

Regents to appoint new chancellor

The appointment of a chancellor for the University of Nevada System is the main item on the agenda for the Board of Regents meeting Friday in Las Vegas.

It is expected that acting chancellor Donald Baepler, who is also UNLV president, will be named as the permanent chancellor. Baepler has been acting chancellor since September when Neil Humphrey resigned to take another position.

The other candidates are John Barnes, former president of Boise State University, and Edward Jackubauskas, academic vice president at the University of Wyoming.

The board will be acting on the recommendation of its ad hoc chancellor selection committee, which will meet on Thursday afternoon.

If Baepler is appointed chancellor, an acting president for UNLV will be named at the Friday meeting. A group of faculty and administrators will probably meet Thursday to make a recommendation should Baepler be appointed. The person many expect to be named is Brock Dixon, UNLV vice president for administration.

The board will also designate the persons who will receive the Distinguished Nevadans awards at the commencement exercises at UNR and UNLV in May.

The list of nominees so far has not been made available to members of the press.

A set of budget parameters for the preparation of the 1979-1981 budgets will be before the board for approval. If these parameters are also adopted by the state budget office and the legislature, it could mean an infusion of new money to the system.

The major change in budget guidelines was approved at the last board meeting. The full-time equivalent student will now be classified as 30 credits per year for an undergraduate and 16 for a graduate student. This is a decrease of two credits per student in each category.

The faculty-student ratio to be used would be 18-to-1 at the two universities and 22-to-1 at the community colleges. The nursing programs would be staffed at the rate of seven and a half to one and the medical school would be three and a half to one.

The board will be asked to approve a proposal from UNR to establish a Job Corps facility at the Stead Campus. The facility would be managed by a private contractor and funded by the U.S. Department of Labor.

The university would use faculty and students from a number of departments to help in a number of areas. The center would work with about 600 youths at a time and would provide nearly $4 million a year to the Reno area.

The federal government would also spend about $1 million to improve the Stead facility and would maintain it. The proposal has been endorsed by the UNR Faculty Senate.

The board will hear two reports, both of which could cause some discussion from members. At the request of regent Lilly Fong of Las Vegas, Scott Lorenz, student body president at UNLV, will give a report on the proposed construction of a rebel statue on that campus. Fong was critical of the plan at the January board meeting.

There will also be a report on a report from the NCAA investigative committee of the UNLV University Senate. The report, in essence, substantiated one of the charges made by the NCAA against the university. Regent Chris Karamanos of Las Vegas was highly critical of the report at the January meeting.

The board is scheduled to approve promotion and award tenure to a large number of faculty throughout the system. From UNR, there are 29 faculty members scheduled for promotion and 23 to be awarded tenure.

Style marks presidential candidates

DON LaPLANTE

The difference between a Heidi Waterman administration and a Gregory Neuweiler administration may well be one of style and emphasis in addition to differences on some major issues.

Waterman, a 20-year-old junior in political science came in first in last week's primary. Her opponent in the general election will be 30-year old Neuweiler, a junior in finance. Both served in the ASUN Senate this year.

Waterman said the major difference she saw between herself and Neuweiler would be her emphasis on working with members of the legislature along with state and local politicians.

"I would be more politically involved with more community interaction. I don't think he'd touch my library, athletic funding or bicycle program. I think I'd generate a little more enthusiasm. I was really inspired by Ralph Nader and all of his goodies," she said.

Neuweiler said he thought student government would run a lot smoother if he is elected. He said Waterman has been in the minority on a number of votes this year in the senate and might be a signal of what would happen if she is elected.

"In a Waterman administration there would probably be more vetoes than mine would offer. I think I could work easier with the other executive officers such as Dave Ritch (who is running unopposed for activities vice president) and (Mark) Elston or (Jon) Knorpp (both candidates for vice president of finance and publications)," Neuweiler said.

One of Waterman's major platforms has been to work for changes in athletic funding. She said her proposal was not anti-football or basketball, but in favor of what are thought of as the minor sports.

"I'm not for taking money from football and basketball. I want to get more money from the state legislature for the other sports. I also want to look into other alternatives to get more money for the minor sports. For groups like the men's and women's ski teams they pile their people into two vans and a lot of the money comes from their own pockets," Waterman said.

Neuweiler said he really doesn't think there is much the ASUN president can do about the priorities of the athletic departments. He said he doesn't think the football and basketball programs get too much money.

The major plank in Neuweiler's program has been to try to restore the respect of the Board of Regents for the students, even though he isn't sure the regents have ever respected the students.

"I'd come across as a concerned president in a forceful and articulate manner. I'd have to get them to listen. I'd also let the students know what I was saying to the regents," he said.

Waterman said she would work to increase the collection in the Getchell Library by lobbying before the state legislature.

"We have only about 75 percent of the necessary books for a school our size. We fall even further behind every year. We really have to get some more funding for the library," Waterman said.

One of Neuweiler's planks is to try to improve the conditions in food services. He said he knows the university will accept to SAGA food service again when the contract comes up if it is the lowest bidder.

He said when the contract does come up he would have a list of complaints about the food service along with some ideas and suggestions from students.

