Opinion

We should get law school, Vegas medical

At the time I am writing this editorial the medical school seems to be out of danger. The Washoe Medical Center Board of Trustees is expected to announce tonight that they will now support a residency program at the hospital.

We must assume that strong opposition from area doctors to the medical school still exists. That is understandable. If the facts from Tuesday evening's meeting are correct, Reno has 20 per cent more doctors than the national average. It was also shown that physicians are moving into this area at an increasing rate. Curiously, Las Vegas was shown to be far below the national average.

The recommendation by the Washoe Medical Society to reduce the four-year program back to a two-year reflects the squeeze Reno doctors see happening to their business. They have nothing to fear from students in residency--there is no competition for patients on that level. But studies show that graduates of residency programs tend to stay in cities where they are trained. The impending glut of doctors in this area must ultimately cause strained relations between the medical school and area doctors.

The medical school should be moved to Las Vegas. If it is not, then be prepared for madness of establishing the University of Nevada Law School in a casino dominated town. The people in Vegas have been arguing for years to get their "share" of the state's prestigious schools. Since Reno has a medical school they reason UNLV should have the law school. Never mind about the need for a law school in Nevada, it qualifies as well as the medical school in that respect.

Whether we need it or not the law school is bound to happen. It would be sheer insanity to put it under the influences of Vegas and its casinos. Could you imagine the spectre of casinos providing full rides to pre-law students, over or under the table? That's like asking the wolf to keep an eye on the flock.

If a law school happens it should be here at UNR. The Judicial College is here, the only one of its kind in the nation. The nucleus of a good law library already exists here. Casino influence has been closely watched at the UNR campus and is not as influential in the town.

If it comes down to a trade let's put the medical school where they need doctors and the law school where it can make use of existing facilities.

No humility, Ault

Editor:

Oh, wow. I finally got around to reading the Coaches' Corner in the Dec. 8 Sagebrush during the 4th quarter of the Massachusetts game. Probably a very inopportune time to read Coach Ault's words... "I guarantee you this, we'll win and..." This was, however, a very opportune time to read U. of Mass. Coach Pickett's words... "We feel honored to be playing a team..." Now that's class.

It is unfortunate that we lost the game; Nevada has done so well this year. It is also unfortunate that Coach Ault hasn't tempered his football with humility as well as modesty.

Sincerely,
L. Benoist
Carson City, Nev.

Band efforts good

Editor:

I wish to compliment Dr. Carrico, Dr. Crowley and Mr. Trachok for their efforts to re-establish the University of Nevada Marching Band. While student government (ASUN) support for the Marching Wolfpack has been lacking for a decade, I believe that support does exist in the student body at large. The recent success of the football team has pointed out the keen interest which the local community has in this university and its many activities. A fine marching band of a caliber similar to Mr. Ault's winning team would be a distinct asset to the community and to the University of Nevada. The presence of a field music organization would also be a great adjunct to the Music Department. The department is at present unable to provide undergraduate majors with any practical experience in marching band direction. Since few music majors can hope to find early career work outside the high school band area, experience in marching band work is, I think, essential to their studies.

If funding for a marching band cannot be obtained from the legislature or ASUN, perhaps it could be found in the community itself where a high degree of interest already exists. Since the marching band would certainly participate in parades and other local celebrations, perhaps the Chamber of Commerce and the various hotel-casinos would welcome the opportunity to support it. In any event, the prospect of a continuation of the UNR Marching Band is an exciting one. Messrs. Carrico, Crowley, and Trachok are to be applauded for their efforts.

Sincerely,
Tim Gorelangton

Police time valuable; won't worry about grass

"Police officers in the Reno area don't want to get involved with someone smoking or in possession of a small amount of marijuana," according to Larry Hicks, Washoe County district attorney.

Hicks, speaking before a group of journalism students, said the work load of local police allow them to make only three or four calls a shift.

"Police officers have to make effective use of their time," he said and "search warrants usually take about two hours to obtain." Including surveillance, search and seizure, questioning and bringing a case to trial, a simple marijuana case could cost the taxpayers over $10,000. This, according to Hicks, is detrimental to both the taxpayers and an efficient police force.

