The grand delusion

Newspaper editors as a group tend to suffer from a great number of delusions. It's all part of the territory; they come with the office. Most of the delusions stem from the incredible ego an editor needs in order to do his job.

It doesn't really require much self-confidence to be able to sit and write down your opinions on assorted subjects. However, it takes one hell of an ego to order 4,000 copies of the opinion printed and to then distribute the copies around the campus.

The first of an editor's delusions is that someone is going to read what he writes, a dubious assumption at best. Once he is convinced that someone is reading his writings, the editor then deludes himself into believing that his arguments are so persuasive that the reader's mind will be changed and the editor's thoughts will be accepted.

The principal delusion, however, is that the editor can actually change the course of events simply by writing an editorial. Just imagine how great you would feel if you could write an end to racism, sexism, communism, classicism or any other -ism you didn't happen to like. Just imagine how wonderful the world would be if everyone was as brilliant as us editors.

Well, unfortunately, it doesn't work that way. My sentences will never solve any of the university's problems, or any other problems, except maybe that of too much white space on page two. I'll never convince you to help put an end to racism; I'll never convince ASUN to stop messin' around with concert promoters; and I'll never convince you to stop by the student union tomorrow or Wednesday and vote for your favorite candidates for ASUN offices.

Even though the organization pays most of our bills, we're not going to try to prove to you that ASUN is going to play a vital role in your future. The decisions made by the Board of Regents and the Faculty Senate are of much more importance and are more likely to directly affect every one of us.

On the other hand, ASUN is a long way from being insignificant. It has the potential to be a strong voice for the university in general and the students in particular.

Probably more important, however, is its ability to spend money. The ASUN budget runs in the neighborhood of $200,000. About a quarter of that budget subsidizes publications—Sagebrush, Artemisia and Brushfire. Approximately 20 percent is doled out to numerous organizations—one of which you're probably a member of. ASUN even employs several professionals to help look after its afters.

Now we don't know about the rest of you, but we're damn careful about who we let spend our money. Last year about 1,300 were interested enough to vote in the elections—and last year there was an independent party and there were controversies. The outlook for this year is not good.

So we're not going to suggest that you take the time to vote because you probably won't. But it would sure do our collective egos a lot of good if you do!

To the Editor

Peaceful co-existence

There have been a large number of articles written to the editor of the UNR student newspaper, Sagebrush. Some have been unique, and others, downright ignorant. One event which has drawn considerable exposure is the "supposed" mistreatment of a horse at the equestrian facility on Valley Road. Some views support the trainer and his attempt to halter-train the horse, while others support the horse and try to show the trainer's belligerent actions toward the animal. In a matter of this type, I feel that a non-partial view should be taken.

Some individuals support the idea that the horse was wild. In the true sense of the word, the horse was not wild. The horse is a domesticated animal, which does coexist with man. The domestication of any animal is a two-phased process. Each party must benefit from the domestication process. The horse performs labor for man, and man in turn, feeds the animal and provides protection. Some people make the mistake of calling the "broomtails" they see ranging western lands wild. These animals are not wild, but feral. A feral animal is one that has been domesticated and been lost or wandered from man's habitations. There is only one truly "wild" specie of horse which inhabits the earth at this time, Przewalski's horse.

Another aspect of this matter is the behavioral patterns of individuals within a given specie. No one organism will respond in the same way to given stimuli, other than various stimuli encountered for basic survival (hunger, reproduction, group interactions of same specie, etc.). This horse is an example of this theory. Obviously this horse was high-strung. (She'd roll in a chute, etc.)

If I interpreted the article in the Sagebrush correctly, the trainer attempted to halter-train the horse in front of a class, which I feel was a mistake. He should of, unless funds would not allow, picked a more docile mannered horse. Please don't interpret this as a tame horse, but one which was more predictable. (High-strung horses are noted for inflicting self wounds and unpredictable behavior.)

I'd also like to point out conditions at the equestrian facility. I must also admit that I haven't toured the facility as a whole. If I'm correct there is no bronc pen at the facility. I haven't even seen a snubbing post in any of the corrals. Also, steel is not the best material to be used in the making of a bronc corral. It survives weathering, but, because of its hardness, will injure high-strung animals.

I feel that more funds should be allotted to the equestrian facility for improvements, and the faculty commended for making do with what they have at the present time.

There's an old phrase which applies to all domesticated animals even though it singles out the horse: "There never was a horse that couldn't be rode, nor a cowboy throw'd."

Don't take the above phrase on face value, instead, try to think of the domestication of an animal for the benefit of both parties. Some animals are harder to train than others but with patience and understanding man and animal can be welded into a single beneficial unit.

Heartfelt, confusing

Bill Brown's column of March 3 about the prospective Nazi march at Skokie, Ill., is heartfelt and confusing. True, decent people must be revolted by the doctrines and intentions of the self-styled American Nazis who plan the demonstration of hate.

But we are not helped to consider the situation by saying that "the Nazis are hiding behind the protection of the First Amendment." Nor is it proper to say that, by finding unconstitutional the city ordinances prohibiting the march, a judge asserts "the Nazis will have the right to bring back the horrors of the camps, the attempted genocide and the torture."

Of course the march must prove painful to survivors of the Holocaust, as to all who feel threatened by crazy or vicious ideas. The First Amendment is a protective screen for all of us, protection against anybody who

Primary elections open tomorrow

DON LaPLANTE

Primary elections for ASUN president and in four colleges will be held tomorrow and Thursday to narrow the field of candidates.

The three candidates for president will be cut back to two. All three are currently members of the ASUN senate, and are emphasizing similar issues in their campaigns. The candidates are Mike Cirac, a junior in political science and a member of Sigma Nu, Gregory Neuweiler, a senior in finance, and Heidi Waterman, a junior in political science.

All three candidates are urging that the United Students of the University of Nevada System (USUNS) be made into a more productive organization. They also urge that a Nevada Student Lobby be established to allow the voice of the students to be heard in Carson City.

Cirac said in his campaign materials that he would work for the establishment of a campus pub and the easing of alcohol restrictions on campus during the major weeks and special events. He is also urging improvements in the dorms and parking.

Both Cirac and Neuweiler mentioned the legal services program in their campaign flyers and urged that the program be developed.

Neuweiler said he would investigate food conditions and would work to improve food quality. He also promised to restore the respect of the regents, which he said has deteriorated over the past year. He also said that with his administration there would be better communication with the students and pledged to complete a teacher course evaluation program.

Waterman called for better support for the UNR library along with a change in athletic funding to provide more support for minor sports and to balance the disproportionate funding between men's and women's sports. She also urged the promotion of bicycling to help ease automobile congestion on campus and in the community.

All three presidential candidates have been making the rounds speaking to various student organizations. The final stop will be tonight at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of the Thompson Student Services building where an election reception will be held. Candidates for the executive offices will speak and the senate candidates will be introduced.

In addition to the presidential race, primary elections will be required for the senate seats in agriculture, business administration, engineering and mines.