Neuweiler said he is also concerned about the dorm conditions after campaigning in the dorms.

"The conditions in White Pine Hall are terrible. I would like to take the regents through there and see if we can't get some money to clean them up," he said.

Among Waterman's ideas are to try to use work-study students to do some of the research and take care of some of the detail work.

"I think one of the problems of past presidents has been that they have taken it all upon their own shoulders. I would look into the possibility utilizing the RIO (Research and Investigations Officer) to look into some of these things like the bicycling program and increasing library hours," Waterman said.

Waterman said she believed she had a good chance to win in the general election, although she knew she had a lot of hard work to do to make it.

She thinks she did well in the primary in the sororities, the dorms and with the independents, especially the more liberal ones. She also expects to do well with the arts and science students in the general election.

Neuweiler said he thought he would get a good portion of the votes that went to Mike Cirac in the primary, especially the Greek votes. He thought he would also get good support from the College of Business Administration, and from athletes.

"The Greeks normally come out and vote. I think I can offer them more through my experiences and they would shift more to me," he said.

No skeletons from the closet

Friday morning in Las Vegas the Board of Regents of the University of Nevada System will choose a new chancellor. In all likelihood the choice will be Acting Chancellor Donald Baepler. We should know the pick after the selection committee meets to make its recommendation Thursday, but so far no one has stepped forward to dispute the probable appointment of Baepler.

For those who have never been quite sure what a chancellor is, he is the chief administrator of the university system. He directs the operations of two universities, three community colleges and the Desert Research Institute. His is the top appointed position in Nevada's system of higher education.

The process that will end on Friday began last August when then-Chancellor Neil Humphrey resigned to become president of the University of Alaska, a much-larger university system the head of which receives considerable better remuneration for his work. In the time it has taken to find his successor, Humphrey arrived and departed Alaska, stopped in Reno for a rather turbulent visit, and has since moved on again.

From the beginning Baepler has been a prime candidate for the office. Once he got settled into his Reno office he found that he liked the job and stopped protesting rumors that he would be appointed. When the regents were finally convinced that their hero, Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, was not interested in the position, Baepler quickly became the applicant who other candidates were compared to, and he usually came out on top.

It will remain to be seen how well Baepler can handle the permanent job. He has a difficult job ahead of him, and we wish him well. (Of course, if someone else is appointed there will be a very red face on this page in our next issue.) Next year is a legislative year in Nevada and that means that the budget will come up for approval by a group of people not known to be generous with higher education in the state.

The new chancellor may also find many surprises lurking in the shadows. Chancellor Humphrey was treated to the sight of local businessmen going to the legislature to oppose the university budget because some members of the faculty (and their families) were opposing a sewer-bond issue. Humphrey did not hesitate to put them in their places, and we hope Baepler will be willing to take the same steps when necessary to guarantee the future of the university.

The selection process taught us a valuable lesson, however. The regents managed to conduct their search in an extremely open manner. Certainly they weren't always happy about the prospect, but they eventually resigned themselves to having the press looking over their shoulders.

At the same time the press proved it could look over shoulders in a responsible manner. There were no disasters; no candidates were smeared; and no skeletons were dragged from any closets (and we certainly hope we didn't miss any good ones).

It demonstrated clearly that the public can be kept informed about what their elected officials are up to and what sort of people are being appointed to high government offices. There is no reason to keep the public in the dark while a selection process is going on. We hope that the people charged with finding a president for UNR keep that in mind.

To the Editor

The true qualifications

The Sagebrush has chosen not to endorse either of the candidates for ASUN president. We feel so strongly that you, the students have the right to the best representation possible we are going to let our personal feelings be known. Student apathy towards ASUN elections has again reached epidemic proportions this year. We feel that because of this apathy and little or no controversy in ASUN government few people are informed regarding the true qualifications of the ASUN presidential candidates.

One of the candidates has worked tirelessly for what he believed to be your best interests. He has worked hard for you in areas such as grade appeals, teacher-course evaluations, and finance control board projects concerned with ASUN investment alternatives. We urge you to compare the two candidates and we think you will agree that Greg Neuweiler is the person you want to represent our student body in the coming year.

The decision is yours

The General Election for ASUN offices will take place on Wednesday and Thursday. A year ago I ran in this race and won a seat on the Senate. I have served this last year with both the candidates for ASUN President, Gregory Neuweiler and Heidi Waterman. As senators, both of them had basically the same responsibilities and requirements to fulfill. However, when deciding which one of these people you want to continue serving you as chief executive, I feel that you should take into consideration how well they have served you in the last year and how well they have prepared themselves to assume this position.

Much of the president's duties directly involve the financial arrangements of ASUN. Greg has prepared himself for this by sitting on the Finance Control Board, Investments Committee, and Program and Budget. Heidi has not been involved in any of the financially oriented boards or committees.

The president is also the spokesman of ASUN and must be able to command the respect of the Board of Regents. To this end, Greg has attended many of the meetings of the board and become familiar with their procedures.

Each senator is required to sit on one board (Activities, Finance Control, or Publications) and one committee, in addition to the Senate. Heidi sat on the Activities Board and the Academic Affairs Committee. Greg, in comparison, sat on Finance Control Board, Program and Budget, the Investments Committee, and was chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee.