Assistant Reno Police Chief James Better indicated that a charge of possessing a small amount of marijuana would be brought against a defendant only when other charges are involved.

Better, who declared that the Reno Police is "not even ahead of the game, but still playing catch up, said the additional new members being allocated to the force would not make such a difference in simple marijuana arrests.

"We're hiring younger people who have grown up with different values. Their attitudes are a lot different than they used to be," Better said. He indicated that when he was a rookie, marijuana was considered the "11th Deadly Sin." He added that "young officers now relate more to their peer groups and feel that marijuana isn't as important as other field work."

Med School is short on funds

Gayle Brooks

There is a shortage of funds for research at the UNR School of Medicine, according to Dr. Ron Reitz of the Biochemistry Department.

The problem is getting sufficient funds for individual research projects. It is necessary for individual research grants from the National Institutes of Health (NIH) to total $200,000 in order to receive automatic funding by the organization.

When the above amount is reached, a floating percentage of the grants awarded is automatically given to the qualifying research program.

Reitz said more and more proposals must be written to NIH. This will increase the chances of getting the funds.

Last year group medical research qualified for a three-year grant from NIH. The biomedical Research and Developmental Grant is awarded to start the development of research at an institution. However, this doesn't contribute to the aim for $200,000. This grant is only to develop the research program.

According to Reitz, "The program was lucky. It got the initial funds for development of research after the first proposal was written." "We wrote a damn good proposal," he added.

Part of the problem with individual grants is sometimes the principal researcher does not receive the funds even though the grants are approved by NIH.

Reitz himself was awarded a grant but failed to receive funding. According to him, "Approval comes, but no funds. That is why we need more and more people writing the proposals. It will increase our chances of getting those funds."

Although it is necessary to have individual grants total $200,000 to get the automatic funding, the underlying goal is to develop broad-based research throughout the Medical School.

To have a good medical school, according to Reitz, you must have good research.

Developing biomedical research benefits the medical students, graduate students and the professors.

"Inter-related programs will come out of good solid research," Reitz added.

Orientation SOS

Sue Lyons

The Orientation Program at UNR is putting out an S.O.S. to meet the rising needs of non-traditional students.

A volunteer Student Orientation Staff (S.O.S.) is being organized to develop ongoing programs to help commuter, mature, handicapped, minority, foreign and graduate students adjust to the university, according to David Hansen, assistant dean of students.

In past years orientation was geared towards initiating traditional freshmen students, usually living on campus, to the school. But Hansen said the program has turned the tide to familiarize all student segments to services specifically available to them.

Due to a drop in total student enrollment, Student Services has had to deal with retaining the present number of students. Many are joining the work force in the Reno area and dropping out of the university, Hansen observed. "Admissions is doing their job," Robert Kinney associate dean of students, said. "Retention is the idea" since the university actually had more new admissions this semester, he explained, but has lost many of its continuing students.

Staff members will be instructed in several training periods during the spring semester to prepare them for the orientation program. "We hope to get the training program as a class in Counseling and Guidance (CAPS)" Hansen said. "But you have to learn to walk before you can run," and orientation is just getting on its feet, he added.

The group of volunteer students will have a coordinator and subcommittees to deal with each type of non-traditional student need.

So far this semester three planning committees have been organized to gather information from their members' departments and organizations for the program. Fifty-four people including 29 student organization representatives, are "really doing their homework" to determine what can be improved in the programming, Hansen said.

This mass of information and suggestions will be presented to an Orientation Coordinating Committee which will begin in February of 1979 to put the ideas into practice on a year-round basis.

Expert panel discussion on gaming

The conference is open to anyone with a research or professional interest in gambling, gaming and its various roles in society, Hughs said.

For information on conference registration, contact UNR's Bureau of Business and Economic Research at 784-6877.

Six experts on Nevada gaming will join UNR's Business College dean for a panel discussion on "The Present Status and Future Trends of Casino Gaming in Northern Nevada."

The discussion is slated for this Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in the Capital Room of Reno's MGM Grand Hotel, and is open to the public.