In agriculture, there are five candidates for the two seats, and the primary will narrow the field to four. Don Kennedy, a senior in plant, soil and water is running for re-election. Grant Luetkehans, a junior in renewable natural resources; Denise Miller, a senior in agricultural economics; Butch Ricci, a junior in agricultural economics and a member of Phi Delta Theta; and Mike Surber, a junior in range management, are also running for the seats.

The primary will cut the nine business administration candidates down to eight, who will compete in the general election for the four available positions. The candidates are Steve Hill, a sophomore in business economics and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Scott Koepf, a sophomore in managerial sciences; Steve Mack, a sophomore in business; Stan Marks, a junior in accounting and a member of Sigma Nu.

Phillip Pacheco, a sophomore in accounting and a member of Alpha Tau Omega; Mike Pacini, a sophomore in accounting; Lee Pieiewski, a junior in managerial sciences; Kirk Schumacher, a junior in managerial sciences and a member of Sigma Nu; and Clifton Young, a senior in pre-law.

In engineering, there are four candidates for the one available seat. The primary will cut the field in half. The candidates are Shawn Casey, a junior in mechanical engineering; Pat Fritchel, a senior in civil engineering and a member of Sigma Nu; Jon Hamel, the incumbent and a senior in mechanical engineering; and Craig Marshall, a sophomore in mechanical engineering and a member of Alpha Tau Omega.

There are also four candidates in mines for the one seat. Those running are Michael Hays, a freshman, and Dean Hunt, a junior, both in chemical engineering (not civil engineering as erroneously reported in Friday's Sagebrush); Naomi Smith, a senior in geology, and Doug Stephenson, a sophomore in mining engineering.

Voting will take place from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the lounge of the Jot Travis Union. ASUN had planned to have all of the voting done on computer cards, as in the Washoe County elections. However, due to computer programming delays, the primary election will be done with paper ballots, which will be counted by hand. The general election is still expected to be computerized.

The ballots from the primary election will be counted immediately after the polls close on Thursday. The results should be available late that evening, and will be printed in Friday's Sagebrush.

A & S students termed barely literate in report

DON LaPLANTE

Arts and Science Dean Rebecca Stafford has come under fire from ASUN President John McCaskill for saying in a report that UNR arts and science students are barely literate in the English language and that they are generally interested only in the grade they receive in a course and not learning for its own sake.

The statements were in a self-study done by the university for the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges, the regional association which certifies that the university meets certain standards.

In the report's section on arts and science students, written by Stafford, it says the quality of students has not improved markedly over the past decade and students are vocationally oriented.

McCaskill said it is a slap in the face of the students to say they are not literate when the rest of the report says the quality of faculty, curriculum and instruction has improved.

"Everything is so positive except the section about the student. If they think the statements are true about the students, then that is a reflection on the institution," McCaskill said.

He also said negative statements such as those should have been based on specifics rather than general assumptions. He said it is the teachers who place a lot of emphasis on grades and it is ridiculous not to expect the students to respond to that.

Stafford said she was answering specific questions posed by the accrediting organization and she was trying to answer the questions as honestly as possible. She also said she may have overstated some of the circumstances.

"However, according to the ACT (American College Test) scores, the students are not coming in better prepared, except in science and math. Their English is abysmal. A lot of seniors, not freshmen but seniors, don't even know the difference between 'accept' and 'except,'" she said.

She emphasized she was not trying to make it sound like she was placing the blame on the students. She said a good amount of the blame could be placed on the faculty for failing to make students write enough in classes.

"It's probably a combination of things. We often grade only on the content, not on the language. I am just as guilty of this as anyone else. We say we know what they mean and it's the content that matters," Stafford said.

She said the real blame should be on the educational system that does not place enough emphasis on written English and too much emphasis on the grading system.

"We may be holding them up to a false standard. We put too much emphasis on grades. The grade point average is the major thing relied on as people try to move up the educational ladder. To get into college, graduate school, medical school or law school we don't want to know how much a student has learned; we want to know his grade point average," Stafford said.

"...the students are not coming in better prepared, except in science and math. Their English is abysmal. A lot of seniors, not freshmen but seniors, don't even know the difference between 'accept' and 'except.'"

McCaskill said he doesn't know what evidence there is to back up the statements made in the report, but that he is disturbed the statements were put into a public report without enough thought or consideration.

Stafford said she probably should have gone into greater detail in explaining what she meant, but there are space limitations in such a report and she didn't mean to cast aspersions on the student body.

She said she hopes some of the problems will improve when a new director for the freshmen English program is hired. She also said she thought the

Logo winner named

Glenn Grisillo was recently named winner of the ASUN "One and Only" logo contest. The original art work and later alterations are on display in the ASUN office for the month of March.

Grisillo was awarded $200 for his winning drawing, selected from more than 50 entries submitted to ASUN. According to selection committee "Besides the overall aesthetic appeal of Glenn's two entries, the members of the committee were especially impressed with his innovative letter design and the simplicity which he incorporated with a number of balanced graphic effects," said selection committee Chairman Keith Kullby. "The board felt that he reflected many of their own feelings and sense of purpose in a direct and meaningful way."

Born in Johannesburg, South Africa, Grisillo was graduated from UNR in 1972 with a major in speech and drama and a minor in art. He is currently head tennis pro at the Moana West Racquet Club.

Full use of the logo will not begin until after the new ASUN officers have been elected and installed in office.

trends she mentioned were national and did not apply just to UNR.

"ACT scores nationally are down. It is constantly talked about in professional journals.

"There is no reason why they (the students) should not be vocationally oriented. They want to have a good job. I want to have a good job too. One of the biggest complaints I hear is, for example, the foreign language requirement doesn't help me get a job," Stafford said.

The report is being distributed around campus and to visiting faculty and administrators on the accreditation committee. The committee is on campus through Wednesday and will make its recommendation later on whether the university should retain its accreditation. However, it would be rare for a school as large as UNR to lose the accreditation without many years notice.

The Candidates

Heidi Waterman

The following are candidates' position papers received by the Sagebrush prior to our deadline Sunday. They have not been edited in any way.

Candidates in the general election next week are reminded that position papers will be accepted until 7 p.m. Sunday. Presidential candidates will again be allowed 500 words. All others will be allowed 300.

ASUN President

Gregory Neuweiler

The office of ASUN president demands knowledge of the position, as well as the proper experience needed to attain objectives efficiently and effectively.

My objectives are:

To get the Nevada student lobby going strong. The new legislature meets in January and through USUNS we can get our voice heard in Carson City. We need to coordinate our efforts in order to make the regents realize our needs.

To develop better lines of communication between the office of president and the students. A regular report of the president should be made available to all students with the aid of student publications.

I have heard, more than once, that the food conditions with SAGA should be investigated. As president, I will make a personal effort on behalf of the students to insure the best possible food conditions.

The legal aid program is nearing completion and as president I will guarantee that this program be continued.