In the end, the decision is yours. You as voters must decide whether to place your trust in the candidate with a background of hard work and involvement or in the candidate who has a record of minimal involvement and participation.

Appalling tunnel vision

I was appalled by the tunnel vision displayed by Mr. Michael Crofoot in the "No More Nukes" article of March 10. He wants to "...make the nuclear issue a dead one. This year. Right now." What does he propose, that we this year set out to conquer developing nations whose choice of an energy source for the future will be nuclear? That we burn the physics journals? That we allow our nuclear technology to lag to the point where we must purchase radioisotopes for medicine and other research from other nations, or ban them completely? What do you think is nuclear waste, Mr. Crofoot?

Is material containing 70 times the potential electrical energy as is generated in the first light-water cycle really waste? It is only if we decide to halt development

Reorganization OK'D at USUNS meeting

A major reorganization for the United Students of the University of Nevada System (USUNS) was approved by the group at a meeting on Saturday in Reno.

Presently, four delegates from each of the six schools in the system meet four times a year. Under the new plan, there would be only one general meeting a year.

A new group called the USUNS Regents Advisory Council would be established and would consist of two persons from each school, one of which would be the student body president. The group would meet before every Board of Regents meeting to take positions on matters before the board and to set general policy.

The one general meeting of the year would be held in the summer. The delegates then would select a USUNS president, directors for the Nevada Student Lobby and assist in setting general policy goals.

The reorganization proposal was made by ASUN President John McCaskill. He has said the problem with USUNS this year has been with the structure that did not allow for input on important policy issues because it did not meet often enough.

Under the new structure, there will be 10 meetings each year of the advisory council. Besides the president, there will be a president pro-tem and a treasurer. Both of those will be selected by the members of the advisory council from among themselves.

Before the new constitution becomes effective, it will require the approval of the senates at four of the six schools in the system along with approval from the Board of Regents.

There were also amendments to the present constitution considered. Three were approved and one was rejected. Amendments allowing for the USUNS president to veto committee actions, prohibiting proxy votes on constitutional amendments, and establishing what constitutes inactive status in USUNS, all were approved overwhelmingly.

The one defeated amendment would have required a school of inactive status to be voted back in by a two-thirds vote. A number of delegates spoke against it saying membership in USUNS was a right and not a privilege and there should be no barriers to prevent a school that has left from coming back.

In December, Western Nevada Community College—South (Carson City) withdrew from the organization saying the organization was doing nothing and was a waste of time. Two delegates from the school attended the final session but abstained on all matters.

On the vote on the final amendment, there was not a single "yes" vote. There were 11 "no" votes and seven abstentions.

Constitution change Revision considered

DON LaPLANTE

Changes in the recall and amendment provisions and the combination of two boards into one are the major changes in the ASUN constitution in front of the students for approval in the general election tomorrow and Thursday.

The change in the recall provision was designed to make it somewhat easier to recall senators and officers. However, the change won't make it very much easier. Under the present constitution, a recall petition requires the signature of 50 percent of the students who actually voted in the election for the person to be put before the voters.

The problem with the present constitution is that many of the people who actually voted may not be in school or would be very hard to find. The new document changes the provision to 50 percent of the number of people in the college for senators and 50 percent of the university for the president and vice presidents.

There has never been a recall under either of the last two constitutions, and the changes should not make it much easier.

The new amendment procedure would make it significantly easier for changes to be made. The old constitution required approval by two-thirds of those voting in the election providing at least 25 percent of the students vote. The provision for having 25 percent of the students vote has been eliminated from the new document. Only once in the last eight years has there been a 25 percent turnout.

The Program and Budget Committee and the Interim Finance Committee will be merged into one in the new constitution. This is really a name change since both committees were composed of the same members. One operates to appropriate funds to the other boards and then the other takes over.

In the new constitution, all of the duties of the bodies will remain the same, but there will be only one name, the Program and Budget committee.

Among the other changes in substance are the addition of a section prohibiting any senator working on any of the student publications from serving on the Publications Board. The ASUN President's veto power has been changed to allow it to be overridden by two-thirds of those present and voting rather than the present two-thirds of the senate. This would reduce the number of votes needed to override if some of the senate members are absent.

There is the addition of a section that allows the senate to censure a member by a majority vote and expel with a two-thirds vote for improper conduct.

There are also sections that specify Roberts Rules of Order as the parliamentary guide for ASUN and one that specifically allows the various board to make their own bylaws.

The other changes in the document are basically wording changes to clarify sections.

If approved by the students at the election, it will be before the Board of Regents for approval on Friday. If approved by the students and the regents, it will go into effect when the new officers take over on April 12.

Moment of decision for ASUN

DON LaPLANTE

Heidi Waterman and Gregory Neuweiler will be fighting it out in the general election tomorrow and Thursday for the right to be ASUN President next year.

In the primary election, Waterman, a junior in political science received 354 votes, while Neuweiler, a junior in finance received 253. Mike Cirac, a junior in political science, was cut from the field with 173 votes. All three were members of the ASUN Senate this year.

