section 440.1 of the ASUN Constitution be amended to read:

"The Publications Board shall consist of the following voting members: the Vice-President of Finance and Publications, who shall act as chairperson and may vote only to break or make a tie vote, one-third (1-3) of the membership of Senate, as assigned by the Executive Council, the editor of the Sagebrush, and the editor of the Artemisia. Non-voting members shall be the ASUN President, the ASUN Business manager, the editors of all ASUN publications except the Sagebrush and Artemisia, any faculty advisors, and the ASUN Administrative Secretary."

VOTE

The ASUN Senate passed an amendment Wednesday to give the editors of the Sagebrush and Artemisia a vote on the Publications Board.

This amendment was previously voted upon in the recent ASUN election. However, due to a mix-up in printing, it appeared on the reverse side of another amendment. Thus, many students failed to note its presence, and it did not get enough votes to pass even though it received a 7-1 majority of votes by those who did turn the ballot over to read the other side.

IF YOU FEEL THAT NEXT YEAR'S EDITORS SHOULD OR SHOULD NOT GET TO VOTE, PLEASE SHOW UP AT THE POLLS NEXT WEEK WEDNESDAY; OR THURSDAY, OR FRIDAY.

(Please see page ten for further coverage)

"I want to make one (expletive deleted) thing (expletive deleted) perfectly (expletive deleted) clear."

Washington—Americans hoping to be titillated by President Nixon's raw and earthy language in the Watergate transcripts are in for a (adjective deleted) disappointment.

Transcripts of Mr. Nixon's White House conversations on the Watergate affair, as released April 30, were censored of everything fouler than mild blasphemy.

The offensive phrases were replaced by the phrase "(adjective deleted)," "(expletive deleted)" or "(characterization deleted)."

Mr. Nixon is quoted as saying of one Watergate development: "It makes us look so (adjective deleted) funny."

Frequent interjections by the President at one of his meetings with his aides are described only as "(expletive deleted)."

But at one point, Mr. Nixon refers to former President Harry S. Truman, in an apparently admiring way, as "that old bastard."

Mr. Nixon's references to Sen. Sam Ervin, the chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, are "(characterization deleted)."

He refers to Patrick Gray, former acting head of the FBI, as "a little bit stupid."

The transcript abounds in "hells" and "damns."

People who are angry are described as being "pissed off."

Mr. Nixon says that one aide will do anything "to save his ass."

But it's pretty tame reading, all in all.

Letters

Your help is sought

Editor:

I am writing this letter to draw the attention of the university community—students, staff, faculty and administration—to one of the biggest famines of our time, the one in North Africa that stretches across the entire continent, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Indian. Thousands of people are dying every day. I am sure there are many people here who would want to help. Contributions can be sent to the American Red Cross, 805 South Virginia, Reno, Nev. 89501, with an indication that it is for the African famine.

I might add that, speaking from the viewpoint of one who has lived outside this country for most of his life, the United States has always been considered a very generous and helpful country, especially where disasters are concerned. This particular famine needs more than the customary help: hence my letter.

Yours,
Ahmed Essa

Disagrees with commentary

Editor:

This letter is a comment to your April 30 Sagebrush column entitled "Speak Out," written by Susan Engstrom.

I found it very hypocritical that Miss Engstrom wrote that column considering the fact that she is a newly elected Arts and Science senator. Is she doing this for prestige and power? She never said in her column. She asked everyone else. Has she ever brought the issue up on the Senate floor?

Why did she run for senator in the first place? Is she such a kind human being that she felt it her obligation to run so she could help others?

Is she willing to turn down the money or does she feel she earns it by going to a meeting every week?

I've been on this campus for two years and discovered that no one does anything for nothing.

Also I would like to comment on another column she wrote concerning Women's Night of Honor. In essence it said that this activity put on by the campus organization, Sagens, was totally useless towards their goals as a service organization. Why then is Miss Engstrom a Sagen member if she thinks it is not providing service to the community? Was it for power and prestige? How active a member is she, that she is that concerned about it?

All I can say now, is that her job portfolio, along with a lot of others on this campus, will look pretty good—at the expense of the students.

Thank you very much,

Air today and none tomorrow

Editor:

The air conditioner is on in Clark Administration and the temperature is comfortable where the administrators work. In the Jot Travis Union, where students meet and work, the air conditioner is not on, and the temperature is unbearably warm. Is it a wonder that students question where the priorities lie?

Perhaps the administration should consider turning on the air conditioner in either all UNR buildings, or in none, but please don't discriminate unfairly against students.

Sincerely,
Concerned Students

Ed: And with all that hot air in Jot Travis too!!!

Thank you muchly

Editor:

Although I know it is against your policy to accept too much praise, I must tell you how terrific I think your newspaper has been this year. I have been a reader of the Sagebrush for ten years and of all the editions yours has been the most informative, entertaining and impartial. Due to your ability, the Sagebrush has been a publication to look forward to rather than something merely to collect for the library. I hope you can be persuaded to return as editor next semester.