The teacher course evaluation program has been the main goal of the Academic Affairs Committee and I have a great interest in this area. I feel that any student has the right to learn as much as possible about a professor's methods of teaching. I will continue the work necessary to make it a working reality.

My primary reason for running for the office of ASUN president is that since I have become involved with student government, I have come to realize the possibility and potential of student government. I am a member of the ASUN Senate, Finance Control Board, Program and Budget Committee, Investment Committee and the chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee.

I feel that I can best represent all of the goals of the student body and I have the ability and knowledge to implement them. Through a system of mutual cooperation and trust, a great deal can be accomplished. I feel I can do the job. All I need is your support and your input and we will have a much better student government.

Mike Cirac

The students of UNR need a strong voice in the president's office. I believe I can provide this strength and best represent you the students in the year ahead. The proposals below outline my stance on some of the issues and problems at UNR.

USUNS AND THE STUDENT LOBBY

The United Students of the University of Nevada System (USUNS) provides an excellent opportunity for the students to unite and exercise their power. Through this organization, we can institute a student lobby in Carson City and make our presence felt.

LEGAL AID

I plan to continue the work of the Students Services Committee which has been working on a good program of free legal aid for students. I have a working knowledge of this program and plan to develop it to benefit the students.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE REQUIREMENT

We need to improve both the language lab and the facilities of the foreign language department. Since there is little chance of abolishing the requirement, we should concentrate our efforts on developing an option.

DORMS AND DINING COMMONS

The key to solving the problems which have arisen in the dorms is to make sure adequate funds are available for improvements. The time has come to improve dorm conditions rather than simply maintain them. I also plan to negotiate with SAGA for improved conditions and more variety in the dining commons.

These are my major proposals. I have been at UNR for three years now, and have experienced most of the problems facing the students. I want solutions as bad as you do and I will do a good job. I'm not running for this office as an item for my resume. I really believe we can work together to make UNR a better university. When you vote this week, I ask you to give me that opportunity.

In order to improve the quality of education within any educational system a strong leader is necessary. I'm Heidi Waterman and I'd like to be your next ASUN president. I'm of junior standing, and although I'm majoring in political science I have interests in various other areas, including environmental studies.

There is a need for more active representation of the students at UNR, and the student presidency holds great potential. I regard this office as more than just another administrative post—it is a forum and platform for championing the interests of both the students and the whole campus community.

While there are a number of important subjects of interest to students, here are some of the issues I believe should be addressed this year—particularly with a new legislative session included in the next student president's term of office. I'm certainly ready to answer any questions you may have about my positions on any other issues.

STUDENT LOBBY:

The USUNS organization (United Students of the University of Nevada System), which has never been utilized in a productive manner, should be continued and expanded, particularly for formation of an effective student lobby to support any issue which would benefit the entire University of Nevada System.

LIBRARY SUPPORT:

It is vital that the new student president push for more legislative funding to both improve the UNR library collection and to increase library hours.

CAMPUS CONGESTION:

To ease automobile congestion—not just on campus but in the community at large—we should encourage and promote bicycling.

ATHLETIC FUNDING:

It is time to balance the presently disproportionate funding between men's and women's athletics, while helping to promote "minor" sports.

NEW COURSE IDEAS:

We should instigate more "direct education" courses in which students interact with specialists on specific subjects of interest to the community, resulting in more community involvement, shared knowledge and mutual benefit.

THE STUDENT PRESS:

During my years at UNR, I have seen regrettable and wholly unnecessary harrassment of campus journalists. I believe it is good to see the student press prodding and scrutinizing student politicians. It is time to respect freedom of the press on the campus.

During my three years at UNR I've been politically active, not only in student government but in community politics as well. I'm currently a student senator (Arts and Science), an Activities Board member, an Academic Affairs committee member and have been appointed to the Reno Municipal Commission on the Status of Women. I have the past experience of being Nevada student representative to the State Board of Education, and participated in high school student government.

While I feel it's important to continue and improve projects initiated by previous student administrations, it's also important to instigate change. I have a lot of good ideas for change, and am always open to new suggestions. I'm anxious to work for and with the students of this campus and would like to urge your support and input not only on election day, but during the academic year to come.

College of Business Administration

Mike Pacini

Are you interested in learning how to become a more efficient consumer in today's complex economy?

When I enrolled in Economics 101 I expected to learn just that, how to spend, save and manipulate my money to its fullest potential. As it turned out, I did not. I believe that every student majoring in business should have the opportunity to enroll in such a course that would provide him with a knowledge as to how to efficiently manage his money and in addition receive business credits while taking the course. Curious as to why, I checked into the idea and now, its occurrence looks probable. With interested students we can turn this opportunity into a reality.

My name is Mike Pacini and my major is accounting. Since I have been attending UNR, I have developed and taken strong interest in student activities and, particularly, student government. For these reasons and more, I am running for business senator.

I feel I am qualified to be among your representatives for various reasons. I have taken part in many school activities, to name a few: ASUN Representative, Senate Policy; Library Committee; President, UNR Law Club; Chief Justice, White Pine Hall.

PRIME OBJECTIVES:

Support for an on-campus legal aid clinic.

To continue my efforts in establishing a course at the business college in consumer education.

A typing room policy for students enrolled in the college of business.

Support of all business related extracurricular activities including the Student Accounting Society, UNR Law Club, Northern Nevada Student Personnel Society, Delta Sigma Pi and all other organizations that sponsor significant and beneficial activities.

Most importantly, I will strive to satisfy the desires of students by responding to their wants and needs.

Scott Koepf

My name is Scott Koeff and I am running for business senator. In the past year I have been involved in student government through membership on several committees and I see the biggest problem on campus as being the lack of communication and involvement. Although this problem involves the entire university I believe a step in the right direction can take place in the business college. To improve communication I suggest that a bulletin board in Ross Business Building be dedicated solely to senate activities and information as their impact on business students. I also think a newsletter from each senator to the students of his college should become a standard for every college. I also believe each of the business senators should maintain office hours of one hour a week so they can receive input from the students. I also plan to visit classes to make announcements and to get ideas from those in the class. To encourage involvement I suggest that a barbeque be held for the entire business college so that business students can meet and possibly be exposed to some of the business organizations open to them. On a university-wide basis I believe publicity and advertising of events should be increased so as to try to erase some of the apathy on campus. These are just a few of my ideas that I would like to see become reality. Each of these ideas are easily obtainable if someone is willing to put the time and energy into the job of business senator. I am that someone but I need your support so vote Scott Koepf for business senator.

Stan Marks

In the time I've been on campus I've been very actively involved in student affairs and have followed the workings of student government with a great deal of interest. Through my observations, and conversations with various students and student groups, I have drawn up a list of realistic goals toward which I would work if elected as your senator.

One area of particular concern with the upcoming legislative year is the realization of a strong lobby group in Carson City in order to maintain and improve our quality and business education.

As a member of Blue Key and other social organizations I have a strong interest in the social aspect of a student's college experience. If elected I will work to have included in the new addition to the student union a student pub for our enjoyment.