In the race for vice president for finance and publications, Mark Elston, a junior in accounting and a member of Phi Delta Theta, is running against Jon Knorpp, a junior in managerial science and a Sigma Nu.

ASUN Senate President Dave Ritch is running unopposed for vice president of activities. He is a junior in political science and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. He has served in the senate for two years.

There are races for all of the senate seats, except for home economics, where Liz Morrow, a freshman in fashion merchandising, is running unopposed.

In the agriculture race for two seats, the primary election cut the field to four. Those still in the running are Don Kennedy, an incumbent and a senior in plant, soil and water, (42 votes in the primary); Denise Miller, a senior in agricultural economics (33); Butch Ricci, a junior in agricultural economics and a member of Phi Delta Theta (22); and Mike Surber, a junior in range management (20).

In arts and science, where there was no primary, there are now nine candidates for six seats. Two candidates have withdrawn from the race. Those still running are Reese V. Bostwick, a freshman in political science and a Sigma Nu; Elizabeth R. Contri, a sophomore in speech communication and a Tri Delt; Matt Huntley, a sophomore in biology; Chuck Jeannes, a sophomore in pre-law and a member of Alpha Tau Omega.

Greg McKenzie, a senior in speech communication; Ron Miller, a junior in political science; Frank Ponticello, a senior in history; Rich Poore, a junior in biology and a Sigma Nu; and Cory Martin Williams, an undeclared freshman and a Sigma Nu.

In business administration, eight candidates survived the primary to compete for four seats. Those still in the race are Kirk Schumacher, a junior in managerial sciences and a Sigma Nu (111 votes); Scott Koepf, a sophomore in managerial sciences (94); Stan Marks, a junior in accounting and a Sigma Nu (94).

Mike Pacini, a sophomore in accounting (90); Cliff Young, a sophomore in pre-law (62); Steve Mack, a sophomore in business (60); Steve Hill, a sophomore in business economics and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon (56); and Phillip Pacheco, a sophomore in accounting and a member of Alpha Tau Omega (27).

In education, three persons have filed for the two seats. Kevin Melcher, a senior in physical education and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, is running for his third term in the senate. Al Babb, a sophomore in biology and a member of Sigma Nu, and Peg Nelson, a junior in physical education, are also running for the seats.

In engineering, the field of four was cut in half in a race for only one seat. If the primary election figures hold up Pat Fritchel, a senior in civil engineering, should win the race easily. He received 55 of the 84 votes cast. His opponent in the general election is Shawn Casey, a junior in mechanical engineering, who received 13 votes.

There are three candidates for the two medical science seats. Curt Brown, a junior and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Edo Eissmann, a senior, and Nick Furchner, a junior and a member of Sigma Nu, are running.

In mines, Naomi Smith, a senior in geology (28 votes) and Dean Hunt, a junior in chemical engineering (20 votes) made it through the primary election for the one seat available.

In nursing, Denise Drakulich and Terry Weldin, both juniors, are running for the single seat.

Voting in the election will take place tomorrow and Thursday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the lounge of the Jot Travis Union. A candidate night will be held this evening at 8 p.m. in the lounge of Nye Hall.

Results from the election will be counted by computer on Thursday evening and results should be available shortly after the polls close. The results will be printed in Friday's edition of the Sagebrush.

of technology to recycle spent fuel. As I see it the high-level waste is not nearly as problematical as low-level material, due to volume considerations. It is unfortunate that bomb-induced paranoia has so clouded the public opinion of nuclear energy as a source of electrical power. Until we stop equating bombs with power plants there can be no rationality. Remember, we can halt the spread of nuclear power in the U.S. by public pressure, but we cannot direct the rest of the world to do likewise.

Please reconsider your own opinions in the light of these comments, Mr. Crofoot, and you may find yourself still anti-bomb but not still totally anti-nuclear.

A crippling disease

I am writing this in response to Marc Cardinali's letter to the editor of the March 10 Sagebrush issue voicing his complaint against Associated Women Student's Council at UNR and their annual Bridal Fair.

I happen to be an officer on AWS Council, which is supposed to represent all women students on the UNR campus. This organization has been in effect at UNR for more than 25 years, and for all those years we have been dealing with the same crippling disease called apathy. Almost every woman on this campus would seem to have it. What can we do when every woman—who is automatically a member of AWS upon entering UNR—could give a damn about what AWS can do for them if shown the interest?

So, Marc, in the future, don't get down on us until you're a little more informed. Instead, grab the arm of any woman student who passes your way, and I can almost guarantee she doesn't care if we propose the changes you suggest or not!

Recently, AWS sponsored Women's Week at UNR to try to diversify our activities. I was chairperson for these events and actually, you are not the first person to question my choice of a varied program. There were others who wrote obscene little notes on all my posters and flyers about my ridiculous program that didn't meet the needs of all women.

It's about time you people know something since you never bother to ask why, but just rant and rave first.

I spent two months planning Women's Week and then another week making last minute changes. Before this, however, I took a survey to find out what to include in the program. You are right about one thing. I know I want a career as well as the traditional wife and mother role, but I can't speak for everyone else. Do you know that as a result of this survey, only 20 percent of our women students responded; and since they were the only ones to let us know of their interests, our program was made up of their requests for events: hair styling, skin care, rape, establishing credit, birth control, breast cancer, self-defense, CPR, women's changing role seminar. We still had a poor turnout. The most we had at any one event was 10, except the hair-styling demonstration, which pulled 25.