Sincerely
Mary Nichols

Monkey business

The work of two UNR psychology professors in training a chimpanzee to communicate with humans will be televised nationally May 5 and 11.

The documentary by the Public Broadcasting System will include film taken by Drs. R. Allen and Beatrice Gardner during the period they taught Washoe, a female chimp, to understand and use American sign language.

Entitled, "The First Signs of Washoe," the program can be seen in the Reno area on Teleprompter Channel 6 at 7:30 p.m. May 5 and again at 4:30 p.m. May 11.

It will be the second time in two weeks that work of UNR faculty members will be accorded national recognition on television. A dramatized case history by Dr. Robert McQueen, also a psychology professor, was shown on CBS' GE Theater last week.

The Gardners' chimp, who learned to use more than 175 sign symbols during her Reno stay, is now in a primate colony at the University of Oklahoma in Norman. Scientists there want to determine how much of her learned behavior will be passed along to offspring.

PILLOW TALK

I truly pity The President. It seems that even when things are looking up for him, something occurs which forces him to take the bitter with the sweet. For example, it seemed like this was going to be a great week for him. In the first place, Mitchell and Stans got off the hook, and John Dean's testimony proved insufficient. Secondly, after months of carefully sifting through the tapes to collect enough evidence to clear him, Mr. Nixon was able to release the tapes.

With all of this good news, I was waiting to see a bouyant and pugnacious President on television. I was waiting for one of those insipid Nixonisms to emerge, like "you won't have Nixon to kick out of office anymore." But no, I was wrong. The President was much more subdued.

Why?

Because the poor man is dead tired. The very day that the papers carried the Mitchell-Stans reaction, as well as the transcript release announcement, sure enough, there was bad news for Nixon on page nineteen.

I was stunned as I read the story: "A White House doctor last month asked the National Institute of Health for literature on insomnia, and Nixon watchers immediately suspected that the stress of Watergate and impeachment moves were taking its toll on The President."

As a Nixon watcher from way back (I always say, know your enemies), I quite agree with this diagnosis. Poor Dick! He's having trouble getting to sleep.

No wonder. I would too if I had all that on my conscience. But this is not the place for moral judgments. Rather, we must try to understand and sympathize.

Indeed we must. For Julie Nixon Eisenhower remarked last November that the President, unable to sleep, often sits alone softly playing the piano. "Sometimes," she tells us, "all alone at night, you'll hear this music down the hallway." This is all the more tragic when we consider that The President's repertoire consists only of "Happy Birthday" and "God Bless America."

So let us take a look at one of these sleepless nights.

It's 3:30 a.m. Pat is snoring soundly. Suddenly, she is awakened by a terrible noise. Have they done it? she asks herself. Have they really done it? The Bomb?

But no. It was merely the low notes emanating from some kind of musical instrument. A piano? Maybe, but it sure doesn't sound like a piano.

Within a few moments, Pat is completely awake and realizes what is happening. Yes, of course, she says. It is a piano. Poor Dick, he probably can't sleep again.

So without any hesitation, Pat rises from the bed, puts on her republican cloth bathrobe (with the mink lining), and proceeds down the hall. The song being played becomes clearer.

From the mountains to the prairies
to the oceans
white with foaaaaamm . . .

Pat enters the room and sees Dick pounding away (softly, of course). She's made it just in time for the finale.

God Bless A-mer-i-kuh
my home
sweet hooommmeee!

"Dick?" she interrupts.

The President, startled, jumps up. "What the (expletive deleted)?! Oh! Pat! It's you."

"Dick," she says as sweetly as possible, considering that it's 3:30, "isn't that enough?" The President looks up at her and frowns. "My fellow American," he admits, "perhaps you're right." He then glances down at the keyboard. Hmmm, he thinks, Key of G. And then . . .

to you!
Happy Birthday
to you!
Happy Birthday
dear Arnold.
toooooo
yoouuu!

"Dear?" asks Pat. "Who's Arnold?"

"The White House Gardener, dear. Each night I commemorate the birthday of someone. Tomorrow night is Hilda's."

"And who's Hilda?" Pat asks.

"Arnold's wife."

"Dear," says Pat sternly. "I think it's time you come to bed."

"I'm sorry, dear," says Dick, "but it won't work. (Expletive deleted) I just can't fall asleep."

"Nonsense," says Pat. "You just come up right now, relax, stretch out, and I'm sure you'll doze off. If nothing else you can count sheep."

"No," interrupts Dick. "I've tried that. But it doesn't work. Honestly I've tried. I sit and count and count. But the more I do, the more the sheep begin to look like my (expletive deleted) White House aides."

"Oh you poor thing!" consoles Pat.

"No (expletive deleted)!" trembles Dick. Then, waxing poetic, "to sleep!—sob—perchance to dream!"

"Dick," says Pat shaking her head, "you need a good long rest."