Also I would like to work toward making the Sagebrush more self-sufficient by creating more revenue through increased advertising.

As a member of the ASUN Intramurals Committee I've been working with the head of intramurals to improve the intramural program on campus. I would like to continue in this capacity as your senator.

If elected as your senator, I will be a responsible representative who will make sound, well-thought-out decisions. My name is Stan Marks, and I would very much appreciate your support when you vote.

College of Engineering

Pat Fritchel

I think it's time the students in engineering had a strong voice in the senate to represent them. I am prepared to be that voice.

The engineering societies have been a valuable teaching tool for many students. I would make sure they receive their fair share in funding. More students should be allowed to attend their national conventions.

As a senior, I have been actively involved in my engineering society, ASCE, and other university organizations.

As our college continues to grow, better lines of communication are needed. A regular newsletter would not only be a means of communication between students, but one of professors and students.

Mackay School of Mines

Dean Hunt

My name is Dean Hunt and I am a junior in Chemical Engineering. During my two years at UNR I have become increasingly concerned with many of the problems facing the university proper and Mackay School of Mines in particular.

I feel there are three major problems facing the university community. First, student parking is becoming increasingly more difficult. ASUN should make an effort to lease the cement slabs over the freeway between Virginia and Center streets. This possibility and others deserve consideration. This pressing problem must be solved.

Secondly, the Activities Board needs to develop associations with concert promoters from the Bay Area. Local promoters have failed to provide adequate service. ASUN needs to spend the extra money necessary to bring quality activities to UNR.

Finally, rather than investing in stocks and bonds, ASUN should use student money to benefit the students. The present surplus of funds should be used to promote the above projects as well as other worthwhile undertakings.

The upcoming legislative session makes next year a crucial one for Mines. As Mines senator I would consult Dean Baker and the department heads to ascertain exactly what Mines needs. I would write each member of both the Board of Regents and the Legislature informing them of Mines' needs and the students' concern for the school's future credibility. These are things I can promise to do. In addition, I will try to convince ASUN to put their influence to good use by informing the legislators of the needs of the general student body and Mackay School of Mines in particular.

I realize the powers of any one individual in student government are limited. However, I promise to try to give Mines the voice it deserves in student government.

Senators

College of Agriculture

Mike Surber

My name is Mike Surber and I am running for senator from the College of Agriculture. I am in my junior year majoring in Renewable Natural Resources/Range Management option.

The UNR Rodeo Team has repeatedly been one of the best teams on the West Coast. Recognition of the Rodeo Team is well known, except to the UNR Athletic Department. Efforts were made in 1975 to recognize the Rodeo Team as part of the athletic budget, however, no further attempts at funding have been made. Each year the Rodeo Team schedule is subject to how much money is approved by the Finance Control Board. Since the members of the Rodeo Team practice and invest just as much time as some of the other intercollegiate sports it seems unfair that the Rodeo Team's schedule does not have secure funding from the Athletic Department as the other sports do.

The funding of Agriculture clubs and organizations such as Alpha Zeta, Forestry Club, Aggie Club, Range Club, Wildlife Club, Rodeo Club and Sodbusters will be one of my top priorities.

If ASUN has to watch its money this coming year, then budget cuts should come from the area of publications.

Sagebrush should become more self-sufficient through advertising.

Money appropriated for the Brushfire should be based on how many were circulated to students, and determination of whether faculty have more printed material than students. If the faculty does have a large portion of their works printed, which is a feather in their cap, then they should share in the funding.

If elected, I will try to implement the above ideas either through legislation in the ASUN Senate or through administrative channels.

Butch Ricci

My name is Butch Ricci and I am a candidate for agriculture senator. I am a junior majoring in Agriculture and Resource Economics. At present my activities include: vice president of the Aggie club; vice president collegiate 4-H club; member Alpha Zeta; member of the rodeo club; and member of Lincoln Hall association.

If elected I will work to keep present classes and labs such as the RMR classes and labs as well as the rest of the Agriculture College classes and labs appropriately funded. I will also work for the funding of other classes or labs that are needed but are not presently funded at this time.

At the same time I will work to maintain the standard and balance of distribution of funds throughout all the Ag clubs. If an increase in these funds is desired and deemed feasible (for projects, guest speakers, workshops, etc.) I will do everything in my power to see that this increase is granted.

I speak from the practical end of the college. I have been active in the College of Agriculture ever since I started school here. I have seen the era of the no-something senators. As your senator I will be a do-something senator and work for the college; not because it is my college but because it is our college and we should be proud of it.

My final point is that I need to hear from you. If you tell me what you need then things will get done; if you don't then I can't work for your interests as I would like to. I will be there for you; to represent you and to support you.

P.R. people asked to help

The local chapter of the American Red Cross knows when to lend a helping hand, and they also know when to ask for one.

The Sierra Nevada Chapter has asked UNR students to help plan their public relations program.

According to Theodore E. Conover, professor of journalism at UNR, the Sierra Nevada Chapter of the Red Cross is one of five non-profit organizations who have gone to his students for help.

Prof. Conover teaches a public relations course in which students will solve problems and formulate public relations plans during this semester for the various groups.

In addition to the local Red Cross, the students will be working with the State of Nevada Development Disabilities Advocate, the Division of Historic Preservation and Archeology; the Dilworth Community School; and the City of Reno Community Development Department.

"These people knew they needed help in public relations, so they came to us," said Prof. Conover, who added that the class has been divided, with three students working for each organization.

"In the past couple of years, this course has consisted of doing public relations problems out of a book. Working this way, with actual clients, ought to be a better learning experience," he stated.

Printmaking seminar set

The art of printmaking will be demonstrated by Prof. James McCormick before a group of Reno businessmen and women at noon on March 8.

The demonstration, which will take place in Room 206 of Church Fine Arts at UNR, will feature the printing of an etching and a discussion on the types and prices of prints.

The presentation will be the first in a series of "Sandwich Seminars" sponsored by the UNR College of Arts and Science and the Alumni Association in an attempt to bring the university and the community closer together.

A cross section of the community will be selected to attend each seminar, according to Harry Gianneschi, director of alumni relations and university development. Gianneschi added that although he would like to invite the general public, facilities are limiting the number that can be included.

"We want to show the community what is happening up here. These seminars are more or less a chance to show off our faculty and our facilities and the research that is going on," he said.

Gianneschi stated that the series will consist of six weekly seminars, each covering a different topic. He added that lunch will be served at each event.

Christian concert

Gospel Seed will be in concert March 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Center for Religion and Life auditorium.

The concert, presented by the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship on the UNR campus, is free, however a free-will offering will be taken.

Solve ACT problems

Any student having problems with the ACT financial aid forms can attend two separate workshops designed to help fill out the forms. The workshops will be held March 9 at 10 a.m. and again at 2 p.m. in the Thompson Student Services Center Auditorium.

African authority

A leading authority on African festival and art will be at UNR Thursday to present a free talk on African festival masquerades. The talk will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Church Fine Arts Theatre.