Panelists include Gov.-elect Robert List, Boomtown president and Regent-elect Robert Cashell, Reno's Cal-Neva Club manager Warren Nelson and MGM Grand president Jack Peiper. Washoe County Commissioner Jean Stoess, who is a member of the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency and former member of Nevada's Gaming Policy Committee, and Gaming Control Board chairman Roger Trouday, will also participate.

UNR's Business College Dean Dr. Richard E. Hughs will act as moderator.

The public presentation kicks off the three-day Fourth Annual Conference on Gambling, hosted by UNR's College of Business Administration and Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

Hughs said the conference is designed as a forum where people with expertise in different areas of gambling and the gaming industry can come together and share their knowledge and views.

He said conference participants will be from the disciplines of business, economics, psychology, psychiatry, sociology, law, social welfare and mathematics and computer sciences. Representatives of Nevada's gaming industry, Nevada and New Jersey casino regulatory agencies, law enforcement agencies and the lottery industry, will also be present.

Thirty-five professional papers are scheduled to be read and seven symposiums planned in a variety of gaming-related topics. These include trends and status of U.S. state lotteries, the compulsive gambler and the law and problems in casino management.

Short Takes

Filing same for you

Even if your parents may claim you as a dependent on their income tax, you must still file under certain conditions, according to Judy Cole, a taxpayer service specialist in the Reno IRS office.

"The filing requirements for a dependent child (or student) are the same as those for any other U.S. citizen or resident. Generally, a dependent child must file an income tax return if he or she had a gross income of $2,950 or more during the tax year. A dependent child who had unearned income of $750 or more must file. Filing is also required if the child had self-employment income of $400 or more."

Cole explained that unearned income includes trust distributions, bank interest, dividends and capital gains. She said that if any of this type of income is reported, it cannot be done on a form 1040A (commonly referred to as a "short form"). A student reporting interest income must do so on a Schedule B which accompanies the 1040 (long form).

Foreign meet

The French, Italian and Spanish Clubs will meet tomorrow, to sing Christmas carols in their respective languages, in the Virginia Street parking lot next to the Student Union Building at 7 p.m. Caroling will follow in Park Lane and Shoppers Square. Everyone is welcome.

Center pot-luck

The Center for Religion and Life will sponsor a pot luck pre-Christmas Dinner from 3 to 10 p.m., on Sunday, Dec. 17. The members of Entitas, a local drug rehabilitation program, will be the special guests.

The party will start at 3 p.m. with music, games, and Christmas tree trimming. The dinner will start at about 5 p.m. Old movies featuring such stars as Laurel and Hardy and Charlie Chaplin will follow.

The public is invited.

Free flight

Sunday marks the 75th anniversary of the Wright Brothers' historic first flight in Kitty Hawk, S.C., and UNR is celebrating that occasion with a free mini-film festival.

Continuous showings of two films are slated for today 1-3 p.m., in Room 103 of the Education Building.

One of the films, "To Fly," is a 27-minute movie produced for the Smithsonian Institute. It is said to be the greatest documentary on flight ever produced. Until recently, it could be seen only at the Smithsonian.

The second film is "In Celebration of Flight."

Commuter corner

The Orientation Program is looking for commuter students to assist with the planning of programs, including participation in the Student Orientation Staff (S.O.S.). Anyone interested or having suggestions should contact David Hansen, assistant dean of students, in room 103 of Thompson Center.

The Counseling and Testing Office is offering an extra period for the ACT on Dec. 22 at 8 a.m. Anyone interested should stop by room 209, TSCC, or call 784-6810 for further information and to reserve a place.

Typewriters are available for student use in room 211, TSCC. Hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m., Monday through Thursday; 8 a.m.-5 p.m., Fridays; 1-5 p.m., Sundays.

The Snack Bar in the Student Union is open from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

Oops!

There is a typographical error in the UNR spring 1979 class schedule.

In the registration schedule on page four under the 9:40 entrance time, the schedule reads AAA-TTT.

That should be corrected to read AAA-ATT. Any students trying to register under the incorrect times will not be admitted.