"You're (expletive deleted) right," sniffs Dick.

Suddenly Pat brightens. "I know!" she exclaims. "I'll bring you a nice cup of warm milk and an aspirin."

"Thanks dear, but no thanks," counters Dick. "You see, I'm actually afraid of going to sleep. I mean, what if I should say something incriminating?"

"Dick, Dick, Dick," reprimands Pat. "If people can't understand what you're talking about when you're awake, what makes you think they will when you're asleep? Besides, you've already given the committee the transcripts, so there's nothing more to worry about. Come on now. Off to bed."

"I guess you're right," says Dick. "I'll be up in a moment." He then leans down over to one side of the piano and flicks the "on" switch of the nearby tape recorder. He then begins to play:

God Bless A-mer-i-kih!
Land that I love . . .

"Dick!" exclaims Pat. "Whatever are you recording that for?"

Dick frowns. "Well Pat, as you said yourself, the committee has the transcripts which I have carefully edited and which show my complete innocence. Therefore, I figure they won't be needing these tapes, so I've been recording myself."

"All these months?!" exclaims Pat.

"Yes dear. And you wouldn't believe how much better I'm getting. This is my 42nd reel of tape, and I can honestly say that I've really improved."

So let us sympathize with our poor beleaguered President. While we fluff up our pillows tonight with that self-satisfied look, let us remember that Mr. Nixon won't. No, another night of music will be filtering down the hallway. Mr. Nixon will be catching us sleeping.

Observations

MENICUCCI

First, some good news: the price and wage controls which plagued this country for two and one-half years have expired.

It is generally conceded that the controls were a tremendous flop. Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wisc.) said that the controls had been inequitable and unfair and should be allowed to die. "We've given even more control than this to the President and the results have been disastrous."

Especially heartening, however, is the growing realization that price and wage controls are doomed to failure. Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, observed that controls had not worked and could not work in a peacetime economy.

Does this mean that we have learned the lessons of interference with the free economy? Don't bet on it!

As Herbert Spencer wrote, "The truth that experience teaches has its limits. The experiences which teach must be experiences which can be appreciated; and experiences exceeding a certain degree of complexity become inappreciable to the majority."

To support Spencer's remarks, I offer Exhibit A, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield. "We face a crisis," he said. "Perhaps this country is in a recession. I don't know. But we are close to it."

"Nobody likes controls. I don't. But I like inflation less."

What a marvelous elixir are price and wage controls! Evidently, Mansfield believes controls are good for what ails you—recession, inflation, colic in horses or mules . . .

If the senior senator would just think more clearly about economic controls, he might lose faith in their magical powers.

They cannot control inflation:

(1) Not all industries are controlled, so you are squeezing the balloon in one place and watching it expand in another. This was a major reason for the inflation during the price and wage freeze.

(2) Some price increases will be allowed in the interests of fairness, and will be reflected in the general price index.

(3) Government spending is never controlled.

(4) The money supply is not controlled, so there may be more dollars chasing fewer (or the same amount of) goods.

(5) Evasions of the controls are too numerous to catalog. Just a few examples: a) come out with a "new, improved" product and increase the price; b) keep prices constant, but cut quality; c) grant an employee a new job title and give him a raise for performing the same duties; and so on.

To the limited extent that they are effective, price controls will restrict production. With a constant demand (a valid assumption, as relevant factors remain constant), shortages will result. It is no coincidence that price and wage controls and widespread, chronic shortages existed simultaneously.

So, the death of price and wage controls. May they rest in peace, never again to be summoned by the Dr. Frankensteins of Congress to rape and strangle a peacetime economy.

It's time for another Western revolt against the Eastern establishment. Everything in this country is oriented toward the East. I think we have bowed to Mecca long enough.

This morning I looked in the newspaper at the National League baseball schedule. The starting times for the games were given in Eastern Daylight Time.

Library scholarship

This May the Library Staff Association of the UNR will award its second annual scholarship to a prospective library school student. The amount for this year is $200. To qualify, an applicant must have been accepted by an A.L.A. accredited library school and been associated (i.e. have been a student or an employee) with UNR during this academic year. Deadline for application is May 10, 1974. Application forms can be obtained from Dorothy McAlinden at the Getchell Library. Need and academic record will be the criteria for the award. Other members of the LSA Scholarship Committee for 1974 are Barbara Fleming and Ellen Guerricogaita.

A real cut-up

A UNR student has discovered that spring streaking during Mackay Week can be a hazardous sport.

At a street dance held Tuesday night at the ATO fraternity house, a barefoot streaker dashed from one end of the basketball court 60 yards before a crowd of about 200 people, only to find a broken wine bottle on the pavement where he was running. One witness said he cut his feet rather badly, but the wounds would heal by the summer streaking season.

The witness said the perilous journey of the unknown streaker was unnoticed by most of the crowd, but even fewer noticed he was barefoot.