Simon Ottenberg, professor of anthropology at the University of Washington, has spent many years of field research in Nigeria and has published extensively on African culture, art and ritual.

Slides and other visual material will highlight the talk and emphasize the relation of festival costumes to Afikpo history, social organization and esthetic values. The Afikpo people design exotic masks and costumes for their annual cycle of festivals, and the result is an art form admired by European and American observers.

Ottenberg will also give a talk Friday titled "On Going Among the Limba for the First Time." The talk, to begin at 2 p.m. in MSS 204, will look at the problems he'll face when he begins a new field work adventure in July.

Ottenberg's talks are presented by the departments of anthropology and art and by the Nevada Art Gallery.

Literate Italians

Cash prizes of $6,250—more than twice the total of 1977 awards—will be made to 21 Italian-American writers in the second annual Unico National Literary Awards. The contest's purpose is to foster literary expression among 18 to 35-year-old Americans of Italian extraction.

Authors may write short stories or articles on any subject they wish. Judgment is based upon theme development, writing quality, creativity and suitability for publication.

Length should be between 2,500 and 3,500 words with the manuscripts type-

Interested in law?

The ASUN is looking for an interested, reliable student to administer its newly-formed legal information and referral service, which will go into operation at the end of March.

The student must have a minimum 2.0 GPA with upperclass status. Some legal background would be nice but it's not required. The student selected must have about two hours per afternoon available Monday through Friday.

If you are in the mood for this kind of work, please contact Peggy Martin in the ASUN office at 784-6589.

We need you!

Where are all those volunteers we need tomorrow at the polls? We need you now more than ever. Peggy Martin is desperately awaiting a flood of members of the student body to aid in the primaries tomorrow and Thursday and the general elections next Wednesday and Thursday, March 15 and 16.

If you can spare even one hour during either of these two sessions please contact Peggy Martin in the ASUN office at 784-6589.

Only those students who are running for an office or who are actively campaigning for a candidate are ineligible to help work at the polls.

Judicial vacancies

Applications continue to be available this week for the two vacated positions in the ASUN Judicial Council.

Applicants must have underclass status and possess a minimum 2.2 GPA.

Filing officially closes Monday, March 20 at 5 p.m. For applications and information see Peggy Martin in the ASUN office or call 784-6589.

Prestige available

Filing remains open for the prestigious and inundating position of Mackay Week chairperson.

Interested members of ASUN must be undergraduate students with a minimum 2.0 GPA.

Filing closes this Friday, March 10 at 5 p.m. See Peggy Martin in the ASUN office for details.

Hypnotic classes

The Bengston self-hypnotism class will be held this Saturday and Sunday, March 11 and 12.

The two-day class will be conducted in the Ross Business Administration Building, Room 213 from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

The course fee of $25 per person must be paid in advance at the ASUN office either in cash or by check. Checks should be made out to the Associated Students.

Bengston will also perform a solo engagement on Friday March 10 at 7 p.m., one half-hour earlier than previously reported. The evening of thrills is scheduled for the Jot Travis Lounge. Admission is free.

Speech cancelled

A speech by Ambassador Gale McGee, scheduled for Tuesday evening, has been cancelled. McGee will accompany Mrs. Jimmy Carter on a trip to Latin America in place of the speaking tour that was scheduled at colleges in the west.

Business frat meets

The need for counseling in salesmanship will be discussed when Delta Sigma Pi, a professional business fraternity, hosts Bill Carr at a meeting March 9 at 6 p.m. in the Executive Suite of the Ross Business Building.

College 4-H

The Collegiate 4-H Club will be meeting today at 4 p.m. in the Fleischmann Agriculture Building, Room 214, to discuss the Spring Fling, the national convention and the concession stand.

The best of seasons...

"The Fly" looks for an open man...

Edgar stuffs against BYU...

It will be remembered as the best of seasons until another team, possibly next year's, comes along to better it.

In only Coach Jim Carey's second year the UNR basketball team managed to turn on the city like never before. The Pack ended up 19-8 overall, its best finish since turning major college. And as the team rolled to a 14-1 mark on its home court, the crowds turned out in record numbers.

The Pack was often dominating, often mediocre and sometimes just flat out rotten. But, however things were going at the time, there was one thing the fans could count on—excitement.

There was Edgar Jones back again controlling the middle. Most people figured long ago that there was no way he would stay here as long as he has. But there he was, stuffing shots, stuffing baskets, drawing fouls and always showing that pained look.

The big turnaround though, came suddenly with the acquisition of the two junior college guards, Johnny High and Mike "Fly" Gray. High, the floor leader, and Gray, the final scoring champion, were about as consistent and dramatic as a backcourt duo can get.

But always the present-ranting, screaming, urging and directing was the man behind it all—Coach Jim Carey. Everything always had to be done his way and, as a result, two players left the team. But, although each loss was complete agony for a man so obsessed with victory, he would have to be pleased with the final product.

The stepladder to success has begun. Last year was the first winning season in 10 years and now, with 19 wins, they are among the nation's best. What lies ahead for the team that that is now the city's biggest draw?

Keep an eye on next year and find out.

...until next year!

Columnist cites 'Carter mystique'

Insights into the life of the president and observations on the journalism profession highlighted a speech given by Helen Thomas, UPI columnist and White House bureau chief, March 2 at UNR.

Speaking before about 150 people at the 14th annual Scripps Lecture in Journalism in the Travis Lounge of the Student Union, Thomas described Jimmy Carter as a "no-nonsense, no frills president, but he has miles to go and promises to keep."

President Carter has enormous mystique according to the columnist. She said that he runs liberally but governs conservatively.

Carter "has succeeded in arousing hope in the world," Miss Thomas said, and he will "leave a lasting legacy of human rights."

Miss Thomas said that Jody Powell and Hamilton Jordan are the president's closest aides and she commented that Jordan "has been advised to stay out of single's bars," an obvious reference to recent press attention given to charges that Jordan dumped a drink down a woman's dress in a Georgetown singles' bar.

Speaking about the first family, Thomas recalled the time she asked Billy Carter if he, like his brother, has been born again. To which Billy answered, "Once is enough."

Miss Lillian is a "pure delight," according to Miss Thomas. When the columnist asked Miss Lillian if she was proud of her son, she replied, "Which one?"

Thomas said that President Carter is at his best when he is teaching Bible school. She also feels that "it's been a happier White House than in the past."

Truth and accuracy are the profound responsibilities in the journalism profession, Thomas said, adding that "every day is an education."

"Bemused contempt" is how she describes President Carter's attitude toward the press.

Thomas ended her speech with the comment, "The press keeps people informed and democracy alive."

Miss Thomas began her career in journalism as a copy-girl for the Washington Daily News and went on to write radio news for 12 years. In 1943 she joined United Press International and was later assigned to the Justice Department, the FBI and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. In 1960 she began covering the White House under President Kennedy.