It couldn't have been the publicity. We had posters and flyers up in every building on campus, and all the dorms and sororities. Tad Dunbar did a couple of spots for us on the news. Terrie Nault and Beth Morgan took care of the radio and newspaper coverage for us. Our AWS appeared on "Nevada Weekly."

Marc, you tell me what the problem is, for we, too, are aware there is one.

In regard to your put-down on the Bridal Fair, the main reason we continue to have it each year is that it has been a tradition since AWS has been in existence. It also happens to get the best turnout of anything we do. This last Saturday 65 women were in attendance, and in the past years we've had over 100. With that kind of turnout there must be some women out there who still want to maintain the traditional role of wife and mother; and as long as that interest exists, we will continue to cater to them as well as the liberated women. Last year we sponsored an ERA Forum with Margie Foote, Mary Gojak, and Barbara Weinburg. We had a pretty good response, but there should have been more if this interest you say is there, Marc. At the time ERA was the big issue in the Nevada Legislature.

It's fine and dandy to say free the women to pursue their own goals, Marc, but what if they don't want to be

Marc, why don't you spend your efforts starting an AMS (Associated Men Students), and quit wasting your time speaking for the women if they can't even come to us themselves to tell us what they want, and also guarantee they'll show up if we present them.

Presently, AWS Council consists of only 10 active representatives. I have sent letters to the presidents of over 50 organizations and living groups asking them to send a representative. We'll see what the response is. So far we have never had a dorm rep and I asked a dorm officer about this. He replied, "Well, gee, Cheryl, you know how it is; we don't have any girls here that want to get into that kind of stuff (no time)."

Sorry, but no, I DON'T KNOW HOW IT IS!

Chewing the fat

Dear Jock Stud:

Perhaps you should take a hint from your token GDI friend concerning subtlety when encountering women. If a young gentleman desires a female, it is probable that he will assess her feelings for him before accosting her. It is much more greatly appreciated if a man attempts to understand a woman intellectually before deciding to form a search for her tonsils, not to mention other parts of her anatomy. If a GDI wants to date a girl he usually asks her out—dancing, a movie, a dinner. If a Frat man wishes to attack a girl, he invites her to a fraternity party. By the time she arrives, he's blitzed. He proceeds to ply her with Spodie-Odies and other disguised weapons, and with his bro's behind him, his courage liquor enduced and on home territory he makes his move. Not cool.

As far as going home weekends, I see no harm in it. How do you know the drive home is boring? Do you drive home every weekend to Winnemucca? Perhaps his idea of fun is family and friends instead of drinking and carousing; or maybe you are jealous that he has family and friends to go home to.

Dorm guys shy and afraid? Not by a country mile. Something tells me you made that paragraph up all by yourself. Does "chewing the fat," or a normal conversation mean dissatisfaction? Yes, I agree, dorm men do have a greater vocabulary, more topics of conversation and an easier talking style than most Frat men. You see, they developed something besides alcoholism. Mundane? Perhaps superficially, but I can't imagine anyone with a name like that being anything but. You see, even women know that they should not be the sole content in men's lives. Perhaps you should find that out.

Yes, girls do talk about Frat parties and going to Greek dances . . . but you should hear what they say. The poor GDI guy cried because you're so misguided and no one likes to see a friend, greek or otherwise, in your condition. I almost cried when I read your letter. Then, I too went home for a weekend because I wanted to thank my family for loving me and making me the GDI that I am.

But, dear Jock, do not give up hope. Therapy works wonders, and may even make you man enough to move back into the real life of a dorm instead of hiding out in a fraternity. God help you—I think you need all the help you can get.

Automotive defense

Defensive driving, a refresher course on automobile safety, will be held 8 a.m. to noon, March 14-15, at UNR.

Pat Fladager, co-instructor, said the course is not instructional "behind the wheel" training on how to drive.

"Our major goal is to create a change in driving attitudes and to make people more aware of their responsibilities as drivers," Fladager said.

The course uses instructional aides, such as films and booklets, provided by the National Safety Council.

The refresher course will be held in the Fleischmann Atmospherium/Planetarium auditorium and is free of charge. Defensive driving is open to all interested people but has special benefits to some.

The American Association of Retired Persons has authorized an auto insurance discount to all senior citizens who take the refresher course each year.

University employees are required to take the course before they are permitted to drive state owned vehicles. Employees of other state agencies are also encouraged to take the course.

For information on registration and course content, contact Gertrude Cook, Personnel Development Program, UNR.

Expectations

A reception will be held from 3:15 to 4 p.m. today for the leading candidate for chancellor of the University of Nevada System. Donald Baepler, the acting chancellor and UNLV president, will meet with members of the university community at the Center for Religion and Life.

He will also be interviewed today and Wednesday by members of the Board of Regents and faculty, student and alumni representatives.

It is expected that Baepler will be named chancellor at the meeting of the board on Friday in Las Vegas.