Art for news' sake

Kevin A. Doyle was selected editor-in-chief of Ka Leo O Hawaii for the next school year by the Board of Publications April 24.

Doyle previously served as arts editor.

"Next year we hope to make Ka Leo a more active participant in all University affairs," Doyle said.

Numbers racket

On May 11, the College of Education will hold a workshop on metric education. Dr. John Trent and Mr. Ivan Lee will serve as co-directors of this event, which is designed to inform Nevada elementary and secondary teachers about the SI metric system which is becoming an optional measuring system in the U.S. in 1975.

Harder they fall

Boston—Doug Griffin, Boston Red Sox second baseman, was struck in the face May 1, by a Nolan Ryan fast ball, and had to be carried off the field on a stretcher.

A Red Sox spokesman said Griffin regained consciousness in the locker room and was taken to the Hahneman Hospital for observation. The spokesman said Griffin was hit on the left ear, which is protected by a plastic shield on the helmet.

Griffin, who never moved after falling to the ground, was hit in the first inning of Boston's game with the California Angels.

Death in Detroit

Detroit—A man apparently upset because of an argument with his common law wife early today grabbed his two children and tossed them out of a third-floor apartment window on Detroit's West side.

Police said Felicia Patterson, 6, was dead at the scene and Harold Tillman, 17 months, was listed in serious condition at Ford Hospital.

Lela Patterson, 26, the wife, was taken to Detroit General Hospital suffering from shock.

Police said they were holding the 27-year-old unidentified man in custody.

The death of the Patterson child brought Detroit's homicide rate for April to 86, making it the bloodiest month in the city's history.

A classic organ

A variety of end-of-the-year music recitals are scheduled at the UNR Jot Travis Student Union. All are free to the public.

Three or perhaps four brass quintets will perform under the direction of Dr. Roscoe M. Booth on May 2, at 8:15 p.m.

Sarah Miller, a senior violin student, will give a recital on May 7 at 8:15 p.m. She will be accompanied by a small orchestra.

Soprano Sueelyn Drown, a senior voice student at UNR, will have a recital May 13 at 8:15 p.m.

Two lunch-break recitals are tentatively scheduled for May 13 and May 15. On May 13 at noon, graduate and undergraduate piano students will perform for the university audience. On May 15 at the same time, a recital of classical organ will be given by UNR organ students.

Lift-overs

Nevada merchants, responding to a statewide questionnaire, say by a two-to-one margin that their store theft losses are down substantially as the result of a statewide anti-shoplifting campaign waged since last fall.

And by a wide margin, the store owners feel that shoplifting losses were a direct result of the campaign launched in September 1973, by the Nevada Anti-Shoplifting Committee headed by Atty. Gen. Robert List, in cooperation with the Nevada Retail Association, the Department of Education and the Nevada Commission on Crime, Delinquency and Corrections.

Sure, Domenico Gismondi

Frosinone, Italy—Easter brought back Luisa Gismondi's husband Domenico, who went off to war 31 years ago and was reported killed in action.

Gismondi, 64, returned to his village in southern Italy and told his wife and their three children he had been captured in Albania and was not allowed to leave.

He said he finally escaped on a one-month tourist visa. His wife had not remarried.

NOTES

No honor among crooks

Washington—Frustrated by the Watergate affair and angry over press reports concerning it, President Nixon once said "I sometimes feel like resigning" and letting Vice President Spiro T. Agnew "be president for a while." "He'd love it," Nixon said.

According to transcripts of taped conversations released by the White House, the remarks were made on April 27, 1973, in Nixon's Oval Office, with Deputy Atty. Gen. Henry Petersen and White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler present.

Agnew had not yet been implicated publicly in the Maryland graft investigation that eventually would lead to his own resignation 5½ months later.

Fry cooked at barbecue

Assemblyman Leslie Mack Fry, R-Reno, confirmed today he was "popped in the mouth" last Thursday night at a state Republican convention barbecue in Washoe Valley.

Fry said the bout has been greatly exaggerated in street conversation.

"I actually only got my pants dirty," he said.

Fry did not say who punched him in the dispute at Atty. Gen. Bob List's ranch.

Be grateful for the Dead

Tickets for the Grateful Dead concert are going very fast. In fact, they should be sold out by early next week.

ASUN tickets are only $3, available at the Activities Office in the Jot Travis Student Union. For those who feel this is a high price (which it is not), be grateful you're not a student at the University of California at Santa Barbara. Students there are paying $6.50 for the same show, two days after the Reno gig.

Nun the worse for wear

Chicago—James A. Lane's ex-wife now lives in a convent in Milwaukee and is known as Sister Mary.

But Lane, a suburban insurance salesman, must keep paying her $250 a month alimony, Circuit Court Judge Robert I. Hunter ruled Monday.

Hunter said Lane, 47, cannot halt the payments until Sister Mary, 48, a Dominican novice, has taken her final vows as a Catholic nun.

The Lanes were divorced in 1970. She entered the convent in 1972.