While covering Kennedy, Miss Thomas was the first woman to close a presidential news conference with the traditional "Thank you, Mr. President." She also accompanied Richard Nixon on his trip to China.

Wyoming VP Jackubauskas screened as chancellor

DON LaPLANTE

Edward Jackubauskas, academic vice president of the University of Wyoming, will be the second of three candidates for the position of chancellor of the University of Nevada System to be interviewed.

Jackubauskas will be interviewed by members of the Board of Regents in Las Vegas and Reno this week. He will meet with members of the university administration and be interviewed by faculty, students and alumni during his visit.

A reception to allow members of the university community to meet Jackubauskas will be held on tomorrow from 3:15 to 4 p.m. at the Center for Religion and Life, 1101 N. Virginia St.

Jackubauskas, 47, served last summer as acting president and has been the academic vice president at Wyoming since 1976. He also served for five years before that as dean of the College of Commerce and Industry. He received his doctorate in economics in 1961 from the University of Wisconsin. He has taught at Wisconsin, Iowa State University in Ames, and in Wyoming. He has worked for a number of governmental agencies and is the author of two books and 47 articles and monographs.

The regents will choose the new chancellor at a meeting in Las Vegas on March 17. The afternoon before, the regents' ad hoc chancellor selection committee will meet with a group of faculty, student and alumni representatives to receive opinions on the candidates. The committee will then decide who to recommend to the full board.

The board members interviewed John Barnes, professor of higher education at Northern Arizona University and former president of Boise State University, for the position last week. The final candidate, Donald Baepler, acting chancellor and UNLV president, will be interviewed next week.

Business deans chosen by Hughs

Appointments of associate dean and assistant to the dean in UNR's College of Business Administration were announced recently by Dr. Richard Hughs, dean of the college.

Dr. Glendel Atkinson, professor of economics, was appointed associate dean, succeeding Dr. Richard Cotter, who is returning to full-time faculty responsibilities in June after eight years as associate dean.

In his new position Atkinson will work with the dean in management, planning and developing programs, coordinating programs with other university units and improving business college relations with the community. He will also assume primary responsibility for student advising and graduate student assignments.

Appointed as assistant to the dean was Dr. Barbara Chism, assistant professor in office administration and accounting.

Chism, a member of the UNR faculty for five years, will develop improved systems for student advising, better record keeping and information generation within the college as well as improving communications with the alumni and the business community. During the 1978-79 academic year she will work to improve administrative processes for the academic functions of the college.

Atkinson, who joined the faculty in 1967 and served twice as the chairman of the economics department, received his bachelor's degree in economics from Humboldt State College in California and his doctorate in economics from the University of Oklahoma.

Chism received her bachelor's degree from Villa Marie College in Erie, Penn., a master's degree in business administration from Long Island University and a doctorate in higher education administration from UNR.

Memorial set for October

Guy L. Leonard, a UNR student, was killed last fall in a tragic automobile accident, but his dedication to the study of philosophy will have an important impact on both the university and the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Leonard of Reno, the student's parents, and UNR's philosophy department have announced plans for the Guy L. Leonard Memorial Conference in Philosophy to be held Oct. 29-31 at UNR.

Dr. Jack Kelly, chairman of the philosophy department, said that the Leonards contacted him shortly after their son's death to discuss ideas about an appropriate memorial. "They wanted to do something meaningful as a lasting tribute to their son's enthusiasm for learning," Kelly explained.

Discussions resulted in plans for a biennial conference that would probe a variety of philosophical issues. "We're very excited about this decision because it will give both the university and the community a chance to see some prominent people in many fields," Kelly said. "There are so many things you can learn from such people that aren't in their books and papers."

The subject of the first conference will be "Scientific Discovery," an area of study that Kelly pointed out was of particular interest to Guy Leonard. All sessions will be open to UNR faculty, students and interested public. This and later conferences in the series are funded "through the generosity of the Leonard family and the many friends who contributed to the memorial fund."

How Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics gives you a competitive edge in school.

School at any level means reading . . . lots of it. Keeping up with thousands of pages can take a heavy toll in time and energy, and grades. If you're typical, you read 150 to 350 words a minute. But how do you get ahead of the rest?

Evelyn Wood can triple your reading rate and improve your comprehension and study skills.

Hundreds of thousands of students use the Reading Dynamics Method. They find reading less of a chore. Concentration and retention improve, which can lead to better grades. A competitive edge is important . . . too important for you to delay.

Prove it to yourself today!

Whether you're thinking of grad school or the job market, or if you want to keep up with course reading today, let Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics give you a competitive edge.

In fact Evelyn Wood guarantees that you will triple your reading rate if you follow the course correctly, or your full tuition refunded. That's our competitive edge.

Athletics concern faculty at Thursday Senate meeting

DON LaPLANTE

Athletics and related activities will have a prominent role at the Faculty Senate meeting Thursday at 1:30 p.m. in Room 214 of the Fleischmann Agriculture Building.

The senate will discuss whether UNR should go into Division 1AA or 2 for football. The football divisions were changed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association at a meeting in January and the university has until March 14 to specify which division it wishes to enter.

Last week, the Intercollegiate Athletics Board voted unanimously to recommend that UNR go into Division 1AA. The reorganization affects only football, so the university will stay in Division 1 for all other sports.

The senate will also receive a report from the board on an incident earlier in the year between basketball coach Jim Carey and one of the players, Stan Murdaugh. There will also be a report on the problem of transfer students whose fall term overlaps the spring term at UNR.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of the establishment of a marching band at UNR. A community-based ad hoc committee has reported interest in forming a band and said in a report that it would attempt to raise the first-year cost if the funds for following years were to be forthcoming from the university.

The committee estimated the first-year cost, which includes funds for uniforms and instruments, would be about $100,000. The cost for future years was estimated at just under $47,000.

A reorganization proposal will also be before the senate. The change would move the department of geography from the Mackay School of Mines to the College of Arts and Sciences. The change has the endorsement of the faculty and deans involved.

The proposal would separate the geology-geography departments, with geology staying in the mines school. The rationale behind the change is that geography shares a broad liberal arts tradition with arts and sciences and would provide a better educational service in that college.

The senate will also begin the process of finding a permanent replacement for Max Milan, who was fired as UNR President by the Board of Regents on Feb. 10. A search committee will be formed to solicit and screen applications. It is expected that the process will take at least a year.

A change in the grade appeals mechanism approved by the senate in December will also be considered. The Academic Standards Committee recommends the senate reject a change made by the Academic Council.

The change would provide that if the faculty member does not or cannot act within a week after a hearing board makes a recommendation then the dean may implement the board's decision.

There will also be a presentation of draft policy on the use of human subjects in education and research at UNR. The senate will also consider recommendations from the Code Committee to provide continuity on university-wide personnel committees and to revise the code sections dealing with personnel files.

Can you afford not to exercise?

Dr. Ken Cooper, a nationally recognized expert on exercise and cardiovascular health, will present a seminar on physical fitness and aerobics, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, March 10, at Harrah's Convention Center, Reno.