Dylan Thomas at RLT

The Reno Little Theatre will be presenting Dylan Thomas' "Under Milk Wood," March 17, 18, 19, 24 and 25. The play is Thomas' poetic peek at one day in a small Welsh fishing village. Curtain time is 8 p.m. and seating is limited to 100 persons per performance.

Tickets cost $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children and senior citizens. Call 329-0661 for reservations.

Don't travel... work!

The Council in International Educational Exchange is sponsoring the tenth "Work in Europe" summer program this year with opportunities to work in Ireland, Great Britain and France. Students must find their own jobs with the CIEE helping to eliminate the red tape of finding work abroad.

In France, students may work during the summer; in Great Britain, work is available for up to six months during the entire year and Ireland puts a four month limit on workers from abroad.

The jobs are usually unskilled such as factory work, maids and sales. Salaries are generally low but usually enough to pay for room and board.

To qualify for CIEE's program, students must be between 18 and 30 years old and able to prove their student status. In order to work in France, students must speak and understand French. For information and forms, write CIEE, Dept. PR-PR-A, 777 U.N. Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Interested in law?

The ASUN is currently looking for a student to administer its newly-formed legal information and referral service, scheduled to move into operation in late March.

Interested students should be undergraduates of upper-class status and have a 2.0 GPA, and be able to devote two hours a day Monday through Friday. Some legal background will help, but is not required.

Contact Peggy Martin in the ASUN office for details.

Talent over Bengston

Nye Hall's talent show held on March 10, was won by Phyllis Hamlin. She played a medley of Scott Joplin songs on the piano.

Christopher Winslow, vice president of Nye Hall, said he felt the show was a success.

"Although we had to compete with 'The Great Bengston' for an audience, approximately 100 people attended the show."

In second place was John Carr who played the classical guitar. Third place went to Carolyn Gorham who performed the soliloquies "Trouble" from "The Music Man" and "Jabberwalk" by Lewis Carroll.

Hamlin won $30, Carr won $20 and Gorham won $10.

Reorganized rescue

An advance ticket campaign for next year's Performing Artist's Series will begin this month.

"We usually prepare our campaign during the summer," said Pat Thomas, publicity director for the Public Occasions Board, "but then students and faculty miss out because school's not in session."

This year, flyers telling of next series will be distributed at the last two concerts: The Danzi Woodwind Quintet, March 28, and the Zoregos Performing Company, modern dance, April 1.

Five concerts are scheduled for next year. The Prague Quartet from Czechoslovakia will start the season, Oct. 29. Their repertoire includes classical and romantic music featuring the composers Haydn, Beethoven and Mozart.

The Aulos Ensemble is scheduled to perform next Nov. 21. The group plays both original instruments of the baroque period and exact historical replicas of the era.

Track team 'terrible' as win string snapped

DAVE YEARY

BOISE, Ida.—"Terrible" was the way coach Jack Cook described Saturday's track meet with the Boise State Broncos. UNR lost the meet 89½-to-63½, snapping the Pack's 24-meet victory streak.

Before the team left Reno, it was learned that star sprinter and long jumper Neal McIntyre would not make the trip because of a sprained ankle he suffered during the practice earlier in the week. This put a lot of pressure on sprinter Cyril Lewis and long jumper Lara Welander. It also crippled UNR's chances in the long jump and the mile relay.

Cook had hoped for bad weather in Boise, since UNR runs better in poor conditions. Boise proved last week in an all-comers meet that it has problems with inclement conditions. Instead, the weather was beautiful, with temperatures in the mid 50s.

In the first event of the day, UNR's Rudy Munoz won the steeple chase with a meet record time of 9:25.91, almost three seconds better than the previous mark.

Then came one of the most pivotal events, the 440-yard relay. UNR's team consisted of Lewis, Noah Levingston, Dave Corthell and Jeff Jones. Jones, running the second leg of the relay, injured a hamstring and was through for the day. Even with most of the field events still to go, things were not looking good for the Pack.

Providing the most drama was the 1500 meter run or the metric mile. This was the event that would pit UNR's Tom Wysocki against Boise's Steve Collier.

The race started with UNR's Jim Landaros setting a quick pace, with Wysocki and Collier about 10 yards behind. After about two laps Wysocki broke in front, followed by Collier. As they neared the final turn, Collier moved into the lead, and it appeared that Wysocki might be running out of gas. Going into the final 100 yards, Wysocki sped up, finishing a full second ahead of Collier, while setting a new meet and Bronco Stadium record of 3:51.13.

In Wysocki's other event, the 500 meters, he beat the rest of the field by over 200 yards. "I felt good," Wysocki said. "I like the stadium here. It was a fun meet even though we lost. The distance runners are really super here."

In the field events, which were the demise of the team, UNR was victorious in only two events—the javelin and the high jump, which Boise had no competitors in. Jan Mikellson set a new meet record in the javelin with a distance of 237 feet, 10 inches. In the high jump, Billie Byrd set a new meet record at 6 feet, 9 inches. Byrd made three unsuccessful attempts at 7 feet.

The meet was similar to the meet between the two teams four years ago. UNR entered that meet with 34 straight wins, before being stopped by the Broncos. That was also held at Bronco Stadium, where UNR has never won.