Sierra has three new scripts

The Sierra Nevada Chapter of the Data Processing Management Association has recently established three new scholarships for UNR students majoring in computer information systems and computer applications, according to Dr. Richard Hughs, dean of UNR's College of Business Administration.

Three awards of $200 each are available to junior and senior students who have maintained at least a B (3.0) grade point average, and have attended UNR for at least one academic year.

The scholarship fund was established in memory of Bill Archer, a longtime Reno resident and head of Harrah's computing center for many years.

Applications may be obtained at the UNR scholarship office.

This week's ski bargain comes to you from the Ski Tech & Rental Shop in Moana West Plaza. They're offering a 15 percent student discount on anything in the store...including George, Mike, Whitey and/or Tom. Check out this place — these men know their stuff.

With the holiday crusher nearly upon us, many of you will be spending most of your ski days in lift lines. No problem. There are a number of ways to avoid these unnecessary delays. You can: (1) Rent a helicopter, or (2) Buy your own ski area.

Understandably, these solutions are not widely used by college students and ski bums. The following are somewhat practical.

If you're a girl, just follow a ski patrolman down the hill. They are usually quite happy to ride up with you. Be careful, however, as many of them are a bit aggressive...and once you're on the lift it's not advisable to jump off.

One of my favorite techniques is to fall in line at the tail end of a ski school class getting into the lift line. Unless the instructor can count (which is rare) or is unusually obervant (which is even rarer), he won't notice the extra pupil.

This week's survival tip deals with handling frost-bits. If any limbs or protruberances are experiencing numbness, have someone with warm hands hold or gently caress the extremity in question. This should remedy the situation, but may lead to complications. Consult "Go To Health" for that kind of advice.

The UNR Ski Team should be hot this year...I just hope Massachusetts isn't in their conference.

Now, a little feelosophy...
Don't hesitate to heed your uncommon senses. Remember, there are no rules to abide by when skiing — you simply make up your own. Four examples:

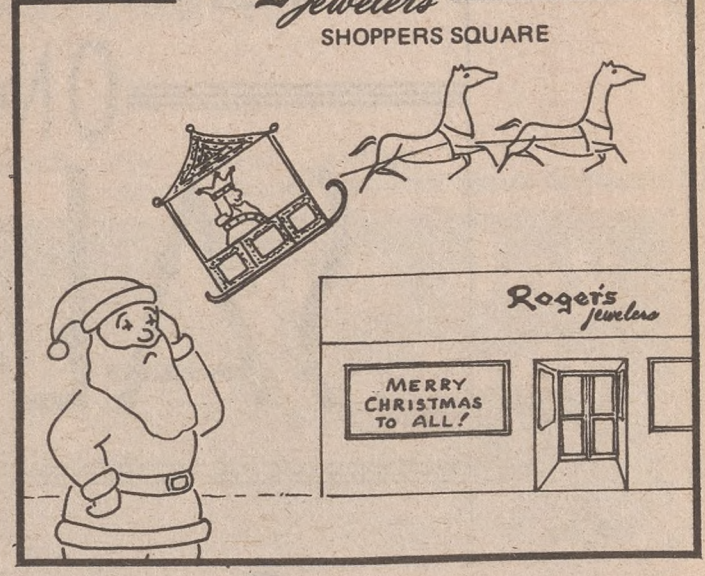

- 1) Never look back.
- 2) Save your tobacco juice for ski instructors.
- 3) Take your clothes off only on sunny days.
- 4) Never jump off a cornice if someone else has already done it. And Finally:

A real ski bum has
Snow for breakfast
Wine for lunch, and Adventure for dinner.

— this week's excerpt from
"The Ski Bum's Guide To Mountain Wildlife."

Happy holidays from Snow Drifts, and remember: Never eat plastic wrapped cafeteria sandwiches, unless you take the plastic off first.

Women can't

Holiday on Ice may have left the Centennial Coliseum, but the UNR women basketball team's shooting was so cold from the floor Tuesday night, the ladies should have been wearing ice skates.