The seminar is sponsored by the Northern Nevada Dental Society and Conferences and Institutes, a department of UNR's Extended Programs and Continuing Education.

Aerobics, derived from Greek words meaning air and life, is a system of physical conditioning designed to strengthen the heart, lungs and circulatory system.

Cooper, founder of the aerobic system 12 years ago, says it was developed as a tool not only to add "years to your life, but life to your years."

His three books—"Aerobics," "The New Aerobics" and "Aerobics for Women"—have sold more than six million copies and have been translated into 15 languages.

"Can You Afford Not to Exercise" is the title of Cooper's Reno presentation. Participants at the program will be taught how to initiate and follow through with a physical fitness program, while exercising safely to reduce the probability of heart disease.

Cooper's work in physical fitness has had an impact across the country. Virtually millions of Americans are following the aerobics program.

Cooper's program is used in more than 200 high school physical education programs and is also the official fitness program for the Navy, Air Force and many professional football teams.

Among Cooper's topics of discussion at the seminar will be exercise and cardiovascular health, the total effect of exercise on the body, and the development of a personal fitness program.

Persons wishing registration information should contact Marjorie Cutler at Conferences and Institutes. Enrollment will be limited.

Your taxes

IRS explains deductions

When can you go to Spain for a month and deduct the cost of the entire trip as an educational expense on your federal tax return? For most people the answer is "never." But, if you are a Spanish language teacher and your trip is mainly intended to improve your knowledge of the Spanish language and customs, you probably can.

That kind of educational expense is not the typical educational deduction, but it is perfectly acceptable to the Internal Revenue Service.

Deductible educational expenses include amounts spent for tuition, books, supplies, laboratory fees and even related travel and transportation. But the education must be required by your employer, be a requirement of law or regulation for keeping your salary, status or employment, or be related to maintenance or improvement of skills required in performing the duties of your present employment, trade or business.

Example: You are a nurse and were required by the hospital you work for to take a special course to bring you up-to-date on new respiratory therapy techniques. You pay the costs of the course yourself and are not reimbursed by the hospital. All your expenses would be full deductible. And in this case, the expenses would be deductible even if the employer had not required you to take the course. Expenses you voluntarily incur for education to maintain or improve skills in your occupation are deductible.

...you can deduct educational expenses as an adjustment to income tax or as a miscellaneous deduction.

Keep in mind, however, that educational courses which you are taking in order to meet the minimum educational requirements for your job or ones taken which qualify you for an entirely new trade or business, are not deductible.

In other words, an accountant whose employer asks him to get a law degree to broaden his background could not deduct the expenses. While the degree meets the required-by-employer test, a law degree also would qualify the accountant for a new career and would not be deductible.

The IRS does not consider a change of duties within the same general occupation to be a new trade or business. So, if you are transferred or promoted within the same company and take a course to familiarize yourself with another aspect of the same business, the cost of the course would be a legitimate educational deduction.

As already mentioned, even a trip to a foreign country can be an acceptable educational expense. Local travel for educational purposes also is deductible.

Suppose you work in Dallas, Texas, and go to Fort Worth, Texas, two nights a week to attend night classes at a university there. The course is required by your employer and is part of your individual career development plan with the company. You could deduct your round trip transportation expenses, including tolls and parking fees.

Depending on the nature of the expense and the line of work you are in, you can deduct educational expenses as an adjustment to income or as a miscellaneous itemized deduction.

Educational expenses for travel and transportation, outside salespersons, or that are reimbursed (up to the amount of reimbursement included in income) can be deducted as adjustments to income (line 23, Form 1040) whether you itemize deductions or not.

Expenses in excess of reimbursement for tuition, books, supplies, laboratory fees, and similar items are handled as miscellaneous deductions (Schedule A, Form 1040). But these expenses cannot be claimed on the form 1040A and you must itemize deductions.

If you are in doubt about deducting an educational expense, get all the answers in Publication 508, "Tax Information on Educational Expenses." You can obtain this free publication by using the order blank in your tax package.

Pack season over as NIT says "No"

STEVE MARTARANO

Suddenly, the UNR basketball team's season has come to a quick, unexpected end.

Sunday's regular season finale with St. Mary's was supposed to be a tuneup for post-season action. Instead, the Pack was denied an invitation to both the NCAA tournament and the NIT.

The 90-84 victory was played as if a win would cinch an invitation, which is what the Pack and most of its fans thought. The win gave the Pack 19 victories for the season and a second place finish in the WCAC, the team's best showing in the conference ever.

The team's 19-8 overall record is the best since the Pack became major college in 1971. As members of the Far Western Conference, UNR turned in better records only three other times; 1945-46 (25-8), 1951-52 (19-3) and 1965-66 (21-6).

In front of 5,620 Centennial Coliseum fans, UNR led the final contest throughout. Pack guard Mike Gray, who ended the season as the team's leading scorer, attempted 14 first half shots, making nine of them to total 18. The Pack led at the half 48-43.

UNR led by as much as 11 the second half. But following a pattern that has been commonplace as of late, center Edgar Jones fouled out with over 10 minutes left and UNR ahead 66-62.

But instead of bringing in Larry Johnson to replace Jones, coach Jim Carey instead substituted another guard, Raul Contreras. The result was a 3-5 performance from the floor by Contreras and 13 points as the Pack held off a Gaels last-ditch rally to claim the win.

Gray finished the game with 24 points to nose teammate Johnny High out for the team scoring title. Steve Hunter also played a pivotal role, pouring in 19 points and grabbing 13 rebounds.

Improving game by game, forward Mike Stallings copped the WCAC rebounding crown as he grabbed 20 bounds. He needed 18 to claim the title. Stallings also tallied 11 points.

But the main story of the day involved the NIT selection committee's failure to invite the Pack. UNR had been listed as one of the committee's final 32 teams on its list, so naturally anticipation was high as to Reno's chances.

But the Pack was snubbed, which left Carey and the rest of the team wondering why.

The Reno Evening Gazette contacted a member of that committee yesterday and he cited many reasons for the Pack being excluded. Among them was that UNR had played a fairly easy schedule over the year.

If it was any consolation to Pack fans, then it must be noted that the NIT rejected western teams as a whole. Only three clubs west of the Mississippi—Utah State, Texas and Nebraska—are going to the NIT. The other teams chosen include Georgetown, Virginia, Army, Rutgers, Virginia Commonwealth, Detroit, Temple, Fairfield, Dayton, Illinois State, Indiana State, South Carolina and North Carolina State.

The Pack can now only wait until next year, and anticipation for the 1978-79 campaign should be high. The only player that will leave the squad, provided Jones doesn't claim hardship, will be Larry Johnson. Carey has expressed a desire to acquire a junior college forward or two to fill the only real hole the Pack had this year.

Pacific enjoys Reno

RON ELLIS

The University of the Pacific spoiled the Wolf Pack baseball team's home debut Friday afternoon with an overwhelming 15-0 victory and extended Nevada's losing streak to seven games. The loss dropped the Pack to 3-6 in the Northern California Baseball Association and 5-10 overall. The Saturday doubleheader with UOP was rained out and re-scheduled for March 15.