They were hurt without McIntyre," Boise coach Ed Jacoby said. "And in a dual meet the home team does have an advantage. They ran well, but they didn't have the depth we've got."

UNR leads the series with Boise 7-2, with both teams never winning on the road. Next year the meet will move back to Mackay Stadium.

This week Cook will try to regroup the team and prepare for the Hayward Decathlon next weekend.

RATIGAN AWARDED

RON ELLIS

UNR women's basketball player Regina Ratigan was selected along with WNCC cager Maurice Townsell as co-athletes of the month (February) by the Sierra Nevada Sportswriters and Broadcasting Association last week.

"I don't particularly like individual awards. But I am honored and excited about being chosen," said Ratigan. "I just wish it could have been a team award."

The 5-5 sophomore from Las Vegas led the Wolf Pack in scoring during February with a 15.8 average, including a single-game record of 34 points against Humboldt State. She connected on 55 percent of her field goal attempts despite shooting mostly 15-20 foot jump shots.

According to assistant coach Cindee Metzger, this was the first time a woman basketball player from UNR had been selected.

"I think it's tremendous. Regina played great for us all season and is deserving of the honor," said Metzger.

Tennis likes road trip

DAVE YEARY

The UNR tennis team got one of its most gratifying wins of the season last weekend by beating West Coast Athletic Conference opponent Santa Clara 6-3 and NCAA Division II No. 4 ranked Hayward 5-3. UNR also won by default over the University of the Pacific on Sunday.

UNR's record is now 10-to-1 overall, 3-to-1 in conference. Even though unbeaten in the WCAC, Fairman is reluctant to make his team the favorite for the title.

"It all depends on how well we do against Pepperdine," he said. "If we can beat Pepperdine we can win the conference."

The team is starting to get a reputation for good play. Fairman said that at UOP the players couldn't believe UNR had beaten Hayward.

"When we got to UOP they said 'You guys beat Hayward. You mean to tell me your No. 1 player beat Dittmer?' So it was a really good match for us. I believe that if we were in Division II we would be No. 1 in the nation."

The team returns home for five matches this weekend against Boise State and Sonoma on Friday, Idaho and Boise again on Saturday, and Idaho Sunday.

Swimmers place 19th

STEVE MARTARANO

Completing their most successful season in history, the UNR women's swim team compiled a 19th place finish last weekend in the AIAW small college national swim championships at Brenau college in Gainesville, Ga.

"The whole thing was just super, we couldn't have done any better," said an elated coach Jerry Ballew Sunday night. "We didn't realize the competition would be so keen. But it just made the girls perform that much better."

Five Pack swimmers made the All-America team as the UNR squad scored 51 points in the two-day event.

Senior Ann Belikow made her exit from swimming in grand style. The Pack's most outstanding swimmer the last three years placed sixth in the 100-yard breast stroke and fifth in the 200 breast stroke.

"Ann turned in some of her best times since high school," Ballew said. Belikow clocked 1:10.29 in the 100 and 2:31.11 in the 200.

Other swimmers placing included Karen Petterson who finished 15th in the 50 backstroke and Paige Bryant ended 15th in the 50 butterfly. Pam and Patti Gordon both finished in two events. Pam ended 16th in 200 freestyle and 12th in the 1650 freestyle while Patti placed 20th in the 200 freestyle and 21st in the 1650.

Eighty teams participated as Clarion College, the defending national champion, won it again with 294 points. "The competition was not that much lower than major college," Ballew said. "A lot of the times would have been competitive in a major college meet."

For a team that has been in existence only three years, they have made great progress. The team won its first meet ever just last season and then were defeated only once this year. "We'll be stronger next year," Ballew said. "Everybody will be back except for Ann."

With the impressive showing in the nationals, Ballew expects this to help him considerably for recruiting purposes. "We have some prospects in mind," he said. "There are four high school seniors from Reno that could really help us."

Ballew is hindered somewhat with money problems. As of this year, he was allowed only two grants, each one equaling about $600 a year. But that is for in-state only, which obviously restricts his efforts out of state. Besides the money problems, the season was a good one.

"I'm really proud of this year's team," he said. "They've worked hard all year and they've done a lot for the women's program as a whole."

Softball opens with sweep; big weekend ahead

RON ELLIS

The UNR women's softball team successfully kicked off its season Saturday by sweeping a doubleheader from UC-Berkeley. Nevada took the opener 4-2, then crushed the visiting Bears 8-2 in the nightcap.

Both games were played under horrible weather conditions. Rain and sleet caused a 15-minute delay in the first game, and the second game was called after five innings.

"We played in the mud and rain, but we were determined," said Wolf Pack coach Olena Plummer. "We finally gave into the weather after that fifth inning."

The Pack received excellent pitching from sophomores Debbie Flateau and Carlinda Poe. Flateau, 11-2 last season, held Cal hitless for four innings before the rain delay and ended with an eight-hit, nine-strikeout performance. Poe, making her first pitching appearance ever for UNR, limited the Bears to two runs and eight hits to register the victory.

Nevada hitters pounded Cal pitching for 12 runs and 17 hits despite starting four freshmen and three sophomores. Leading the way was centerfielder Sue Williams who was 4-5 and had three RBIs.