Potter peptalk

Povi Zuni, an Indian potter from Stewart, will conduct a final pottery workshop in Reno, May 17 and 31 before moving to Washington, D.C.

The workshop, sponsored by the Nevada Art Gallery, 643 Ralston St., will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on both days. The pots will be formed during the first session and will be dried and fired before the second session, when finished pieces will be decorated.

The fee for the classes is $15 for gallery members and $18 for non-members. Reservations may be made with the gallery.

UNR Art Festival 1974

"It was five days of unusual events ranging from belly dancing to the early music consort of London. We saw artists working; we saw artists performing; we saw food and fun at the food follies; we heard music from rock to jazz to classical. We tasted wine and flew kites and the Church Fine Arts Building was filled with photos, banners, cups and goblets. On Sunday, the last day, with clouds threatening to rain . . . the breeze gently brushing the stage . . . we anxiously awaited the arrival of Queen Elizabeth across Manzanita Lake. And arrive she did . . . with procession and fanfare. And as the feast began, the sun broke through to warm a magical afternoon. Brebner-Sheridan Productions truly gave us a Renaissance afternoon to remember."

"I wish more people would come in and find things out."

Students who have a complaint about something on this campus usually do not know where to go to discuss it. There's one person at the university who would like to hear complaints. She's Peggy Muhle, ASUN administrative secretary.

Muhle says that she would like students who have complaints to come talk to her. She can arrange for them to talk to someone who can answer their questions.

She cited the case of one student who thought the bookstore was ripping people off. She arranged an interview with Cris Cufflin, bookstore manager. The student came back saying, "I just didn't realize all that went on."

Muhle has been ASUN secretary for four years. Just recently she got the new title of administrative secretary. She is a graduate of a two-year business program at UNR.

She is responsible for a variety of duties. She attends all senate and board meetings, prepares preliminary material and takes the minutes. She handles the correspondence for all officers and prepares work study hours. She does work for all major weekends and elections.

Muhle takes shorthand but finds no one utilizes her talent. Most of the time she helps compose the material.

She finds that working with student government can be frustrating at times. She said, "When I see student officers work hard to change something but because of the way things are they can't be changed, I find that frustrating. Some things just can't be changed."

She finds student government is becoming more business-like and that the representatives work harder. She finds that they are getting involved in more things and spending more hours at their work.

Muhle discussed the changes in senate. The number of senators has been reduced from 35 to 20. This means that everyone is on a board now and everyone must devote more time.

One thing she does not see changing is the discouragingly low number of students who are applying for university committees that need student representatives.

Muhle said, "We need good students who are enthusiastic. It's a good way to get involved. It's not a social thing like Mackay Day. We need an increased involvement."

She finds the most enjoyable part of her job is helping students who pass by. She feels too often that they do not know where to go to get assistance. Through her years of experience, she knows how to get things accomplished and can provide help.

Muhle said, "I'd like to be able to talk to the student instead of him getting turned off. I can give some insights. I feel like I am really helping by offering what knowledge I do have."

She enjoys her job because it is not the regular 9-to-5 routine. Muhle said, "It's exciting, varied and I'm always on the go. I never get bored and things never get dull. It's exciting to watch the new officers grow and be able to view them from an impartial place."

Although she finds her job satisfying, she feels not enough students come by. She feels this an important job for her and not enough seek her assistance.

Muhle concluded, "I wish more people would come in and find things out. Half the students don't even know we own the bookstore. I can answer questions, tell them why some things are some way, or refer them. Students don't take enough advantage of the services."

The gripes of wrath

"Justice for Farm Workers and Your Shopping Cart" is the topic for the program at the Center for Religion and Life this Sunday at 7:15 p.m. The talk, designed to bring home the power Nevadans have to support the rights of farm laborers with a lettuce and grape boycott, is the last in this year's "For Human Dignity" series sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC).

The main speaker will be Ernesto Loredo, director of the AFSC's Farm Labor Program. Located in Visalia, Calif., Loredo's office serves as advocate for the agricultural worker population and families in housing, legal, governmental and other matters. Loredo is assigned by the AFSC to give support to the United Farm Worker Union in its strike and boycott efforts, besides carrying on his own projects.

Speaking from the point of view of a local Reno citizen interested in helping the United Farm Workers will be Bill May. May is one of several people who organized a picket line for the cause in Reno earlier this year. He has since spent several weeks and some weekends working at the union's national headquarters in La Paz, Calif.

Brian Fry, staff for the Reno AFSC office, said that the union has been trying since January to keep open the possibility of sending Union President Cesar Chavez for the program, but recently informed him that they couldn't avoid a conflicting engagement. Still pending is a question of whether Dave Burciaga, chief contract-negotiator for the union, will be free to come to Reno for the program. Burciaga is an American Friends Service Committee employee working full-time for the United Farm Workers.