"Today's game was poorly played all around," said Wolf Pack coach Barry McKinnon. "We couldn't hit, field, or throw."

Offensively, UNR was limited to only seven hits while being shut out for the second time this season. The only bright spot was shortstop Pat Chaney who went 3-3, including a double.

Meanwhile, the Tigers hammered Pack pitching for 14 hits and 15 runs. According to McKinnon, only sophomore hurler Randy Brunet was effective.

Brunet, an ex-Reno Huskie, was making his first appearance in a Pack uniform and gave up two hits and one earned run in two innings of relief work.

The game was actually close during the early innings. But Pacific erupted for five runs in the fifth inning against starter Greg Young.

Greg (Young) had been sick all week, and he started to tire," said McKinnon. "He began getting his pitches up in the strike zone, and that was all their hitters needed."

UNR did receive some good news. Leading hitter Rod Murphy (.353) is expected to see action this week. Murphy sustained a hairline fracture of the left arm against UC-Davis last week.

Nevada next travels to Moraga, Calif., for a three-game league series against St. Mary's College this weekend. Currently, the Gaels lead the conference with a 7-2 record.

'Rock'ing to a record

RON ELLIS

Cindy Rock saved her best effort of the season for the final game. Everytime Rock handled the ball it seemed to result in two points for Nevada. When the game was over, the 5-7 junior guard had scored 44 points—a Wolf Pack scoring record—to lead UNR women's basketball team to a season-ending 83-66 victory over Sacramento State Saturday night.

"I would have to say that was the best I've seen her play offensively," said Wolf Pack assistant coach Cindee Metzger. "I'm surprised Sacramento did not try to double team her."

Rock finished the night hitting 19-30 shots from the field and 6-7 free throws, including 25 points in the second half.

This marked the third time this season that the scoring record was topped. Becci Huddleston hit 32 points, and then Regina Ratigan scored 34 points earlier this year.

The only other Pack player in double figures was Ratigan with 10 points. Leading rebounders were Sue Pierce with 12 and Kathy Mead with 11.

Nevada controlled the game from the beginning. UNR held the Hornets scoreless for the first seven minutes to jump out in front 16-0, and they led 35-22 at the half. Sacramento never threatened during the second half as the Pack coasted to a 17-point victory.

"This is a great way to end the season," said Metzger, whose team finished with a 10-11 record. "Our kids really wanted this game, and they all played excellently."

The outcome was different Friday night when UC-Berkeley trounced Nevada 81-55. Cal led 10-0 with only three minutes gone and increased its lead to 44-28 at halftime. UNR narrowed the gap to 10 points, 54-44, with 12 minutes left, but the Bears scored four unanswered baskets and coasted to the victory.

The Pack made only 23-93 (26 percent) from the field and were out-rebounded by the taller Bears 67-34. Leading scorers for the Pack were Rock and Ratigan with 19 and 17 points respectively.

According to Metzger, the keys to the game were UNR's poor shooting performance and lack of an inside game. Mead, the 6-2 freshman center, was held scoreless in the game.

Although the season ended this weekend, the Pack coaching staff is already looking ahead to next year. "We lose only Sue (Pierce), so if we can replace her, have the kids work on their game during the off-season, and recruit a couple of high school players, we should be a fine representative of the university," said Metzger.

Netters nail down three

DAVE YEARY

The UNR tennis team extended its record to 7-0 last weekend, beating Chico State 8-1 on Friday and 6-3 on Saturday, and Sacramento State 9-0 on Saturday.

UNR's No. 1 player, Brian McQuown, won all his matches over the two days, but Coach Bob Fairman credited the entire team with the impressive showing.

"All the boys played real well," Fairman said. "We're pleased with the matches."

Both Chico and Sacramento have improved since last year, according to Fairman.

"They have the strongest teams they've ever had," he said. "A kid who was playing No. 3 for Chico last year is playing No. 6 this year."

"I think that our team has improved over last year, too," Fairman added. "The middle of our team (the third, fourth and fifth positions) is much stronger than last year."

The team played outdoors on Friday, but was forced into the Lombardi Recreation Center on Saturday. It was the first time this year the team has played indoors.

UNR will next be in action Friday against nationally ranked California at the university courts.

would shut us up, whether what we say is good or bad, and whatever his motives for wishing us quiet. By protecting the Nazis' right to assemble and provoke, the judge is in no way condoning the views they express. It is most unfair to suggest that he believes they have a right to persecute Jews or anyone else.

Mr. Brown acts properly in expressing his disagreement with the judge's decision. He acts improperly when he says that the judge "has entered into a conspiracy to allow violence in the name of freedom." That is a false and libelous statement. There is no evidence that the judge has acted secretly, no more than that any of us, the American Nazi Party or Mr. Brown or I, are hiding our true views.

'INJUSTICE!'

In this letter I would like to express my opinion about a matter which has been concerning me for as long as I have attended UNR, which is now approximately nine months. At this university there is a convention which seems to have been accepted by most, if not all, students or at least I have not heard too many protests voiced, though they are there. This convention concerns the manner students are compensated for their work on campus and I feel the time is long overdue that something is said about this subject. First of all, let me outline the present system. Basically students are paid, not for the work they put into the job that they perform but by their class-standing, thus whether they may be sophomores or seniors. This is then called "scale trained."

To any logically thinking individual this manner must cry out "INJUSTICE!" It should be obvious to anybody that the individual class-standing has nothing whatsoever to do with the amount of work the student has to put into the part-time campus job that he may have, and this suggests that the compensation presently is not awarded for the work but for the academic standing. Compensation, however, should be awarded without a doubt for the work done and eight hours are eight hours, for a sophomore as well as for a senior.

Another thing is that the payment for work done on campus MUST be revised in the very near future. It is not just, and I say this most emphatically, that students are USED just because they are students. There are sufficient jobs in this city that every student could get a well-paying job off campus if they wanted to and I challenge the university to find professional employees for the jobs done presently by students at the pay-rate given presently to students.

A California transplant

On being a transplanted Californian I feel I have some first hand knowledge of a problem facing UNR. That problem being the medical school.

On arriving in Reno I was told by the Director of Student Affairs and the Director of Admissions that I had no chance of ever gaining admission to the school despite a high GPA and test scores. Was this person fooled? All I had to do was to become a graduate student and to work at the medical school. It seems that the professors at the school can in a short period of time transfer otherwise undesirable ex-Californians into promising medical students. The same Director of Admissions should be aware of my story for he is part of this story. Of course he is not alone! Professors' wives and Nevadans gain by working there too.

Is this the way the people of Nevada want their future medical doctors selected? How can this be fair to the struggling pre-meds at UNR? Can or will something ever be done to rectify this problem? I'm bringing it into the open and you, the people of Nevada, can decide what to do. It's back to California for me. Don't blow it Nevada, it's your health.