The Wolf Pack women hit only 30 of 97 shots from the field for 31 percent as they dropped their fourth straight game 74-65 to Sacramento State. The Hornets sank the same number of field goals but took 30 less shots. In four home games, including St. Kilda of Australia, the Pack has not been able to shoot better than 35 percent.

Darlene Roque's aggressive offensive rebounding enabled the Pack to take as many as four shots at the hoop each time Reno had the ball, but there seemed to be a lid on the basket.

Coach Cindee Metzger couldn't explain her team's poor shooting, saying only that the "shots did not fall."

Sacramento's Karen Littleton and Jorge Lange were able to find the hoop often and both scored 23 points to lead all scorers. Lange was 7 for 7 from the field in the first half.

Carla Bennett led the Pack in scoring with 18 points. Making her first start, the freshman guard from Hug High was 9 of 20 from the floor, most, of the shots coming from the 15-foot range. She also had 11 rebounds.

Cindy Rock added 16 points and Roque had 14. Roque led all rebounders with 18.

Trailing 41-27 at halftime and 60-44 with nine minutes left in the game, the Pack mounted a comeback and cut the lead to six points twice in the last three minutes. The rally fell short, however, and Reno's season record slipped to 0-4 and 1-7 overall.

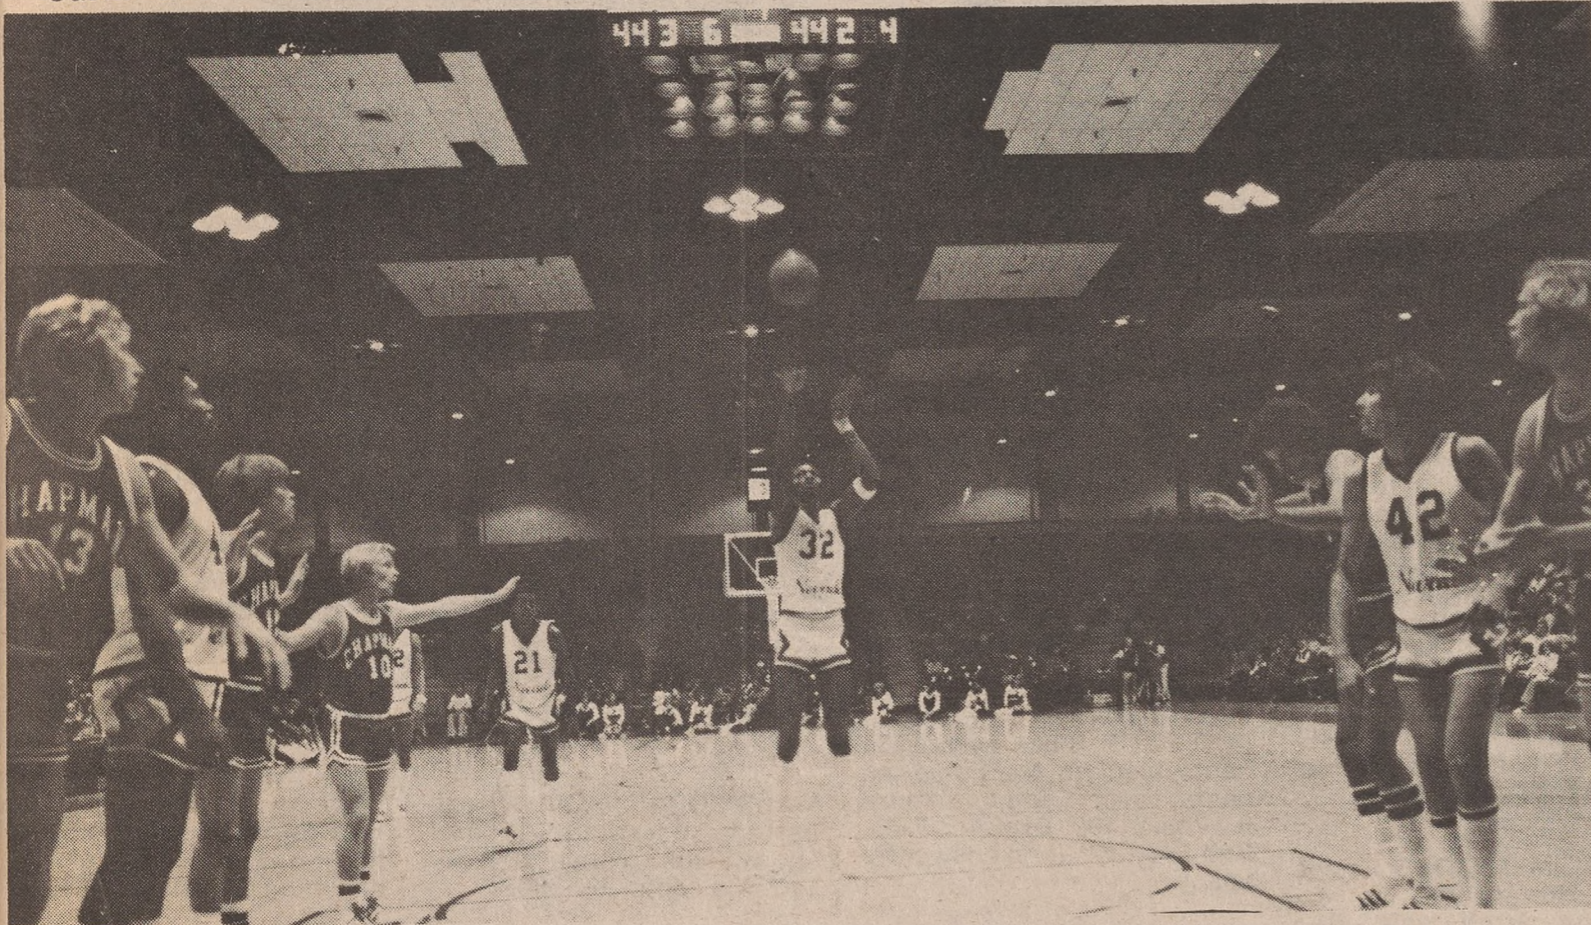

"Our defense just couldn't hold them," said Metzger. "They ran all over us."

Except for the poor shooting, Metzger thinks the team is starting to come around. "We haven't been able to get any kind of momentum," she explained. "We're young and we haven't had the teamwork, but we're improving."

Reno will try to get some momentum and find a hot hand tonight when it takes on Sonoma State at 5:45 in the Coliseum. In the only meeting last year, Reno defeated Sonoma 71-51.