Speakers will talk about aspects of the agriculture industry which make it difficult for workers to organize a union and achieve rights considered basic to most other workers. United Farm Workers Contracts will be compared with Teamster contracts as a way to explain the oft-confused relationships between growers, unions and the field workers. To bring the issue right to Nevada shopping carts, it will be explained which products are on the boycott list and why.

"No one who comes to the meeting hoping to get specific ideas to help the farm workers will go away disappointed, because there are a dozen things to do right here in the Reno area at various levels of involvement," said Fry. At the same time he indicated that time for questions and discussion will insure that those with a different point of view will have opportunity for dialogue."

The program is open and free to the public. Refreshments will be on hand.

Torn Towell

Democratic Congressional candidate Jim Santini charged April 25 that Representative David Towell "must take part of the blame for the continuing increase in gasoline prices."

The former Clark County District Judge said Towell "sold Nevadans and the nation down the river earlier this year when he voted against legislation designed to force a rollback in gas prices."

"The major oil companies continue to report record profits at the expense of the American motorists," Santini said, "but our incumbent Congressman is too much a part of the Nixon team to vote for a measure which was opposed by the President and the oil companies."

Santini also took aim at Towell's recent statement that he will not respond to criticism from opponents by saying "with a record like Towell's, it's easy to understand why he won't answer. His record speaks for itself," he said, "and it is a miserable one. It will take more than the Congressman's public relations experts to explain away this and other votes against the best interests of the people of Nevada."

Santini also sharply criticized the President's new energy czar John Sawhill for matter of factly predicting a five cent per gallon jump in gas prices this summer.

"He should be concerned about preventing such an increase, not just giving consumers the bad news that the oil companies will make more money this summer," the Las Vegas attorney said.

Santini said the administration's approach to the energy problem appears to be "let the oil companies keep raising the prices and the shortage will go away."

"No wonder millions of Americans are wondering whether there really was a shortage," he said. "Once prices get where the oil companies want them, and the independent segment of the fuel industry is put out of business, I won't be too surprised to hear that the shortage is over."

Activities Board

The May 1 meeting of the Activities Board was called to order by Chairperson Karl Hahn at 3:05 p.m. The minutes of April 22 were approved.

OLD BUSINESS—Perriera reported that as of this date, 650 tickets have been sold for the Grateful Dead concert on May 12.

Phil Klink, representative of Gary Naseef Presents, approached the board with an offer to be the exclusive promoter for the ASUN in its concerts. Discussion followed on this proposal, and most members felt that the board would lose some of its flexibility for concerts if exclusive rights were given to one promoter. Since business manager Cris Cufflin was not present, Mayer moved to table the decision until next week. Jensen seconded the motion, and it carried with none (0) opposed.

Next, the board reviewed two concert offers for the summer months. They were: Eagles and Joe Walsh for June 28 in the Coliseum and Loggins and Messina for Aug. 11 in the Coliseum. Discussion followed on these offers, with regard to ASUN's responsibilities and authorities during the summer months. After further discussion, Williams moved to approve both concerts (as stated above) with the tickets at $4.50 per person. Ten per cent of the net proceeds will be paid ASUN. May seconded the motion, and it carried with one nay vote (Bowman).

Hahn asked the board to be thinking about ideas for orientation activities next fall semester.

Mackay Day Chairperson Linda Bowman reviewed the activities and events for the remainder of Mackay Week. She urged all members to attend all of the events.

NEW BUSINESS—Representatives of the American Indian Organization requested permission to use the gymnasium on May 7 for a concert. Bowman moved to approve permission to use the gym on May 7. Mayer seconded the motion, and it carried with none (0) opposed.

Selection of Program and Budget Committee representatives was tabled until next meeting.

ADJOURNMENT—The meeting adjourned at 4:11 p.m.

UNR songleaders picked

The ASUN selected SONGLEADERS last week for the 1974-75 football and basketball seasons. The six girls will perform with the UNR Pep Band and lead cheers at all home and many away games.

Three from last year's quad are returning: Tillie Walker, Kathi Grover and Janelle Rederford. Two are UNR freshmen from Carson City High: Sue Bendure and Dena Sattler; and JoAnn Glogovac is from Sparks High. Alternates are Pam Lourentzos from Reno High and Cathy Yocum, currently a senior at Sparks High.

Candidates tried out last Monday night before a panel of ten judges after a week of clinics with outgoing songleaders.

Senate

The May 1 meeting of the ASUN Senate was called to order at 6:31 p.m. The minutes of April 24 were approved.

REPORT OF THE ASUN PRESIDENT—Mayer asked the senators to sign up again for their individual committee preferences, giving first and second choices. He also asked each senator to indicate whether he-she would be here during the summer months for any board or committee meetings that might have to be called.

Mayer announced that filing for the Sagebrush and Artemisia editors and business managers and Brushfire editor will close this Friday, May 3. As of yet, no person has filed for the position of Artemisia business manager.