"I'm really proud of this team. We played extremely well today. Especially when you consider our inexperience and limited practice time," said Plummer. "Our season looks very promising."

Nevada has two home doubleheaders scheduled for this weekend. They play Stanislaus State at noon Friday and Humboldt State at 11 a.m. Saturday. All home games will be played at Idlewild Park No. 2.

A win would be nice as loss skein hits 10

RON ELLIS

What started out as a promising season for the UNR baseball team has suddenly turned into a nightmare. Nevada dropped three games to St. Mary's College Saturday extending the team's losing streak to 10 games.

First, the Pack lost 8-7 in the bottom of the 12th inning in a game continued from Friday. Then, UNR lost the regularly scheduled doubleheader, 8-2 and 6-4.

"I don't understand it. We didn't play that poorly," said Wolf Pack coach Barry McKinnon. "We just can't get the key hit when we need it."

The defeats dropped Nevada's season record to 5-12 and its Northern California Baseball Association Baseball mark to 2-7.

In Friday's game, the Pack jumped into a 7-2 lead after four innings, but couldn't hold it. The Gaels chipped away at the lead and tied it on a two-run home run in the sixth inning. The two teams battled for five scoreless innings before St. Mary's won the game.

According to McKinnon, starting pitcher Ed Bonine pitched excellently and made only two mistakes in nine innings but they were costly ones. Bonine gave up two home runs which accounted for five of the Gaels' eight runs.

Reliever Mike Scott, who pitched the Pack out of a jam in the ninth inning, gave up one run and two hits in the 12th inning and was charged with the loss.

Nevada's scoring was highlighted by John Anderson's two-run double and Mike Wallace's two doubles and two RBI's.

In Saturday's opener, UNR was hitless until Bill Wallace lashed a double to right-center field in the eighth inning. The Pack did manage to score two runs in the ninth to avert being shut out.

Again, the home run ball proved costly to Nevada. The Gaels jumped out in front 5-0 after three innings because of a grand slam homer off starter Carl Henry.

In the nightcap, UNR had a chance to tie the game in the sixth inning but their three-run rally fell one run short. Then St. Mary's added an insurance run in their half of the inning, and the Pack went down in order in the ninth.

UNR will try to break its losing streak Wednesday at home in a make-up doubleheader against the University of Pacific. The games will start at noon.

"I've got to try something to get us out of this slump," said McKinnon. "I might even pull names out of a hat to get the batting order. It can't possibly be any worse."

Close race for veep

In the race for vice-president of finance and publications, two fraternity men are running a close race. Mark Elston, a junior in finance and a member of Phi Delta Theta is running against Jon Knorpp, a junior in accounting and a member of Sigma Nu.

Elston served this year as a business administration senator and served on the Activities Board. This is Knorpp's first attempt at an ASUN position.

Both are emphasizing similar issues in their campaigns, however, there seem to be some major differences between them.

Both candidates have similar positions on the issue of funding of athletic groups by the Finance Control Board, which the vice president would chair.

Knorpp said he wishes to set up a program of matching funds with the Intercollegiate Athletics Department to increase the monies available to the athletic groups and at the same time increase the amount of funding that will be available from the board to academic groups. Knorpp said he has talked with Athletic Director Dick Trachok and he is receptive to the idea.

Elston said also he favors the idea of trying to work out a program of matching funds so there will be more funds available for other student groups, although he has not talked personally with Trachok about the matter.

One of Knorpp's main platforms is to use the profits that the bookstore will be making in coming years either in investments or to increase ASUN's revenues.

Knorpp said it would have to be decided later whether it would be more beneficial to return excess profits to the student organizations or invest them for future benefits.

Knorpp is urging that the Sagebrush become more self-sufficient by having more advertising in the paper. He said there should be a minimum amount of advertising in the Sagebrush. He said he favors having about 35 percent advertising. (The Sagebrush currently is about 23 percent advertising.)

"The Sagebrush has the greatest opportunity to become more self-sufficient. It is a realistic goal," Knorpp said.

Elston was critical of the minimum advertising proposal saying he believed trying to increase advertising by that much would not be good.

"There is already plenty of advertising in the newspaper. We might want to have a small increase, but not over 10 percent," Elston said.

Both candidates said they supported the goals of freedom of the press and agreed that it was not the position of the vice-president to interfere in the content of the newspaper.

"The control is in the system. The editor should have his freedom. We can make recommendations. We can't force the editor to do anything. I don't see any way of telling the editor what to do," Knorpp said.

"The newspaper should be left to the discretion of the editor. After all, that's what he's hired for. The vice-president should not have much control of publications," Elston said.

There were some differences of the status of the Brushfire, the literary magazine.

Elston said he would like to see the number of editions reduced to probably two a semester, as opposed to the current monthly format. He also said there should only be student work in the publication since it is funded by the students.

He also said it should continue as an insert to the Sagebrush so that it would receive wider distribution.

Knorpp said Brushfire should be more of a student publication, but urged getting some funding from the art and English departments since members of those departments contribute and benefit from the Brushfire.

He called it a good showcase for student literary talent and should come out in the Sagebrush monthly.