Basketball rolling along

Phil Howard

Break out the calculators! The UNR basketball team is finally hitting full stride and is on the run. And run is exactly what UNR did in its 107-59 romp over Chapman College at the Centennial Coliseum Tuesday night.

In a game that resembled an indoor track meet more than a basketball contest, the UNR dash-and-dunk dozen sprinted up and down the court taking time out only to get the net down when it was hung up on the basket.

Edgar Jones led the Pack in both scoring and rebounding. Jones poured in 23 points and grabbed 14 rebounds. Forward Rusty Owens of Chapman remarked, "Jones is the best center I've ever played against. His dunk is the quickest I've ever seen. You hardly even have time to get your hands up."

Although Jones was spectacular, the real reason for the blowout was the entire Wolf Pack team.

Besides Jones, six other UNR players scored in double figures.

Johnny High and Michael "Fly" Gray both chipped in 16 points, most of them coming on breakaway layups caused resulting from Pack steals.

Junior Steve Hunter dropped in 11 points. Junior college transfer Aaron Cusic added 10 points and five rebounds. Freshman Thaxter "Helicopter" Arterberry dazzled the crowd with 10 points and some spectacular crowd-pleasing play.

Mike Longero ran his streak of double-figure scoring games to three by dumping 10 points against the Runnin' Panthers. Longero was also the Pack's second leading rebounder with seven.

Tuesday's win was the second straight game in which the Pack has scored more than 100 points. Tonight's contest at the Centennial Coliseum with Chico State could further the streak. Chico State (3-3) is 0-2 on the season against WCAC members, losing to USF 77-53 and St. Mary's 69-67.