NEW BUSINESS—Senator Colwell reviewed the resolution dealing with section 240.0 of the Constitution. He explained that if the section was stricken, more flexibility would be allowed in board choices. Engstrom moved to approve the resolution in its entirety. Ferrari seconded the motion, and it carried with none (0) opposed.

Mayer presented his resolution about amending section 440.1 of the Constitution so that the editors of the Sagebrush and Artemisia would be allowed to vote on Publications Board. He explained that this amendment did not get enough votes in the last election, so that it will be up again for a special election with the other resolution just approved.

Archer moved to approve the resolution in its entirety. May seconded the motion, and it carried with none (0) opposed. The special election will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

REPORT OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT OF ACTIVITIES—Hahn reported that the only action needing approval from today's meeting was the permission to use the gym by the American Indian Organization on May 7 for a concert. No funds were requested by the organization. Jensen moved to approve the action of the May 1 Activities Board dealing with permission to the American Indian Organization to use the gym on May 7. Ferrari seconded the motion, and it carried with none (0) opposed.

REPORT OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT OF FINANCE AND PUBLICATIONS—Filson announced that Finance Control Board will meet on Thursday, May 2 at 5:30 p.m. He also announced that Publications Board will meet on Tuesday, May 7 to elect the editors and business managers of the Sagebrush and Artemisia and the Brushfire editor. He urged all to attend this important meeting.

Filson then reviewed the minutes of the April 24 Publications Board meeting. Engstrom moved to approve the minutes. Mills seconded the motion, and it carried with one abstention (Williams) and none (0) opposed.

REPORT OF THE SENATE PRESIDENT—Bowman asked the senators for a consensus about helping Patrice Bingham with distribution of the posters and flyers on campus to the various areas. Each senator would pick up this information each Wednesday and distribute it to his-her colleges and living groups. Senators agreed that they would help Bingham with this work.

Bowman urged all members of Senate to attend the events of Mackay Week. She briefly reviewed the events.

ADJOURNMENT—The meeting adjourned at 6:59 p.m.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The women athletes simply do not have enough money to be able to engage in the volume of events they would eventually like to be able to. So the ASUN is sponsoring a WOMEN'S ATHLETIC FUND-RAISING LUNCHEON on Saturday, May 11 at the El Dorado Hotel-Casino. Donations for the affair are $10 per person. Mrs. Mike O'Callaghan will be guest hostess and PGA golf champion Susie Maxwell Berning the guest speaker. The women's gymnastics team will also be performing.

Tickets are being sold through Tuesday at the Activities Office in the Jot Travis Student Union. Help support the Women's Athletic Program at UNR.

ROTC does itself proud

The Centennial Coliseum rang with the sound of cadence, clicking heels and drum and bugle music as the UNR ROTC Department hosted the Eighth Annual Nevada Invitational Drill Meet. On Friday, April 26, local high schools met in head-to-head competition for honors. Manogue High School's women's team, the Gold Diggers, continued its supremacy, winning first place in the women's category for the three phases of competition: inspection, regulation and exhibition drill. In addition, Manogue had the highest total points overall, and were declared the meet winners. This win marked a clean sweep for the Gold Diggers, who in their first year of military style competition have won overall honors in all three high school meets.

Reno High School JROTC Men with Arms won the overall men's category and also took first place in regulation and exhibition drill. Wooster High School JROTC men won first place inspection.

Reno High's Drum and Bugle Corps won that event, but Wooster bounced back to take two firsts in the individual drill events. Kevin Harper and Dennis Star, both of Wooster, won the individual drill down events.

On Saturday, intercollegiate competition featured teams from UCLA, USC, Oregon State, Arizona, Washington, Idaho and New Mexico.

The competition was judged by drill sergeants representing the Army, Marines and Air Force. Each team was graded on the three phases. In the first phase—inspection—perfection and uniformity in both appearance and knowledge of military drill are sought. The second phase—regulation—requires each team to perform a five to six minute series of drill movements. Each team is then graded on proper sequence uniformity and ability to perform the maneuvers properly.

The last phase—exhibition—is a real crowd pleaser. Here, teams can innovate and perform intricate and difficult movements not normally seen. When the judging and final tabulation was in, UNR's ROTC teams had won a total of six trophies, their best showing all year. In addition, Cadet Frank Caravella was named outstanding commander of the meet for his work with Nevada men's team, the Sierra Guard.

In other competition, Grace Adams placed second in the women's individual drill. The Caissons, commanded by Nevada's Debbie Tracy, placed first in inspection, second in regulation and third in exhibition. The team was a close second to the women's category winner, the Idaho State University Scotch Guard.

Oregon State University's Naval ROTC drill team won overall honors for men's team and also took first in inspection and exhibition. The UNR men's team, The Sierra Guard, won a third place trophy in regulation drill and came in second in exhibition. The Nevada team was third overall.

UNR BATTERS have become doubly dangerous since Coach let them hit with two bats.

Pack gags on Ags

After dumping the Reno Silver Sox 10-6 Monday night in a 16-hit performance, the UNR Wolf Pack baseballers returned to collegiate action Tuesday against the University of California, Davis. Their bats were cold, however, as they barely managed a split with the Aggies.

The Aggies walked away with the first game of the double header, 14-4, as every batter got at least one hit in their 22-hit performance against the Pack. The second game was closer as the Pack edged the non-league foes, 9-8, with the help of a fantastic catch and a timely hit.

Lyle Walters, a native of Sparks, made a leaping catch in the eighth inning of the nightcap to prevent an Aggie sweep.

Walters' heroics made it possible for freshman Tim Riley, who is also a Sparks product, to rap his game winning single in the bottom of the same inning.

Stew Colton, who relieved starter Rich Jamieson after five innings, picked up the win. The Nevada senior now has a record of 6-4.

Centerfielder John Phenix and leftfielder Tom Kolesar, each had some runs in the Pack's seven-hit cause.

In the initial contest, the Aggies had put 10 runs on the scoreboard before Nevada could break the ice in the bottom of the sixth with three runs.

The Pack's Mike Torres, Phenix, Kolesar and Riley, led the Pack getting eight of the Pack's nine hits and an RBI apiece.

Senior Mike Henley took the loss, which drops his mound record to 2-4.

On Feb. 16, the Pack lost its season opener to U.C. Davis, who stopped the Pack in a doubleheader, 3-1 and 5-4.

The Pack is in the middle of playing 11 games within eight days. It started last Friday with Santa Clara and ends tomorrow with a single game with the University of the Pacific.

Coach is Fairman

The Wolf Pack tennis team will make a bid for the tournament championship today in Santa Clara as coach Bob Fairman's netters begin the three-day West Coast Athletic Conference Tennis Tournament.

Nevada, which had a 12-3 record before yesterday's match with the University of Santa Clara, will be trying to improve on a third place finish of last year.

Coach Bob Fairman said, "I'll be very pleased to finish that well this year."

Pack ace Kyle Ramos will head a team of four, which includes superb freshman Bill Gardner, number three man Jeff Everson and Ken Schuller, who led the Pack to a 8-1 victory over the University of Pacific last Saturday.

Nevada's netters will have to contend with last year's champions and tourney favorite Seattle University if they are to better their last year's mark.

This year the WCAC has instituted a different scoring and elimination procedure into the tournament. There will be four titlists for each of the four seedings, instead of the first seeded player competing against an opponent's number four player.

The Pack will finish its season next Thursday afternoon when they entertain St. Mary's College.

Pack gets four

UNR's football team received a boost in the program as it greeted the 1974 season with the signing of four talented players.

Hap Capel, a Sacramento native, is a 6-3 linebacker who played his prep football at Elk Grove High School. The 226-pound defensiveman was selected all-league, despite missing the first two games because of an injury.

The Pack picked up another linebacker prospect as Oregon product Mark Graham signed a National Letter-of-Intent with Nevada. The 6-2, 220-pound Graham won All-Conference honors while playing for Clackamas Community College in Oregon City, after breaking into collegiate football with Oregon State his freshman year.

John Adza, who comes to Nevada from Bellarmine High School in San Jose, is a fine offensive guard and has a great future at Nevada. The 6-3, 245-pound guard was selected to the All-West Catholic Athletic League team last year.

Rounding out the foursome is another Oregon native, Tom Foster. The 6-1 defensive back played his prep football at Klamath Falls High School, where he won all-conference honors.

Head coach Jerry Scattini said, "We're very pleased to have these four players sign with Nevada. All of them will be a definite asset to our program."

Dave the Rave

UNR's football standout Dave Clapham signed a free agent contract Tuesday with the San Francisco 49ers, of the National Football League.

Clapham, who had previously been approached by the Dallas Cowboys and the Hawaiians of the World Football League, has a $15,000 contract and will add an additional $5,000 if his name is on the final roster.

Gals score

UNR's women's softball team streaked last week and they streaked to their third consecutive victory without a loss, edging Davis State 3-2 on Friday, and returned on Saturday afternoon to dump Chico State, 7-1.

Junior Brenda Greer led the Pack gals Friday as the native Las Vegan singled in the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning to power her squad over last year's league champion Davis.

Catcher Darlene Meredith continued her hitting spree as she singled three times in four attempts. Freshman pitcher Cam Brownell picked up her second victory of the season.

Saturday's victory over Chico tied the record for most league wins by a Nevada team—three. It was also the first time that a UNR women's team has beaten Chico in any sport.

Nevada scored six runs in the third inning with singles by Frances Massoth, Greer, Brownell and Meredith, and two walks to put the game on ice.

Coach Olena Plummer said that alert base running and fine fielding were the keys to the win.

Brownell recorded her third consecutive win while allowing four hits and a walk in the seven inning contest.

The gals will be in action tomorrow when they travel to Sonoma for a 11 a.m. game. They then play a non-league contest with Humboldt State at 2 p.m.
